LASH ILLINOIS NRA MEASURE

SENATORS ADD 417 MILLION TO NATION'S TAXES

Beat House Group in Spending Spree.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—With "Boost Taxes!" for its war cry, the senate delegation in the conference on the revenue bill today rode roughshod over a dazed and fearful house group and reported out a measure which adds 417 million dollars to the nation's tax load.

Practically the only concession made by the senate conferees was to permit the Couzens 10 per cent flat income tax increase to go back to the house for a vote. On practically every other important senate amendment the house was forced to recede from its original position.

Many members of the house emerged from the secret conference mumbling to themselves and retired to lick their wounds. There was not entire unanimity on the senate side either.

Senator Reed Sarcastic.

Senator David Reed [Rep., Pa.] announced ironically to reporters:

"Well, we've cleaned up everything, including the taxpayer."

Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], chairman of the conference, evaded questions concerning the final vote. It will not be known until tomorow just who refused to sign the report.

There is no doubt, it was said, that the revenue bill will pass both houses in the form in which it emerged tonight, with the Couzens amendment, of course, dependent upon the vote in the house, where, it was reported, it may fail of the necessary majority vote.

Estimated Yield of Taxes.

The estimated added yield of the tax bill, exclusive of the Couzens 10 per cent horizontal increase, follows:

Capital stock tax	$ 95,000,000
Estate tax	90,000,000
Gift tax	6,000,000
Changes in income tax rates	25,000,000
Capital gains and losses	30,000,000
Personal holding companies	20,000,000
Reorganization	10,000,000
Consolidated returns	35,000,000
Partnerships	5,000,000
Administrative changes, gasoline, oil and process	18,000,000
Miscellaneous	20,000,000
Total	$354,000,000
*Administration of depreciation allowances	85,000,000
Grand total	$439,000,000
Deductions:
Soft drinks $5,000,000
Furs 8,000,000
Jewelry 2,000,000
Produce futures 3,000,000
Candy 4,000,000
Total	$ 22,000,000
Net total	$417,000,000

*The treasury is to issue new regulations covering the calculation of depreciation allowances against taxes paid by corporations, etc. The new regulations will tighten present rules to prevent abuses. This tightening is expected to bring the amount shown.

Bad News for Taxpayers.

The report means bad news for the taxpayers and bad news also for those congressmen up for reëlection this year. These unfortunates had bitterly protested the tax increases inserted in the bill by the senate, dreading reprisals by the voter who may use his ballot to revenge himself upon those responsible for the greatly increased tax bills made necessary under the new revenue act.

There was a compromise between the senate and the house on income tax surtaxes in the lower brackets. The house had provided rates of 4 to 18 per cent on incomes ranging between $4,000 and $32,000 yearly. The senate boosted the surtaxes to 5 to 21 per cent on salaries in that range. Under the compromise, the surtaxes will range from 4 to 19 per cent.

This modification meant a loss of 19 million dollars in revenue in comparison with the revenue which would have accrued under the senate amendment.

Estate Taxes Lower.

There was also a slight modification which meant another loss of 5 million dollars in the case of estate taxes. The La Follette amendment in the senate had provided a tax of 1 to 60 per cent on estates totaling from $40,000 to 10 millions and over. The conference agreed to leave alone the tax on estates of $50,000 and up.

But there was no change in the senate amendment providing a tax of one-tenth of one per cent on the capital stock of corporations which adds 95 millions to the tax burden.

This was a "swat the rich" amend-

HOUSE BATTLES "SNOOPING" BY STATE AGENTS

Enacting Clause May Be Cut Out.

Johnson Pessimistic

Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson admits that the NRA is cracking up in several lines. The plan to force a shorter working week has collapsed; the steel code, blamed for monopolistic results, is to be modified, and the NRA penal powers are to be soft pedaled. Gen. Johnson also revealed a score of other problems harassing his command. (Page 9.)

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—The battle against the state NRA bill, which Gov. Horner is trying to force through the legislature, began in earnest today and the early skirmish presaged what will probably be one of the hottest fights ever staged in the capitol.

Although a test of sentiment was postponed until tomorrow, when Republicans will attempt to kill the measure by striking out its enacting clause, today's public hearing served to show that the minority members will fight to the end against what they consider the brain trust's unwarranted invasion of Illinois.

Raise Prohibition Shades.

Shades of the snooping days of prohibition were raised at the hearing and predictions were made that small business men will be browbeaten if the bill becomes law.

On the one hand the slim Democratic majority showed every sign of having been whipped into line by the governor.

On the other the Republicans appeared to be almost united against it. One or two votes either way may decide the first test tomorrow. It has been thought that a vote on striking out the enacting clause would come this evening, but amendments the governor wishes adopted were not ready and it was postponed.

Fear "Stool Pigeons."

The Republican attitude seemed to be summed up this afternoon by Representative Peter C. Granata of Chicago while David R. Clarke, general counsel for the Illinois Manufacturers' association, was explaining that, under its provisions, all state and municipal employés could be used to enforce the NRA.

"That sounds to me as if we're breeding a new race of stool pigeons," Granata remarked.

"Well, I can tell you," replied Clarke, "that the early days of prohibition would be nothing as compared to the early days of this bill's enforcement if it passes."

Business Raps Bill.

Clarke and other representatives of business belabored the bill for hours, then gave way to John E. Cassidy of Peoria, Illinois compliance administrator for the NRA, and a few others who are pushing it.

Cassidy insisted that it was simply a measure to allow the federal government the right to proceed in state courts against code violators.

Joseph K. Brittain, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, followed Clarke.

"We are unanimously agreed," he said, "that the title of the act is misleading and that instead of being an act for coöperation with the federal government it is an act to abdicate the sovereignty of this state and to delegate to the federal government the power to prosecute our citizens for alleged violations of codes adopted under the NRA.

Gives Rights Away.

"If this act is adopted it means that the free citizens of the state of Illinois have delegated to the President of the United States or to any one he may appoint or any officer or employé acting under the NRA power to utilize not only federal agencies and officers but also state officers and the courts of the state of Illinois to prosecute our citizens and subject them to criminal punishment for alleged violations of the NRA.

"This delegation of authority is a complete surrender of our sovereign rights. Not only do we protest against this delegation of power but we protest that the act is unwarranted, unjustifiable, and unconstitutional."

Gov. Horner tonight sent a letter

JAPAN'S IDEA OF A NEW DEAL

Because of the necessity of keeping local governmental machinery going, the county board in special session last night selected Thomas D. Nash to serve out the county treasurership term of Joseph B. McDonough, who died early yesterday morning. The term runs until next December.

Mr. Nash has been attorney for the county treasurer ever since Mr. McDonough was elected to that office in 1930. He has been active in Democratic politics for 25 years. He was elected alderman from the old Third ward in 1911 and was the Democratic nominee for the board of review in 1928.

Nash Takes Office Today.

The action of the county board had been agreed on with party leaders before the meeting was called to order and carrying out the program required only a few minutes. No other names were presented for consideration. The new treasurer's bond will be examined this morning and he will be inducted into office without public ceremonies.

Before selecting Mr. Nash the county commissioners adopted resolutions honoring the memory of Mr. McDonough and made plans to attend the funeral in a group. The services will be held at 10 o'clock Saturday morning from the home, 531 West 37th street, to the Church of the Nativity, 37th street and Parnell avenue. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

At its afternoon meeting the city council also adopted resolutions commending Mr. McDonough's long service as an alderman and extending the sympathy of the city government to his family.

Democrat Chiefs to Meet.

The Democratic county committee will meet at the Morrison hotel this morning to adopt resolutions and plan for attendance at the funeral.

It was said that no business will be transacted at the meeting and that the subject of filling a second vacancy caused by Mr. McDonough's death may be deferred several weeks. He was his party's nominee for county clerk to succeed Robert M. Sweitzer and the county committee has the duty of filling the vacancy on the ballot for the November election. But in this instance there is not the need for the immediate action that was required to keep the county treasurer's office functioning.

Democratic leaders refused to discuss the selection of a new nominee for the clerkship, but among the names mentioned in informal discussions were those of Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], City Collector Edward J. Kaindl and Michael J. Flynn, former city treasurer.

Mr. McDonough died at 3:45 o'clock yesterday morning in his home after a brief illness of pneumonia. He was 45 years old. Born on the south side, he had always lived in the district north of the stockyards. His political career began in 1917 when he was elected alderman of the old 5th ward [now the 13th]. He served in the city council from that ward for seven terms.

He is survived by his widow, Mae; his mother, Ellen, and four children.

Both the county building and the city hall will be closed for the funeral Saturday. Municipal Judge Thomas A. Green said the Stockyards court also will be closed.

ZION TO LIFT BAN AGAINST SMOKING AND PORK EATING

Membership rules of the Christian Catholic Apostolic church of Zion will be liberalized in July, according to Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva. His announcement was made last night at the usual Wednesday night prayer meeting in Shiloh tabernacle.

Under the new regulations, and after a general reorganization of the church promised by Voliva, those who smoke, dance, eat pork, or belong to secret societies will no longer be barred from Zion's fold. At present the Zionist laws prohibit such persons becoming members. So strong is the prejudice against tobacco that arrests have been made of smokers in Zion.

"We will continue to oppose the use of tobacco, the eating of swine flesh, and dancing," Voliva declared, "but we will not bar Christians for such indulgences."

A Policeman Gets a Lesson in Geography

Until recently Policeman Arthur Anderson of the Chicago avenue station considered the iland of Borneo as nothing more than the place where the wild men were advertised as from. He had never spent much time learning to spell the Malay or Dutch place names in vogue there and he had never had to ponder the procedure to be followed in the event he had a warant to serve in its jungles.

He is now enlightened.

His first hint of the dark land's importance in Chicago police work was received last October, when he was sent to serve a warant accusing Robert Pyzel, 70 East Elm street, of parking an automobile in Michigan avenue. He was then informed Mr. Pyzel's address was Bataafsche Petroleum Maatschappij, Balikpapan, Borneo.

Mr. Anderson Laughs Heartily.

Laughing heartily and spelling all the words but petroleum and Borneo wrong, Policeman Anderson reported his odd experience at the station and it was passed on by the newspapers.

Yesterday Policeman Anderson received a letter from Mrs. Pyzel, which he has framed as his Bornean spelling-geography lesson.

"My dear Mr. Anderson," she wrote, "owing to a terrific trafic violation and your amusement over our address in the East Indies, which also amused newspapers in seven states which printed the article, wrong spelling and all . . . we are in receipt of letters from everywhere, including Jackson, Mich.; East Liverpool, O.; Los Angeles, and San Francisco.

"We think, somehow, that if we answer all those letters and send those people all the stamps they seem to want, we ought to be absolved from whatever the penalty for the violation is.

Home of Head Hunter.

"For your enlightenment Bataafsche is the name of the Shell Oil company of the world. You cannot be in doubt about Petroleum and Maatschappij is the Dutch word for company. Balik means come back and papan is the Malay for a plank. Construe that as you will, it is spelled Balikpapan. Borneo you should know, for it has long been known as the home of the orang-outang, the boa constrictor, the black diamond, the crocodile, the Dyak head hunter, the wild men, and the big, big jungle.

"It will not be much use to send us a warant now, because we are soon traveling to places with even more awful names. Cheerio."

"The Pyzels don't need to go farther back among the wild men," Policeman Anderson commented. "I am satisfied with my spelling ability."

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—Officials of the United States government tonight sought Gerardo Machado, deposed president of Cuba, to face charges of murder in his own country.

United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter issued a warant for his arrest at the request of the Mendieta government of Cuba.

Dispatches from Cuba have indicated that if Gen. Machado is returned to the troubled iland republic, from which he fled for his life last August, he will be placed on trial for murder and other crimes he is alleged to have committed while in office.

Have to Catch Him.

First, however, he will have to be caught. He was not at his New York residence, 109 East 91st street, this afternoon, when Raymond J. Mulligan, United States marshal, arrived there with half a dozen deputies and city detectives to serve the warant.

Julio Fernandez, secretary to Mrs. Machado, asserted that the former Cuban president had left home Sunday without saying where he was going, except that he would be "somewhere in New York state."

Orestes Ferrara, who was secretary of state in the ousted Machado cabinet, professed ignorance of the whereabouts of his former chief, but hazarded the guess that he might be in Canada.

Believes Move Is "Stupid."

He then was asked if he thought the extradition proceedings would result in Senor Machado's being sent back to Cuba, and he replied: "I'm sure not."

"I believe," he added, "that this is foolishness; even worse, stupidity. That is my opinion as a lawyer.

"I believe the officials who have the final say will not be so foolish as to consent to the extradition of a former chief of state for such things as those of which they are accusing President Machado."

From Havana it was reported that the Cuban department of state had cabled to the Cuban consulate here, asking for Machado's provisional arrest, pending preparation of an extradition petition being prepared there for presentation to the state department in Washington.

Several Demands Made.

Several demands have been made in the last two months by officials in Havana for the extradition of Machado to stand trial for the "August 7, 1933 massacre," the crisis of the revolutionary movement.

Seventeen persons were killed that day when the police fired into crowds that were parading in the streets in celebration of a report that Machado had resigned from the presidency.

Though the August "massacre" is the charge on which his extradition was asked, Machado would be tried, if he were returned to Cuba, on numerous counts of murder, torture, misappropriation of public funds and other statutory crimes.

INDIANS AFTER DILLINGER, SAYS LONDON PAPER

LONDON, April 25.—(AP)—Indians have taken the warpath against John Dillinger, readers of one London morning newspaper were told today.

"Even some red Indians joined the hunt today with bows and arrows," read a paragraph in the newspaper's vivid account of the search for America's number one public enemy.

Want Him for Constable.

St. Paul, Minn., April 25.—(AP)—John Dillinger, fugitive outlaw, got one vote in the city election here yesterday. A citizen wrote the desperado's name on the ballot as "slicker candidate for constable-at-large."

St. Paul, Minn., April 25.—[Special.]—Growing criticism of federal authorities for "criminal stupidity" in the search for John Dillinger and his outlaw gang almost overshadowed the man hunt itself today, which was continuing unabated throughout six middle western states.

Dillinger, or members of his gang, were again being reported seen in a dozen widely separated points, including Akron, O., where a $4,000 bank robbery was staged, and Elk River, Minn., thirty miles north of here, where a farmer and his family were robbed.

Authorities, however, continued in their belief that at least one party of the escaping gang still lurked in the vicinity of the Twin Cities, and a small army of federal and local officers were busy tracing down every report which came to them.

Action against seven persons, charged with having harbored or aided the outlaw in his flight from justice, was promised here and in Madison, Wis., and a special guard was thrown about the county jail, where Evelyn Frechette, Indian "girl friend" of Dillinger, is being held.

Demand Purvis Resign.

Federal authorities, particularly Melvin H. Purvis, head of the bureau of investigation in Chicago, who is now directing the man hunt, came under the first storm of public disapproval in a petition widely circulated around Mercer, Wis.

It was at the Little Bohemia resort, near Mercer, that the outlaws shot their way through a police cordon Sunday night. Two men killed and four wounded were left in the wake of that flight.

The petition, which was presented at a meeting of the Lakeland Development association, and which is addressed to the department of justice in Washington, demands that Purvis be removed from his post, at least until Dillinger is either slain or captured.

It protests the "irresponsible conduct of federal operatives" when they raided the Dillinger hangout "in such a stupid manner as to bring about the deaths of two men and injury to four others." The document makes a point of the fact that none of the victims was a gangster.

Criticized "Lone" Action.

The petition assails the federal men for their failure to seek the aid of persons familiar with the Mercer resort area, who could have prevented the escape of the gangsters over highways leading from the hideout merely by barricading three nearby bridges.

As to the shooting affray at the Koerner resort, the petition calls it:

"The criminal stupidity of two United States agents, acting evidently either with insufficient instruction or in disregard of orders for caution in approaching a suspicious car parked near the Koerner home with no attempt at concealment, and with weapons held so they could not be drawn for defense."

As the petition points out, a single bandit was able to slay one agent, seriously wound a constable, and injure another agent.

Michigan Adds to Criticism.

More denunciation of the federal men came from Commissioner Oscar G. Olander of the Michigan department of public safety in Lansing. He charged that failure of the agents to coöperate with the Michigan state police probably cost the capture of Dillinger when the outlaw passed through the state last week.

He declared that Chippewa county officers were told state police "weren't needed," and that federal men refused to allow Sergt. Fred Kune of the state police to attend a conference at which the Dillinger hunt was mapped. Olander inferred that the federal agents were actuated by a desire to take sole credit for tracking down the outlaw.

He added that the state police, who have been uniformly successful in the past in tracking down fleeing men by their radio-converging system, had to rely on newspapers and press associations for news of what was being done in the Dillinger hunt.

Farmhouse Raided and Robbed.

In the meantime the man hunt continued. Sherif's deputies and local peace officers of surrounding towns scoured the highways around Elk River after the report that four men and two women in a black sedan had raided the home of Frank Oberg, seven miles from Elk River.

Oberg and his family reported that the men were heavily armed, that they had forced their way into the house, and made off with about $13 in cash.

This report came simultaneously with the news that Gov. Floyd B. Olson was requested by State Senator Robert G. Marshall to call out the militia to join in the hunt. The senator requested that guardsmen be thrown about Minneapolis and St. Paul to search all automobiles and prevent the killer and his henchmen from escaping.

Two Bandits Hold Up Bank.

Akron, O., sent word that the Mogadore Savings bank, in the suburb of Mogadore, was robbed by two bandits shortly after noon. The bandits kidnaped two clerks and released them about a mile and a half north of the city on the Cleveland-Akron road.

Bank employés were unable to state if the bandits were members of the Dillinger gang. A short time later five men in a black sedan, with a machine gun in the rear seat, stopped at a North Akron gasoline station and asked the road to Columbus.

This again gave rise to the fear that Dillinger might be planning a delivery from the state penitentiary at Columbus of his three pals who are now serving terms for murder.

Racine, Wis., reported that $3,000 in negotiable bonds, taken by the Dillinger gang in a holdup of the American Bank and Trust company on Nov. 20, 1933, had been discovered in Chicago. This was the first intimation that the gangsters had secured anything except the $27,000 in cash in that raid.

Charge Four Aided Dillinger.

While Dillinger and his outlaws were being sought, the law was moving against those now in custody who are said to have aided him. In St. Paul, United States District Attorney George F. Sullivan said he would ask indictment of four persons on charges of harboring Dillinger.

The four are: Beth Green, widow of Eugene Green, slain by federal agents three days after he and Dillinger had shot their way out of an apartment here on March 31; Evelyn Frechette, Dr. Clayton E. May, and Mrs. Augusta Salt. Dr. May and Mrs. Salt, a nurse, are both of Minneapolis, and are said to have treated Dillinger for a wound suffered in the shooting affray in March.

In Madison, at the same time, the three girls captured in the Wisconsin hangout after Dillinger had fled were held to the federal grand jury in bonds of $50,000 each on charges of concealing persons named in federal warants. The girls pleaded not guilty when arraigned before a United States commissioner. They gave their names as Ann Southern, Rose Anker and Mariam Marr—believed to be fictitious.

Approve New Federal Bills.

Washington sent the news that the house judiciary committee had approved two more senate bills to give the federal government additional power in dealing with criminals. These bills would make it a federal offense to rob a national bank or kill or assault a federal officer. At present they are offenses to be prosecuted by the state.

In that connection it was noted that the only actual charges which the United States can now bring against Dillinger are several of interstate transportation of stolen automobiles.

ANOTHER KILLER ESCAPES FROM INDIANA PRISON

Michigan City, Ind., April 25.—(AP)—State prison officials today sent out the description of another life termer missing from the institution.

Since last Saturday four prisoners serving life terms for murder have left the penitentiary. Another serving three years for burglary also escaped. All were classed as trusties.

The last prisoner to leave was Herman Williams, 48, a Negro convicted at Muncie June 1, 1922, of murdering his wife.

There were reports that the prison officials at their regular quarterly meeting here tomorrow might make some changes in administration as a result of the recent escapes.

At Indianapolis, however, Wayne Coy, secretary who handles penal institution affairs for Gov. Paul V. McNutt, said so far as he knew no changes at the prison were contemplated.

The governor, informed of the departure of the prisoners, said: "'Tis spring."

The season brings on a wandering urge, the governor explained, adding: "When the sap begins to flow the boys decide they awnt to get away. A few warm days makes them want to leave."

Like Dillinger, He Finds a Toy Pistol Is Handy

Taking his cue from John Dillinger, Edward Upton, 22 years old, of 620 York place, has used a toy gun in more than thirty shoe store robberies, he confessed to Town Hall police yesterday. He was captured by Sergt. John Nick and his squad as he fled from a Feltman & Curme shoe store at 1011 Belmont avenue, where he had taken $44. The toy gun was found in his pocket.

POLICE RAID FLATS ON NORTHWEST SIDE IN DILLINGER HUNT

Acting on information from an anonymous source, four squads of detectives led by Sergt. Michael McFadden last night visited a large apartment building at Touhy and Western avenues and searched it for John Dillinger, the notorious Indiana desperado. Residents of the building were surprised and assured the police the outlaw had not been seen there.

There were two additional Dillinger scares in the immediate vicinity of Chicago. At Hammond the automobile of Nicholas Madura, a radio announcer, was taken from him as he was putting it in a garage by a man who limped. Madura asked him if he was Dillinger and the robber replied: "Sure, buddy." However, the announcer said he was convinced the man was not the hunted fugitive. The car was found abandoned soon afterward near Calumet City.

The Gary police pursued and questioned three itinerant rug merchants who had playfully told a roadhouse owner they were Dillinger and two friends of his. When it was discovered the trio really had rugs and that none looked like the much sought outlaw the police let them go.

APPEAL DEATH SENTENCE FOR DILLINGER AID

Lima, O., April 25.—[Special.]—The petition in error necessary to a review of the conviction and death sentence of Harry Pierpont was filed late today with the Ohio Court of Appeals by Miss Jessie Levy and William M. Fogarty, Indianapolis, and Clarence C. Miller, Lima, attorney for Pierpont.

Sixty-six assignments of error, asserting, principally, abuse of discretion of the trial judge and violation of constitutional rights of the defendant, are set up in the petition.

Among these is recounted, as error, the closing and locking of the courtroom doors, the manacling of the defendant before the jury and the presence at his side of a deputy sherif with a machine gun trained on him during the trial.

Government Asks Prices on Bullet Proof Vests

Elliott Wisbrod, manufacturer of bulletproof vests, announced yesterday that he had sent one of the vests to John Edgar Hoover, director of the division of investigation of the United States department of justice at Washington. Mr. Hoover had requested one of the vests and also price quotations for a quantity purchase by the government. Wisbrod said that he believed the government wanted to protect federal agents in their pursuit of John Dillinger.

SIX AUTO THEFT SUSPECTS TAKEN IN SURPRISE RAID

A series of surprise raids on garages in East Chicago Heights was made yesterday by 20 detectives acting under sealed orders from State's Attorney Courtney in connection with his campaign against automobile thefts. The raiders arrested six men and seized seven stolen automobiles.

The raids were led by Sergts. Thomas McLaughlin and John J. Kelly of the state's attorney's police. The Greenwood Auto Motor Sales garage was the first place visited. There the police found the proprietor, Joseph Talarico, in the act of dismantling a stolen automobile. Two other stolen cars and a tow truck that had been stolen were also recovered.

Raid Private Garage.

The police next went to the Lincoln Highway garage, where they arrested Joseph Knutson and his brother, Gunnar, and recovered two stolen automobiles and a stolen truck. In the private garage of Adam Nacyza, a neighbor of Talarico, police found a quantity of automobile accessories they said had been stolen. Nacyza was arrested.

The raiders also seized Walter Baker and his brother, Fred, who live near the Talarico garage. Police said the Baker brothers confessed that they had dealt in stolen automobile accessories. The prisoners were taken to the state's attorney's office for questioning.

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley said automobile and accessory thieves had made East Chicago Heights one of the centers for their operations.

In connection with efforts to curb the sale of stolen accessories, the prosecutor expressed his intention of invoking a law which prohibits any junk dealer, second hand dealer, or pawnbroker from purchasing or receiving on deposit goods from a minor. A fine of $500 is provided in the statute.

U. S. Sentences 2 Thieves.

In Dubuque, Ia., yesterday, Roy A. Starr and Raymond Clancy, members of a Chicago automobile theft ring, pleaded guilty in the federal court to violation of the Dyer act and were sentenced to serve a year and a day in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth.

Two other suspected members of the ring which stole scores of cars here and sold them in Dubuque and vicinity pleaded not guilty and were lodged in jail when they were unable to furnish bonds of $8,000 each. They are Richard Meisner and Otto Walther.

KIDNAP GIRL, 6, IN TUCSON, ARIZ.; $15,000 DEMANDED

Tucson, Ariz., April 25.—(AP)—June Robles, 6 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Robles and granddaughter of Bernabe Robles, one of Pima county's wealthiest citizens, was kidnaped as she was returning home from school here this afternoon and held for $15,000 ransom, police reported.

The little girl was picked up by a man in a "little black car" about 3 o'clock, but it did not become known she had been abducted until two hours later.

Just before 5 o'clock a small boy, Rosalio Estrada, appeared at the Robles Electric company, operated by the girl's father, with a note telling of the kidnaping and demanding $15,000 ransom.

The note, roughly printed, gave detailed instructions for delivery of the money in $20, $10, and $5 bills and warned Robles not to reveal the contents of the missive to authorities. Robles later notified police, but refused to let them read the note he had received.

BLESSED EVENT INTERRUPTS A SLAM IN BRIDGE

Tournament Player Hears a New Overcall.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

Eleven hundred contract bridge players vied with each other in teams of two in a tournament held in the tearooms of Mandel Brothers' store last night. The evening turned out to be a double "grand slam" for one player, Harold Freeman, 7130 Jeffery avenue.

Mr. Freeman had found himself holding a "powerhouse hand." Bidding the hand carefully he received support from his partner and, with delicate inference responses, arrived at the grand slam contract. He was just about to play the hand when an attendant tapped him on the shoulder. Mr. Freeman turned around, annoyed by the interruption.

Attendant Breaks the News.

"Pardon me, sir," the attendant said, "but we have just received a message that your wife is being taken to the hospital. You are about to become a father."

Mr. Freeman flung the "powerhouse hand" on the table and rushed to Michael Reese hospital, where early today he was awaiting the new arrival. Meanwhile a substitute player picked up the hand and made the grand slam.

The tournament was then resumed. After nearly four hours of competition, during which each team played 21 hands, the two teams which received the top score were hailed the 1934 champions of the Bridge club.

Most Difficult Hand.

Here is the hand which experts watching the tournament designated as the most difficult of the evening:

West	North / South	East
	♠ A, K, 10 ♥ Q, 6, 4 ♦ 7, 5 ♣ K, 9, 6, 4, 2
♠ Q, J, 9, 6, 5 ♥ K, 10, 9 ♦ Q, J, 6, 4 ♣ 7	N. W. E. S.	♠ 8, 4, 3, 2 ♥ 8, 5, 3, 2 ♦ A, 10, 9, 8, 3 ♣ None
	♠ 7 ♥ A, J, 7 ♦ K, 2 ♣ A, Q, J, 10, 8, 5, 3

South was the dealer. All of the North and South teams arrived at a six club contract, doubled by West, and at all of the tables where the hand was played the declarer was set one trick. In all of these cases the West hand led a diamond, which was won by the East hand with the ace and a heart returned. The South players invariably tried the finesse, losing to the king of hearts in the West hand.

A group of experts who directed the tournament then considered the hand. Louis J. Haddad, winner of several bridge championships, played the south hand. The other players were Leon Mandel, Owen D. Gilman, and Harry B. Kempner. Haddad made the hand because he refused the finesse, going up with his ace of hearts. After leading seven rounds of trumps, his opponent in the west was squeezed so that he had to discard either one of his three remaining spades or the heart king. Whichever card West discarded, South was able to make all the remaining tricks.

As the tournament got under way only the precise slap of cards could be heard in the rooms. Then came an interruption, One woman embarked on a four spade contract with the ace, king, jack, and two other spades lying in one of her opponents' hands. She was set four tricks.

"You can't score that," she shouted, rising; "it isn't fair for me to play the hand with five spades against me like that. My opponent is to be blamed. He should have been the one to bid four spades."

The directors of the tournament pacified her and the games went on.

The grand prize for the best play of the east-west hands was won by A. K. Zachary, 6738 Ridgeland avenue, and William Cuthbertson, 4841 Dorchester avenue. The north-south grand prize went to Paul Grossman, 7611 Essex avenue, and Ben Shapiro, 5200 Drexel boulevard.

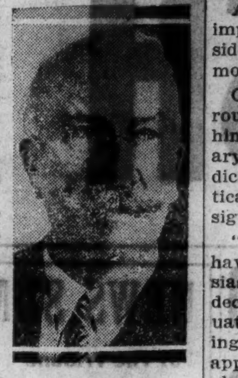
Spain's Cabinet Quits; Nation Placed in "State of Alarm"

BY HAROLD ETTLINGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, April 25.—Spain tonight was in the grip of the most serious crisis since the birth of the republic.



ALEJANDRO LERROUX.

Premier Alejandro Lerroux and his cabinet were forced to resign by President Niceto Alcala Zamora this afternoon.

The position of Alcala Zamor himself is so weak that his own resignation is widely rumored as imminent.

Late tonight a state of alarm—similar to martial law but not so drastic—was proclaimed throughout the country. All available supporters of the left—liberal republicans and socialists alike—have been mobilized in Madrid and are prepared to fight a rightist coup d'etat which is persistently rumored to be afoot.

Crowd Cheers Royalist Rebel.

Gen José Sanjurjo, leader of the August monarchist rebellion, was triumphantly cheered by a crowd when, at 7:45 o'clock tonight, he left Cadiz prison, the first of about 9,000 enemies of the republic to benefit by the amnesty bill signed yesterday by President Acala Zamora. Gen. Sanjurjo left immediately for Gibraltar.

This afternoon, just after the fall of the government was announced in a short session of parliament, Honorio Maura, monarchist, stood up in the hemicycle and shouted: 'Long live the king."

The proclamation of a state of alarm was the climax of a feverish day which began with the sensational resignation of Premier Lerroux for the second time within two months.

When the proclamation was broadcast to the nation reports spread that it had been issued by the minister of interior after he already had resigned his post. Left forces are watching his ministry and all others for the first sign of trouble. They are watching all railroad stations, police stations, and barracks and have set up a special observation point opposite the barracks from which a cavalry battalion started the monarchist revolt in August, 1932.

The leaders of these left forces are wary, for one of the most alarming reports abroad tonight is that orders for their arrest have been prepared by the outgoing government and that the orders will be carried out when the word is given.

A left revolution is by no means an impossibility, with the result that both sides are on their toes, watching every move of their opponents.

Graver than the resignation of Lerroux is the situation of Alcala Zamora himself. Emiliano Iglesias, parliamentary leader of Lerroux's own party, indicated that Alcala Zamora has practically been given an ultimatum to resign.

"For the first time in Spain we have a crisis in the presidency," Iglesias said. "In regard to the amnesty decree which brought about this situation I must say that before signing and then commenting on a decree approved by parliament if a president obeys the law strictly he should resign. I would have done so."

President and Premier Battle.

The fall of the cabinet followed a battle between Lerroux and Alcala Zamora over the amnesty law. The president at first refused to sign it, declaring that it was unconstitutional in certain points. This meant that it should have been sent back to parliament for revision, but such a step would have involved the immediate resignation of the cabinet, which presumably was to have been avoided.

This difficulty was patched up by a presidential decree affecting the working of the amnesty. But then Alcala Zamora suddenly appeared with a lengthy statement explaining his actions, which he wanted read in parliament and printed with the law in the official gazette as a preamble. This caused an uproar. Nothing but laws passed by parliament and decrees can appear in the gazette.

One version is that Lerroux persuaded Alcala Zamora to give up the idea and then resign. More reliable reports are that the president insisted, and when Lerroux refused to accede the president withdrew his confidence from the cabinet and made it quit.

Tonight Alcala Zamora was going about the traditional consultations in an effort to find a new cabinet. The outcome was impossible to predict.

PARKS MERGED; MAYOR NAMES BOARD OF FIVE

BY PARKE BROWN.

Mayor Kelly yesterday made the consolidation of all Chicago parks a fact. He appointed the first board of the Chicago park district. The five appointees took office at once and the moment they did so the old park boards—twenty-two of them—lost their legal existence.

Three of the mayor's selections were final. The other two were temporary. The three named to serve out the full terms for which they were appointed are Robert J. Dunham, five years; Harry W. Joseph, four years, and Martin H. Kennelly, three years.

To complete the first board immediately the mayor named his secretary, Miss Bessie C. O'Neill, and his assistant secretary, John R. Nash, to the two and one year terms with the understanding that they will step aside when the final selections are made.

Acts on Lawyers' Advice.

This arrangement was declared necessary by attorneys who have been seeking a way to test thoroughly the validity of the park consolidation act which was approved by the voters at the April 10 primaries. The lawyers advised that a complete board be named at once to open the way for quo warranto proceedings.

This opinion was based on the wording of the act of the 1933 legislature which provided that "upon the appointment of the [consolidated park district] commissioners, the offices of commissioners in existing park districts shall cease to exist and all powers and duties vested in or exercised by such commissioners shall be vested in and exercised by the Chicago Park district or the commissioners thereof."

The lawyers said that the naming of only three commissioners at this time, as had first been planned, might not constitute full compliance with the law in reference to the appointment of "the commissioners."

Laughs Over Own Ouster.

The mayor laughed when he was reminded that by his action he had kicked himself out of a job in which he had taken pride for years, that of president of the south park board. He suggested that his move might cut down the amount of detailed work on his shoulders but "guessed" he still would have plenty to occupy his time.

Mr. Kelly was only one of 114 commissioners who lost their jobs and it was conjectured that the taxpayers of some of the old districts would welcome the new régime with sighs of relief. This was considered particularly true concerning owners of property in the old north shore park district. Despite almost violent protests, the board there has been attempting to buy "baby park" sites and make other expensive improvements even since the consolidation was approved by the voters.

The new board will operate strictly under budgetary control established by the consolidation statute.

Mayor Takes Swift Action.

Mayor Kelly moved rapidly in order to send his appointments to the afternoon meeting of the city council. The complete proclamation of the results of the primaries in the territory under the Chicago board of election commissioners was issued in the morning.

Then, at the mayor's request, County Clerk Sweitzer took the election board's figures on the adoption of the park law, added to them the vote on this question in some precincts under his jurisdiction and proclaimed the final figures. These showed that the voters approved the park consolidation by 507,955 to 174,531.

There was no surprise expressed about any of the mayor's selections. It had become known that he had chosen Mr. Dunham, now chairman of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, as the type of executive that he wanted as president of the new district to handle the difficult task of merging all the old park districts into one.

Kennelly from Lincoln Park.

It also had been reported that he had had his eye for some time on Mr. Kennelly, who since his appointment by Gov. Horner as a member of the Lincoln park board a year ago has taken an active interest in that park system; and upon Mr. Joseph who is president of the west park board. Under Mr. Joseph's guidance the west parks have straightened out the financial tangle left by former Gov. Emmerson's board which was headed by W. R. James.

Dunham, Kennelly, and Joseph will take over their new tasks at once and for a few weeks at least will devote almost their entire time to them. Mr. Dunham has said that he will resign from the relief commission as soon as possible, and, as he has retired from business, will devote himself exclusively to his new work. In neither of the positions does he receive a salary.

The temporary commissioners, Miss O'Neill and Mr. Nash, it is said, will be able to carry on their present duties in the mayor's office. Miss O'Neill has been Mayor Kelly's secretary since 1922, handling all his important matters both at the South Park board and the Chicago sanitary district offices before he called her to the city hall.

Mr. Nash has been an executive assistant to the mayor for about a year. He is a son of P. A. Nash, Democratic national committeeman and chairman of the Cook county Democratic central committee.

Organize Today or Tomorrow.

Mayor Kelly said he expected the new board to complete its organization—the high points of which are the elections of its president, secretary, and treasurer from among its members—either today or tomorrow. Each of the five commissioners appointed must post a $50,000 bond approved by County Judge Jarecki, and this requirement may delay action for a day.

The first task the new board will take up after it organizes, it is understood, will be the selection of a general superintendent for the entire system formerly handled by 22 superintendents. This will be an important position, since the holder will have executive charge of 5,262 acres of parks and an extensive mileage of boulevards and streets.

The test of the consolidation law, in order to establish its constitutionality, probably will result from one of the first steps of the new board. The present plan is for the board to demand from each of the old park districts its records and property, including its funds on hand. One or more refusals is expected and then, according to present understanding, State's Attorney Courtney will begin quo warranto proceedings against the board or boards that refuse to surrender.

City Prepares to Observe Annual Baby Week

Appeal to Parents

The Infant Welfare society of Chicago will open its 20th annual "Baby Week" next Sunday. Posters, pamphlets, and displays in the infant wear sections of State street stores will serve to arouse interest in the education of parents in regard to the health of their children.

Various centers of the society throughout the city and suburbs will hold card parties and other social affairs throughout the week. Last year $91,952 was raised by the Woman's auxiliary of the society of which Mrs. Telfer MacArthur is president. According to Philip D. Armour, president, approximately the same amount is expected to be raised this spring.

$5,000 JUDGMENT IN HEART BALM CASE IS UPHELD

The $5,000 judgment obtained by Mrs. Jessie Erickson, Elmhurst divorcée, against Mrs. Grace R. Gregory of Wheaton after a trial which excited public interest two years ago and revealed the romance of Mrs. Erickson and Mrs. Gregory's husband, Albert, a suburban line conductor, was upheld yesterday by the judges of the second district Appellate court at Ottawa. The high court opinion affirmed the judgment of the Du Page county Circuit court at Wheaton and ordered Mrs. Gregory to pay the $5,000 and an additional $1,479 in accumulated interest.

During the hearing it was disclosed that Mrs. Gregory confronted Mrs. Erickson with her knowledge of the romance and forced Mrs. Erickson to mortgage her home to give her $5,000 for heart balm. Mrs. Erickson then brought suit for recovery of the $5,000 and interest and won the judgment.

The Appellate court held yesterday that Mrs. Gregory had obtained the money under false pretenses and that because of the methods she used she sacrificed any legal claim for damages she might have suffered.

WHALEN BACKED AS NEW HEAD OF TAMMANY HALL

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—With strong backing from Washington and a group of Tammany leaders, the movement to elect Grover Whalen, former police commissioner, as leader of Tammany Hall to succeed John F. Curry was assuming considerable importance today. The drive for Whalen was started in an effort to forestall Edward J. Ahearn, who is the leading candidate for the leadership and who is credited with having close to a majority of the executive committee pledged to his election.

While it remained very doubtful that sufficient votes could be obtained to elect Whalen, even under pressure from Washington, it was regarded possible that Ahearn might be stopped for the present.

That would result probably in the naming of a steering committee, with Whalen as one of the members representing Washington and taking the rôle of patronage dispenser. From that point of vantage, it would be comparatively easy for Washington eventually to force the election of Whalen.

Confident that he has the votes to elect him, Ahearn is seeking to bring about a showdown this week if possible.

'HEAVY WATER' EXPERT TO GET SCIENCE AWARD

Dr. Harold Clayton Urey of Columbia university, discoverer of the so-called "heavy water," will receive the twenty-third annual Willard Gibbs medal at a dinner of the Chicago section of the American Chemical society in the Stevens hotel tomorrow night.

This honor, regarded as one of the highest in chemistry, has previously gone to such international figures as Svante Arrhenius, Mme. Curie, and Dr. Richard Willstaetter of Munich.

The "heavy water" is so named because it contains "heavy" hydrogen of a density one-ninth greater than common hydrogen, which for years has been considered the unchangeable standard "one" upon which atomic weights of other elements have been based.

Presentation of the medal will be made by Prof. William Draper of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Urey will deliver an informal talk.

ELEVATE O'BRIEN TO BISHOPRIC IN COLORFUL RITES

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

With lofty ceremonies which "united modern Chicago with ancient Jerusalem" when Christ sent his apostles to all the world, Cardinal Mundelein yesterday elevated Bishop William D. O'Brien to the Catholic episcopacy and successorship to the original apostles. The new prelate is titular bishop of Calinda and junior auxiliary bishop of Chicago.

Yesterday's link between Chicago and old Jerusalem was pointed out to one of the most distinguished assemblages ever to crowd its way into Holy Name cathedral by Archbishop John Joseph Mitty, coadjutor of San Francisco, during his sermon as preacher of the occasion.

Benefactor Is Honored.

Not only was the Catholic church creating a successor to Christ's apostles, as Archbishop Mitty pointed out, but also Catholics of Chicago and far away mission areas of the continent were honoring a much loved leader and benefactor. Bishop O'Brien is president of the Catholic Church Extension society, the agency of help for struggling bishops and priests in sparsely settled areas of the American west, Alaska, Central America, and the Philippines.

There were 75 bishops, 15 archbishops, 15 mitered abbots and 300 regular and secular clergy preceding Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, and Bishop Elect O'Brien, in the colorful procession leading to the cathedral's spacious sanctuary. With the exception of the bishop elect, who was garbed in white, the assembled members of the hierarchy wore vestments of red, the color required by the day, which was the feast of St. Mark.

Woman Edges Forward.

An almost unnoticed tribute was paid the new prelate by a modestly dressed woman who had pressed her way through the sacristy door and found a place to stand back of the Quigley Seminary Plain Chant choir within the chancel.

At the close of Archbishop Mitty's tribute to Bishop O'Brien's leadership of the Extension this woman explained her presence in the chancel where only vested clergy or laity are supposed to go during the service.

"I used to know him when he was red headed Willy O'Brien," she said. "I go to his church now. It's St. John's down on South Clark street. Its a poor church, but he's going to stay even though he's a bishop."

"Receive the Holy Ghost."

The high point of the ceremony came when Cardinal Mundelein, as consecrator, and the two co-consecrators imposed their hands on the bishop elect's head with the words, uttered in Latin, "Receive the Holy Ghost." The scene was directly before the high altar, with Cardinal Mundelein seated on a stool and Bishops Bernard J. Sheil of Chicago and Joseph P. Lynch of Dallas, Tex., co-consecrators, at either side. Imposition by three prelates is required in the elevation of a new bishop.

Prior to "the imposition of hands," Bishop O'Brien had lain prostrate before the alter while the plain chant choir intoned the Litany of the Saints, with special suffrages for the bishop elect.

During the ceremonies Archbishop Cicognani was enthroned on the south side of the chancel, opposite the throne occupied by Cardinal Mundelein. Following the consecration a reception was held for visiting dignitaries at the Drake hotel. Last night friends of Bishop O'Brien tendered him a formal banquet at the Drake. Next Sunday Bishop O'Brien will preside at his first pontifical mass at old St. John's church, 18th and South Clark streets.

DE PRIEST VICTOR IN FIGHT TO TEST CAFE'S COLOR LINE

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Oscar De Priest, Chicago's Negro congressman, today scored a decisive victory in his battle to knock down the house restaurant bar against members of his race.

He obtained adoption of his resolution challenging the authority by which North Carolina's Lindsay Warren dictates rules and regulations for the dining room on the house side of the capitol.

Party lines were swept aside by stronger influences as the membership voted 237 to 114 in favor of the De Priest resolution. An analysis of the roll call showed that the ballots followed the Mason-Dixon line with singular regularity. Only one or two congressmen from north of that line opposed the De Priest measure, while not a single representative from below that boundary voted aye.

The vote was a showdown test of strength and handed a stunning blow to the powerful southern Democratic group in the lower house of congress. But it was only a test vote; it will not automatically open up the house restaurant to members of the Negro race.

Under the terms of De Priest's resolution, Speaker Rainey is to name a select committee of five to investigate the authority by which Mr. Warren, as chairman of the accounts committee, prescribes the rules governing that eating place. Representative De Priest insists that the North Carolinian has no legal right whatever to do so.

CANINE 'LAZARUS' ROLLS OVER AND DEVOURS A MEAL

Dog Brought Back to Life Improves.

Berkeley, Cal., April 25.—(AP)—Rolling over for the first time since he was put to death clinically 12 days ago, a mongrel dog barked and growled while eating his food in a laboratory here today.

Dr. Robert E. Cornish, observing the improvement in the animal's condition, said he believed he might succeed eventually in his experiments to revive human beings after death.

"For the first time, the dog got up on his front feet and barked and growled when he was fed liver," said Dr. Cornish, research professor at the University of California.

"He is getting stronger day by day but we can't tell yet whether his brain, the most vital part, is improving.

Hope for Improvement.

"The higher, most intelligent part of the brain doubtless was damaged by death, but we hope that it will show improvement to the extent that conciousness will return.

"If we succeed in causing the animal to live again and its brain to function we will be a step nearer our ultimate endeavors to revive persons who have drowned, or who have been asphyxiated or electrocuted.

"The inhalator, we believe, is effective in reviving 'dead' persons only if it is applies before the heart has stopped beating altogether.

"In the cases of the three dogs upon which we have experimented here, the hearts had ceased to beat, but they were started again and the dog's physical functions were restored.

Two Dogs Died Again.

"Two of the dogs died again within a few hours and an examination of their brain cells disclosed they were considerably changed and damaged.

"We are hoping that in the case of the third dog the brain cells will repair themselves and thereby restore the animal fully to life."

The dog put to death on Friday, April 13, eats more than half a pound of liver a day, besides eggs, oatmeal gruel and milk. He seems to prefer the liver and growls and snaps while devouring it, like a normal dog, Dr. Cornish said.

"If we succeed in restoring the dog completely to life and consciousness," Dr. Cornish declared, "our next step will be experiments to save the lives of human beings."

U. S. ASKS JAPAN FOR EXPLANATION OF CHINA POLICY

Tokio Reassures Britain of Good Intentions.

TOKIO, April 26 [Thursday].—(AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew visited Foreign Minister Koki Hirota at 12:30 p. m. today to discuss Japan's recent declaration of policy concerning China.

The visit of the American envoy was in accordance with instructions from Secretary of State Hull in Washington.

Previously it was understood that the state department had asked the United States embassy in Tokio for a careful translation of Tokio press statements, but that no official request had been made for formal diplomatic representation.

Details of the instructions given to Ambassador Grew by Washington were not disclosed. But the visit, closely following upon that yesterday of Sir Francis Lindley, British ambassador, excited interest in official and diplomatic quarters. There was speculation as to whether an Anglo-American understanding exists concerning Japan's intentions toward China.

Japan Reassures Britain.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, April 25.—Assurances that Japan upholds the nine-power treaty, adheres to the open door in China, and is confident that no legitimate British or other foreign interest in China will clash with the principles outlined last week in the foreign office statement were given today to Sir Francis Lindley, the British ambassador, by Foreign Minister Koki Hirota.

The conversation lasted an hour, and its friendly nature, which officials emphasize, is attested to the public by pictures of Hirota and Sir Francis sitting on a sofa registering good will.

The ambassador read to Hirota the memorandum of Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary. Hirota said Japan would continue to fulfill its obligations under the nine-power treaty, which he considered unaffected by the statement of Eiji Amau, the foreign office spokesman.

Says China Is Violator.

He further said Japan maintained the principle of equal opportunity in China. He took occasion to observe that the principle had been violated only by China, who had closed the open door against Britain as well as against Japan by trade boycotts for political purposes.

Japan contemplated nothing, said Hirota, that was likely to conflict with any normal British activities in China or lead to a clash between British and Japanese interests. The sale of arms or planes to China was not mentioned.

Hirota did not refer specifically to any foreign activity in China except projects for large foreign loans from which Japan is being excluded. This Japan considers contrary to the principle of the international consortium of 1920, in which the United States, Great Britain, France, and Japan pledged themselves to coöperative action in financing China. The fact that Japan was neither consulted nor invited to participate showed an anti-Japanese political tendency in these transactions, Hirota said.

Hedges on Statement.

Hirota took pains to make it clear that Amau's statement was not a declaration of the Japanese government. He did not disavow it nor retract any statement it contained, but he explained it had been issued informally in response to inquiries made by the Japanese press regarding charges emanating from Shanghai that China was obstructing a large international loan to China.

Stories circulating here alleging that the spokesman made the statement without Hirtota's knowledge received no support from the minister's explanations. Hirota accepted the foreign office's responsibility for the statement, but simply as a verbal description of Japan's attitude given by a bureau chief, and not as a formal government declaration.

Envoys Confer with U. S.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—Japan's warning that foreign aid to China would be considered as endangering peace in the far east has resulted in a series of informal conferences between Secretary of State Hull, Undersecretary Phillips and diplomatic representatives of a number of the countries signatory to the nine power treaty, which guarantees China's independence.

President Roosevelt let it be known that he expected to confer with Hull on foreign affairs, including the Japanese manifesto, but the secretary of state did not go to the White House today.

During the day the Italian ambassador, Rosso; the Chinese minister, Sze; and the Dutch minister, De With, all called at the state department and conferred with either Hull or Phillips.

Rosso and Sze discussed the general far eastern situation with the state department officials, but the Dutch minister denied that his visit had any connection with the Japanese manifesto, although the Netherlands is a signer of the nine power treaty and vitally interested in far eastern affairs because of the Dutch East Indies.

British and French Envoys Call.

Yesterday Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, and Andre de la Boulayé, the French ambassador, both representing nine power treaty nations, also called at the state department and were understood to have discussed the general far eastern situation with American diplomatic officials.

Hirosi Saito, the Japanese ambassador, visited the state department late yesterday afternoon at the request of Undersecretary Phillips and said when he parted that he had merely left Japanese newspaper clippings containing the "text" of the declaration.

Press Assails Japan.

LONDON, April 25.—(AP)—The troubled European scene was temporarily forgotten today as Great Britain turned its attention to the far east, uneasy over Japan's intention toward China.

While several London newspapers forecast ominous developments in the orient, the government made no commitment as it awaited a reply to its request for amplification of Japan's recent "hands off China" warning to western powers.

Anxiety and hostility toward the Japanese statement were expressed in the London press.

The Telegraph called for an "inquiry into the exact purpose and scope of Japan's policy. If she is to claim general supervision over the relations of China with outside powers, big adjustments—both of ideas and of existing position—will be necessary."

The News Chronicle, under the caption "Japan's Mailed Fist," said:

"The only fact to set against the picture of crushing the far east under the iron heel of Japanese militarism is that the immediate result has been to bring British and American diplomacy, startled by the shadow of their common danger, a little closer together.

Calls Japan Faithless.

"Manchukuo [the newly-created Japanese protected empire] stands as a startling illustration of how faithfully Japan kept the pledge she gave under the nine power treaty."

The Express declared "things which will change the course of history for centuries are happening.

"Japan is laying the plan of a new world. She means to cast her mantle over all Asia. The Japanese ultimatum essentially concerns the United States. Americans will resist Japanese pretensions, yet it is doubtful if they will make the resistance effective, as their country is too disorganized and the nation is too distracted."

This newspaper called upon Britain to keep out of trouble, but to retain Hongkong. It concluded:

"The rulers of Japan are taking a big bite of other people's property to ease their own distresses. They may bite more than they can chew."

U. S. SOON TO ADD FIRST 20 SHIPS FOR TREATY NAVY

75 Others to Follow by Year 1940.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—Within four months, the administration expects to start building 20 of the 95 ships needed to give the United States a fleet second to no other navy in the world by about 1940.

President Roosevelt let it be known today that the billion and a half dollar appropriation bill he will submit to congress shortly would provide money for initial construction in the treaty navy program.

Secondary Craft Come First.

That bill, said Chairman Vinson [Dem., Ga.] of the house naval committee, will carry about $40,000,000 for the first year's work on six submarines of 1,300 tons, 12 destroyers of 1,500 tons, and two destroyer leaders of 1,850 tons.

"We expect to spend actually only about $37,000,000 the first year," Mr. Vinson said, "but the $40,000,000 would provide a safe leeway.

"The $40,000,000 either will be appropriated directly for naval construction, or the President will be given the right to allocate the money for that purpose."

It will be 24 to 30 months before these 20 ships can be launched—10 from private and 10 from navy yards, Mr. Vinson added.

Will Start Other Ships.

Meanwhile, he said, the government will start building some of the 75 other ships needed. Of these, 21 will be submarines, 51 destroyers, two cruisers, and one an aircraft carrier.

Unless present plans are abandoned and unforeseen speed is applied, it would be around 1940 before the United States had a fleet as big as existing treaties permit. The treaties expire on Dec. 31, 1936, but plans are being made for another naval arms conference.

Japan already is at treaty limits, and Great Britain is near the maximum.

Vinson said the navy estimated all of the 95 ships America needs would cost about $475,000,000 and that about 80 per cent of that would be spent for labor. The balance would go for materials.

THREE OF CHICAGOANS MAROONED ALL WINTER FLY TO DAWSON CREEK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DAWSON CREEK, B. C., April 25.—Marooned all winter in temperatures from 20 to 75 degrees below zero, three of a party of six Chicagoans reached here today. They flew the plane they rebuilt after it had crashed and they miraculously escaped death last Aug. 21, near Cypress creek in the upper Halfway river country.

The three flying here were Capt. C. A. Simmons, Mrs. Betty Rossbach and Pilot John Bonnell. Others of the party, Paul Rossbach, Herman Hatfield and Alton Seamans, are still at the camp they set up which comprises a three room log cabin, plane hangar, and workshop, all fashioned from forest timber. The plane had to be completely rebuilt with the exception of the wings. Repairs took 100 days.

Last fall some of the party came here by foot and horse and returned to the camp with two and a half tons of food supplies and equipment, taking it 250 miles by 30 pack horses. The equipment included tanks of oxygen and acetylene gas, a small air-cooled gasoline engine, power saw, grinder, drills and tools. Rations ran out and the party subsisted the last week on oatmeal porridge without milk.

WARTIME CANAL PASSAGE CAUSED BY PLOT FEARS

Fleet Review May 31

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CRISTOBAL, Panama, April 25.—Commander in Chief David F. Sellers of the United States fleet said today that he had received official word that President Roosevelt will review the fleet May 31 at New York.

COLON, C. Z., April 25.—(AP)—As the United States fleet of 111 vessels completed a 48 hour transit through the Panama canal today it was learned that warlike conditions obtaining during the movement were made necessary by fears that attempts might be made to interfere with the maneuver.

Authorities received information from the army intelligence service several months ago that a conspiracy seemed in progress to thwart the swift passage of the flotilla through the locks.

Consequently heavy guards of soldiers patroled the locks during the transit and a smaller force will remain indefinitly, it was said, to supplant guards stationed at the vital parts of the canal late in March.

One Minor Mishap.

Hitherto the locks have been without protection and any one has been able to approach them day or night.

In view of the reported plot, naval officers withheld their announcement of plans to send the ships through in a hurry until the last moment. Censorship was invoked as an extra precautionary measure.

Only one minor mishap occurred. The aircraft carrier Saratoga knocked down two concrete lamp posts at the Pedro Miguel locks.

Commander in Chief David F. Sellers expressed himself pleased with the clocklike work of men and ships.

"A Valuable Experience."

"The continuous transit of the canal by the fleet as a unit has been a very valuable experience for all hands and it is believed that very useful data have been obtained," he said.

First to go through the canal was the airplane carrier Lexington, which left Balboa at 5:11 a. m. Monday. The trainship Melville, the last, cleared Gatun locks at 5 a. m. today.

Officers had hoped the movement could be completed in half that time, but a heavy rain, the first of the season, contributed to the delay.

Commercial vessels tied up since Sunday awaiting a chance to enter the locks started their transit last night.

[Secretary of the Navy Swanson in Washington described as a "remarkable performance" the passage of the fleet, and declared "we figured that it would take two or three days."]

BRITISH LABOR DEMANDS ACTION TO AVERT WAR

Getting U. S. in League Is One of Planks.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 25.—A warning that the world is "drifting toward war" was given by leaders of the British labor movement in a statement issued tonight calling upon the government to take active steps to avert another world calamity.

Stressing that the international situation is daily growing more critical, the statement said:

"As negotiations between the principal European powers for reduction or limitation of armaments drag on without any reassuring conclusions, the various governments are increasing their expenditure for armaments, the rearmament of Germany is in process of becoming an accomplished fact, and responsible persons are indulging in threats of even more colossal expenditure on preparations against the outbreak of war."

Want U. S. in League.

Among measures to stop the drift the British government is urged to "take all possible steps to bring soviet Russia and the United States into closer association with the league of nations on the basis of the pact of Paris, to join with them in a pact devised to define and prevent aggression, and to work whole heartedly with a view to strengthening the league of nations." A supreme effort to bring the disarmament conference to a successful conclusion also is advocated.

The statement, which was issued by the National Joint council of the labor movement, followed an extensive discussion of the situation by the Labor party executive, the parliamentary Labor party, and the general council of the Trade Union congress.

Meanwhile, disarmament conversations between Fulvio Suvich, Italian undersecretary of foreign affairs, and British statesmen were concluded today. Suvich will leave for Brussels by air tomorrow to confer with Premier Count de Broqueville and Foreign Minister Paul Hymans. He will continue by train to Italy tomorrow night.

Suvich Issues Statement.

Suvich tonight issued a statement expressing his "deepest satisfaction with the very useful and friendly exchange of views with Prime Minister MacDonald, Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, and other ministers.

"We once more are albe to record a harmony of views existing between our two countries on the disarmament question, particularly as regards the necessity of reaching an agreement between all interested powers.

"The mere fact of reaching an agreement by a convention, even if this should not live up to all the expectations raised by the opening of the disarmament conference, is already in itself a fact of such importance that it must be considered a definite step toward the restoration of confidence and good will among nations."

Duke and Duchess of York Greet King, Queen of Siam

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 25.—London's Siamese colony turned out en masse at Victoria station tonight to welcome King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambaibarni from Paris. The duke and duchess of York greeted the Siamese royalty on behalf of King George and Queen Mary, while 50 Siamese students in England formed a guard of honor. The Siamese monarchs will visit the king and queen at Windsor castle tomorrow. They will sail for America in six weeks.

GASOLINE STRIKE GRIPS CLEVELAND; FEAR SHORTAGE

Cleveland, O., April 25.—[Special.]—Every gasoline pump in this county [Cuyahoga] was locked today when unions forced independent stations to close pending settlement of wage and working conditions for station attendants and tank drivers who are out on strike.

The only gasoline delivered today was to the airport for use in United States mail planes, to police and fire department garages, and to garages which will furnish fuel for the use of doctors, nurses and ambulances.

Mayor Harry L. Davis has demanded that gasoline be given to companies delivering milk, food and other necessities, but none was provided for delivery trucks today. The majority of the trucks carrying milk and food had enough on hand with which to operate today, but there will be a shortage tomorrow unles some action is taken immediately.

A number of doctors reported that they had run out of gas while on sick calls and had to leave their automobiles and summon taxicabs.

JURY INDICTS JEKYLL-HYDE MONEY GUARD

Bare Hammel's Career as Columbus Policeman.

The strange medico-legal case of Allen R. Hammel became more tangled yesterday with the injection of a third mental personality into the prosecution of the former Brink's Express company guard, who disappeared with $39,000 last Dec. 15.

The latest development came as the grand jury was reported to have voted a true bill against the prisoner for the $39,000 theft. The prisoner insists he is Burt Armstrong, a New York real estate dealer and the victime of mistaken identity.

Police of Columbus, O., identified the prisoner as Robert Lee Hammel, a cashiered member of their force. Robert Hammel, who has not been seen since his discharge from the department in 1918, has a mother in Columbus and a deserted wife and two children in Cincinnati, they said.

Further information into the love life of Hammel-Armstrong was given by Philadelphia police, who reported that the prisoner on his arrest in that city last April 9 was visited by a Miss Griffin of New York. The young woman, they said, had told them she was to be married to Armstrong in June.

New York police were asked to search for Miss Griffin, and also to obtain records of Armstrong's confinement in St. Elizabeth's hospital in New York last Dec. 27, following an attack of epilepsy. A Dr. J. F. Quinn of the hospital wired the state's attorney's office that he had treated Armstrong for the disorder.

Admits Picture Resembles Him.

When confronted with the picture forwarded by the Columbus police the prisoner viewed it with the same calmness he displayed when he was identified by his wife and children last week. He admitted the picture bore a strong resemblance to him but maintained he is neither Allen nor Robert Hammel. He also disclaimed knowledge of the Chicago and Cincinnati wives and of Miss Griffin.

The latest developments, according to Dr. Harry Hoffman of the Criminal court behavior clinic, increases interest in Hammel as a psychological study. To the psychiatrist, he said, the prisoner is a fascinating study in efforts to determine whether he is a Jekyll and Hyde personality or a masquerader.

According to Dr. Hoffman there are four possible explanations of the case. The first is that Armstrong and Hammel—both Robert and Allen, are two different physical persons; second, that the prisoner is an accomplished liar; third, that as subject to epilepsy he is suffering from amnesia and has a dual personality, and last, that he is insane.

Believes Armstrong Is Hammel.

Dr. Hoffman said he was not prepared to fit the prisoner into any of the classifications beyond stating he is convinced Armstrong and Hammel have the same physical identity, but the prisoner may have two mental identities. He added that he was inclined to dismiss the fourth classification because Armstrong was known to have made between $800 and $1,000 a month as a renting agent in New York.

Columbus police said their records show Robert Hammel was born in Circleville, O., May 22, 1885. He became a member of the department in 1910 and was known as "Handsome Bob" because of his fastidious dress even to silk underwear. He was discharged Oct. 8, 1918 after the police trial board had found him guilty of accepting a bribe and conduct unbecoming to a police officer.

His mother, Mrs. Ella Hammel, lives in Columbus and collected an insurance policy on Hammel's life, after he had been reported missing for more than seven years. The mother, the Columbus police said, is convinced her son is dead and that the prisoner is not her boy. Hammel's first wife, with her two children, moved to Cincinnati, where she still lives. Shown a picture of Hammel yesterday, the Cincinnati wife was reported to have said: "It looks exactly like my husband. I don't see how it could be any one else."

Born in New York, Says Hammel.

"All this is another unfortunate mistake," the prisoner said in his cell. "As far as I can remember I was born in New York. I don't remember my parents, but I am positive I am not either of the two Hammels."

The prisoner was vague as to his early life in New York. He could remember nothing except events after the theft here. To questions on his early life he monotonously repeated to an interviewer, "I can't remember."

He knows the present mayor of New York is La Guardia, but believes his predecessor to be "Mayor Ryan" and has no recollection of Jimmy Walker as mayor. He explained that he never had any interest in politics, having never voted. He knows the present governor of the state, but cannot recall Roosevelt or Smith being governor.

The prisoner told the interviewer where he had purchased his suit, which apparently was less than four months old. He could not remember where he bought an overcoat, obviously going through its second season, which was without an identifying label. Neither could he remember in what shop he had purchased a hat of good quality which had a gap in the leather sweat band where the name of the retailer ordinarily appears.

Remembers Epileptic Attack.

The prisoner remembered being treated in St. Elizabeth's hospital in New York for epilepsy. He said he had suffered the attack about Dec. 27 while riding on a bus to New York. He did not know where he had been visiting, but was sure he had not come from Chicago. The attack was suffered about two weeks after the theft here.

The prisoner was acquainted with details of the search for John Dillinger, Indiana desperado, but could recall nothing of the murder trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop. The murder was committed shortly before the $39,000 theft.

Mrs. Allen Hammel recently reported that her husband was "given to fainting spells" and had been treated for them in local hospitals. The state's attorney's office is seeking to determine the dates of the treatments in the belief Hammel was subject to epilepsy.

Dr. Hoffman said epilepsy is frequently followed by a mental condition in which the victim emerges from an attack with a new personality. Such amnesia, he said, is usually of short duration and its continuance over many months is unknown.

Before the grand jury acted yesterday the prisoner appeared in the Felony court before Judge Frank M. Padden. There Assistant State's Attorney Morris Gordon Meyers renewed his argument of Tuesday that the $935 found on Armstrong when he was arrested should be held to be part of the loot of Hammel. The prisoner has demanded the money, asserting it was part of his real estate profits.

Judge Padden's Ruling.

Judge Padden ruled that the ownership of the money should be determined through a civil proceeding. Although he refused to turn it over to the prisoner, the judge said he is convinced the company will have a difficult time proving the money to be part of the loot.

The prisoner made a strong plea in his own behalf. He spoke in measured tones and with an air of conviction.

"I cannot understand why I should be deprived of my liberty and my money," he said. "I am not insane and I am not Hammel. I am the victim of prevaricators and traducers. I never heard of the crime of which I am charged until I read about it in the newspapers."

OWNERS OF SMALL HOTELS ASK WRIT STAYING NRA CODE

Charge Large Concerns Try to Coerce Them.

Representatives of 4,500 small hotel owners in Chicago yesterday appealed to the United States District court for protection against alleged injustices in the National Recovery Administration hotel code. The small hotel owners, charging the hotel code was drawn by owners of large hotels and contains regulations which the former cannot obey, asked for an injunction to restrain the Chicago code authority from applying the code regulations to them.

The injunction suit, which was filed on behalf of the Emergency Council for Small Enterprises in the hotel industry, named as defendants George W. Sweeney, chairman of the national hotel code authority, and Walter L. Gregory, acting chairman of the Chicago code authority. The suit was assigned to Federal Judge John P. Barnes and counsel for both sides will appear before him tomorrow to argue a motion by David Lipman, attorney for the emergency council, for immediate granting of a temporary injunction.

Charge No Representation.

In the bill, the small hotel owners say they have been given no opportunity for "self government" such as NRA officials had said they would be allowed. They say they were given no voice in framing the code and that they have been allowed no representation on the Chicago code authority, although 90 per cent of the hotel owners in the city are small owners.

The plaintiffs also charge that the Chicago code authority, within a month after having been granted code powers, has demanded that each hotel pay an assessment of 50 cents a room for administrative costs. The plaintiffs assert the assessment is "unfair, unreasonable, and excessive, and is not based upon the volume of business done by various hotels, as such levies should be based."

Charge Threats in Letters.

When recipients of letters have refused to pay assessments, the petition said, the code authority turned to "threats and coercion," sending out letters which stated that by failing to pay the assessments the small owners were violating the code. The letters added, according to the charges, that the Chicago authority would ask the legal department for the code to prosecute them.

HOUSE LIKELY TO ACT ON WORLD FAIR BILL FOR $405,000 MONDAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—The legislation needed to continue government participation in the Chicago World Fair this summer was delayed in the house again today, but Chairman Kent Keller [Dem., Ill.] promised definite action tomorrow looking to its adoption.

Late in the day, Mr. Keller introduced a resolution calling for a special rule to make the World Fair bill a special order of business. A stratagem planned earlier, under which he would have sought consideration of the measure under unanimous consent, was abandoned at the advice of Majority Floor Leader Joseph W. Byrns.

On Friday, it was said, Mr. Keller and other congressmen from Illinois will appear before the rules committee to voice the need for the legislation, and indications are that the desired rule will be granted. If this is done, the bill, calling for an appropriation of $405,000 will be taken up in the house with a privileged status, probably on Monday.

TEACHERS TO GET PAY IN TIME FOR SPRING VACATION

Plan to Distribute Checks Tomorrow.

The board of education took action yesterday to assure that teachers and other school employés will receive their pay checks for the month of June, 1933, before the schools close for spring vacations tomorrow afternoon.

A sum of $609,986 was transferred from the working cash fund to the educational fund at the board meeting providing sufficient funds to meet the $2,300,000 pay day. Nearly $2,000,000 of the total goes to teachers. They do not receive a full month's pay, however, but only two weeks because of the closing of the schools in mid-June.

Checks for the teachers have already been prepared and will be rushed to the schools as soon as cash from the sale of 1934 tax warrants to public utilities is available, said Charles E. Gilbert, secretary to the board.

Civil Service Employés.

James B. McCahey, president of the board, said yesterday that $600,000 will soon be paid to civil service employés for the months of July and August, 1933, bringing the board's salary obligations up to the beginning of the present school year. Funds for this pay day will be obtained from a sale of tax warants to the civil service employés pension board, Mr. McCahey said. Other pay money is expected to be made available this summer from Chicago's share of the state distributive fund, increased $4,000,000 by action of the state legislature Tuesday.

Trustee Joseph P. Savage, speaking at the board meeting, predicted that increasing assurances of government aid from Washington, D. C., would mean that the Chicago schools would soon pay up all back obligations and operate on a "pay as you go" basis. Board officials were awaiting favorable word from Richard S. Folsom, board attorney, who is now in the capital seeking the enactment of two measures to provide for federal loans to schools.

Plan Lunchroom Changes.

The rules of the board were amended yesterday to permit the transfer of the school lunchroom supervision from the educational to the business department. Martin J. Harding, president of the Chicago Restaurateurs' association, announced the appointment of a committee of restaurant men to aid the board in the selection of an expert to head the lunchroom system.

The board authorized the opening of self-supporting vacation classes at Kozminski, Lawson, Libby, McPherson, Nobel, Van Vlissinger, and Von Humboldt schools on June 18. Board members and school engineers will go to Milwaukee today to inspect technical schools and seek information relative to the purchase of $850,000 of equipment for the new Lane Technical High school.

BOARD APPROVES RETIREMENT OF 3 SCHOOL TEACHERS

The board of education yesterday approved retirement applications of three teachers with long records of service in the Chicago schools. The teachers are Miss Bertha Kuntz, instructor in household arts at the Hancock branch of Phillips High school, who has been in the city schools 42 years; Miss Zella C. Baird, Fort Dearborn school, with 27 years' service, and Mrs. Jessie F. Williams, J. N. Thorp school, 34 years' service. They will receive pensions.

"Children were not so restless when I began teaching in 1891 as they are now," Miss Kuntz said yesterday. "But we find children today are more eager to learn, and their interests are not confined to text book materials alone. They try to get their own facts."

ILLINOIS SENATE PUTS O. K. ON THREE BILLS FOR SCHOOL FUNDS

Springfield, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—The prolonged struggle over school legislation in the third special session of the legislature appeared to have ended today. Three bills, companion appropriation measures to the gas tax for schools bill, were passed without a dissenting vote in the senate, with 34 senators present and voting.

The gas tax diversion bill, supported by Gov. Horner, was passed by the lower house on Tuesday. It will go to the governor for signature. The legislation takes a third from each cent of the 3 cent a gallon gasoline tax divided equally between the state, counties and cities. This cent is to be turned over to the state school distributive fund. Starting July 1 and operating for eight months, the bill will give Chicago schools $3,000,000 and downstate school districts $4,000,000.

The companion bills, passed in the senate today, provide for a reduction in the appropriation for road building and other amendments to the school law and state statutes to make them conform to the key bill diverting part of the gasoline tax to the schools.

The house also must pass the companion bills to make the gas tax diversion effective. They will be on second reading tomorrow and a vote probably will be taken Friday.

The Republican bill that all over $2,500,000 of the sales tax receipts for each month should be turned over to the schools lacked the 102 votes to give it emergency effect. The vote was 70 for and 12 against; 77 were needed to pass it.

BATTLE AGAINST STATE NRA BILL OPENS HEATEDLY

House May Cut Out Enacting Clause.

to George Young, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, explaining why he favors adoption of the proposed NRA compliance bill. Young wired the governor several days ago that the association was unalterably opposed to the measure.

"Similar measures for state coöperation with the federal government are in effect already in eleven states: New York, California, New Jersey, Ohio, Wisconsin, Colorado, Virginia, Wyoming, Washington, Utah, and West Virginia," the governor said. "Other states are now considering legislation to the same effects. Illinois, in adopting a law like those adopted in these other states would be doing only its fair share in bringing prosperity back to our land. All states ought to encourage it as they should every national effort for the public good.

"The record of NRA achievement manifested during the last eight months in increased stability and greater returns for our industries in this state, with more employment and higher wages for our workers, has been due to the uniform endeavor of the people of this and other states to support the recovery program of President Roosevelt.

"Illinois always has accepted the responsibility and employed its effort toward national recovery. This bill is a further expression of the participation by our state, with the rest of the states of the Union, in the program to restore a permanent prosperity."

PRINTERS CHARGE FARLEY OWES $893 FOR YULE CARDS

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—The Dartmouth Press, today applied to the Municipal court, Fourth district, for a summons against Postmaster General James A. Farley for alleged failure to pay $893.79 of a bill for $993.79 for 150,000 Christmas cards sent out by Mr. Farley last December.

Interested more in getting the money than in making trouble for Mr. Farley, who has been a Christmas card customer for four years, John J. McDermott, representing the Press, sent a registered letter to Mr. Farley today. It was rather carelessly addressed to "James J. Farley, president of the Democratic national committee."

YOUNGER WOMEN SEEN AT HEAD OF VOTERS' LEAGUE

Average Age of Members of Board Is Lower.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., April 25.—[Special.]—On the eve of the report of the nominating committee, due tomorrow morning, the grapevine at the National League of Women Voters' convention at the Hotel Statler indicates that the imminent shift in the executive personnel will bring the average age of board members considerably below that of the past several years. The change is considered significant but not radical.

That there has long been extant in the organization two partially conflicting schools of thought on league policy and procedure, is no secret. Miss Marguerite Wells of Minneapolis, who is practically certain to be named as successor to Miss Belle Sherwin of Cleveland as president, characterized the two groups in an address on Monday as "the impatient," and "the cautious" which between their principles, have kept the organization balanced and "in the middle of the road."

Seek Vigorous Stand.

While there is no definite classification of the members of either group as to age, the proportion of those who would prefer to have the league take a more vigorous active stand on various topics, does include a number of younger members. The possibility that the election on Friday means the inauguration of a somewhat more aggressive era is by no means remote, but will in no case be sudden and sweeping, for that is not the league tradition.

Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire took the platform tonight at the second public gathering under auspices of the league, to recount measures and policies in public relief in operation in the commonwealth he has governed for three terms. He stressed particularly the responsibility of the individual citizen in government, adding that criticism of any administration frequently is both just and useful.

Mrs. John Hewitt Rosensteil of Chicago, fourth regional director, presided at the evening session, at which Dr. Leonard B. White of the United States civil service commission formerly of the University of Chicago, advocated the development of higher personal standards in state and local as well as the federal government.

Urge College Training.

"Especially in view of the increasing activities of government," he said, "the best brains of successive graduating classes of colleges and universities should be secured for government posts. I do not mean to exclude those who do not have a college training, for there are numerous instances of a university education influencing students to think that the world owes them a living. But I do believe that the best minds of successive academic generations should be imbued with the desire to serve the general interests in such posts."

Routine convention activities were halted this afternoon to allow Dr. George F. Zook, United States commissioner of education, to voice a brief but fervent plea for local support of schools.

"Unless conditions improve rapidly," he told the assembled delegate group in the imperial ballroom of the hotel, "educational institutions will be faced with another crisis next year as serious as that which has confronted them this year. I am confident, however, that we may count on the loyal support of the schools by all good citizens who realize their fundamental significance in American life.

"I believe," he asserted, "that it would be nothing short of a national tragedy should the American people through any series of economic circumstances be led to surrender completely the local support of education. In the long run we shall doubtless think more of the schools if we keep in close touch with them through local taxation."

Education Fund of P. E. O. Is Praised by Dean Gilkey

The Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the chapel at the University of Chicago, speaking yesterday at the annual convention of the P. E. O. sisterhood of Illinois in the Palmer house, complimented the organization on its altruism in establishing a $700,000 loan fund for the education of young women. "Of greater importance than the education the borrowers receive," he said, "is the influence of this society of high minded women on the young students."

DRIVE TO COLLECT TAX JUDGMENTS WILL OPEN TODAY

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday, including those for 1932, were $1,215,791, making a total of $164,924,139 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began a year ago. The day's collections of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for four years follow:

April 25	$ 17,435	$ 26,972
Uncollected	14,511,704	39,099,762
	1930.	1931.
April 25	$ 37,599	$ 93,548
Uncollected	62,944,262	56,732,940

The day's collection of 1932 real estate taxes totaled $1,040,237, of 1932 personal property taxes $117,461, and of 1931 personal property taxes $58,068.

Efforts to collect approximately three-quarters of a million dollars due the county in unpaid court judgments won in the prosecution of 1930 and 1931 personal property tax suits will be started today, Assistant State's Attorney William J. Touhy announced last night.

Mr. Touhy said that executions would be filed against the judgments so that the county would get liens on any real estate which the delinquent taxpayer may own. In order to free the property of the lien, the owner must pay the judgment in full with penalties and interest that may have accrued, Touhy explained.

GOVERNOR, JUDGE PLAY POLITICS, ASSEMBLY TOLD

Punished for Vote, Says Legislator.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 25.—(AP)—[Special.]—A justice of the Illinois Supreme court and Gov. Henry Horner were assailed on the floor of the state senate today in charges that they played politics together.

The attack was made by Senator W. E. Clifford of Champaign, who said four men he had recommended for state jobs had been let out because he refused to support one of the governor's pet bills—diversion of a third of the gas tax to the schools.

Makes Names Public.

Clifford did not mention names in his formal speech, but off the senate floor he made public the names of the men he was accusing.

Besides the governor, his charges hit three other men. They were:

Justice Lott R. Herrick of Farmer City, who represents the third Supreme court district.

G. Lad Thomas of Urbana, attorney and son-in-law of Justice Herrick, charged with being the judge's private secretary at $4,500 a year.

Harry A. Barr, Thomas' law partner, who was recently appointd to the Illinois commerce commission at a salary of $6,000 a year.

It is said that Barr will be named chairman of the commission if Benjamin F. Lindheimer leaves the post.

Clifford began his attack by saying he had been ostracized by "those who demand the fawning service of a fidgeting marionette."

Then he lashed out against the governor and Supreme court justice.

Signed Applications of Four.

"I signed the applications [for his four jobholders] as secretary of the county committee," said Senator Clifford, "as I did that of a certain gentleman for one of the important jobs, but this man possessed more political acumen than the ordinary applicant and vaulted the last hurdle to his appointment by going before Caesar arm in arm with a judge of the Supreme court, and today he modestly proclaims that he is indebted only to this learned justice for his appointment."

Clifford then described a law firm in his district. "Mr. X," he declared, "was an appointee in the public service at $6,000 a year; Mr. Y, son-in-law of a justice of the Supreme court, was the judge's private secretary at $4,500 a year, an office steno at $1,620 a a year and her husband at $1,800.

"That law office is fairly well subsidized," remarked Clifford. "If some one were fired there it would be stepping on the gilded toes of a member of the Supreme court."

Identifies Law Firm.

It was the law firm of Barr & Thomas that he meant, Clifford stated afterward. He identified Barr as "Mr. X" and Thomas as "Mr. Y."

Reached at his home at Farmer City, Justice Herrick declined to comment on the charges, other than to say that he did not mix in politics and knew nothing of Clifford's patronage troubles.

Gov. Horner declared that several persons Clifford requested jobs for were still on the state pay roll and he called the senator's charges absurd.

"As for Mr. Barr," said the governor, "he was first appointed as an assistant commissioner and his work was so excellent that I made him a full commissioner when a vacancy occurred. Judge Herrick had nothing to do with it and I didn't know that he and Barr even knew each other."

Calls Public Confidence Impaired.

In his speech Senator Clifford had asserted that the confidence of the public in the processes of justice was being impaired.

"Are some judges willing to act the part of brazen politcians?" asked Clifford. "I cannot believe it, in spite of strong evidence. Is the chief executive of this state indifferent to the letter and spirit of our constitution? I cannot believe it.

"Is it treason to suggest that these fine and able men should live above the miasmic lowlands of political intrigue and machinations, should live so high above these lowlands that even the breath of suspicion can never ascend to their level. What are we going to do about it?"

What Senator Clifford was going to do, he said, would be to support a bill subjecting a judge to impeachment who would solicit political patronage from either the legislative or executive department of the state government.

"Cook County System."

In attacking the governor, Clifford contended that a Cook county system was being installed downstate, "a system whereby the recalcitrant representative of thousands will be punished unless he is a good soldier and goes along as told by one or two."

"It happened I chose the fork away from the diversion of the gas tax for school relief and for so doing I have been branded as a heretic, abominable in action and obstinate in thought and opposition. I must be punished, but, by a phenomenon most extraordinary as I reflect over the present scene, the correction is achieved by a species of vicarious atonement and my humble nominees, an errand boy, a meat cutter, a rodman, and a stenographer, are ruthlessly cast into the outer darkness of unemployment, the innocent victims of a vile political philosophy."

All orders came, Clifford said, from "The King in the Kingdom of Pseudomania."

Turn to Other Charges.

"The administration [Horner] has meddled in legislative politics in several districts downstate," said Senator James O. Monroe [Dem., Collinsville], but the people downstate cannot be driven or herded into any band wagon."

None of the Democratic senators rose to defend the governor, but George F. Harding, former Republican Cook county treasurer, and a newspaper publisher came in for a scorching at the hands of Senator Adelbert H. Roberts [Rep., Chicago].

Senator Roberts asserted that Harding and the publisher claimed to be able to carry 19 wards in Chicago and the latter, despite his short residence in the state, had the effrontery to aspire to the office of United States senator from Illinois.

These charges were answered by Senator Roy C. Woods [Rep., Chicago], who retorted that it had been discovered that Roberts himself and a number of his relatives were on pay rolls and so he had to make "a goat out of somebody else."

Reads from Blue Book.

Before adjournment Senator James J. Barbour [Rep., Evanston] said that the festivities should not end without the singing of selection 33 from the Illinois blue book, encyclopedia of state information. Barbour started to read as follows:

"O, to be ready, ready;
Ready to go or to stay,
Just as the master chooses,
Just as he opens the way."

No one followed him and the session adjourned.

New "Searching Machine" Proves Worth to Police

The electro-magnetic "searching machine" installed on Tuesday at the detective bureau proved its merits yesterday when James Burke, 23 years old, 4320 Clarendon avenue, arrested on suspicion, was paraded before it. The bell on the device set up a ringing, and the red light went on. A search of Burke by hand disclosed that he had two tiny bolts from a radio in his pocket. Capt. Emmett Evans said this showed the machine could detect an object as small and yet as sinister as a fine saw blade.

LAWYERS WORSE THAN SMALLPOX, SAYS LA GUARDIA

He'll Toss Them Out if They Bother Him.

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—"Lawyers have done more to retard civilization than cancer and smallpox," declared Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia today in the midst of an exchange with Aldermanic President Bernard S. Deutsch at a meeting of the sinking fund commission.

The flat statement aroused President Deutsch, who rushed to the defense of the legal profession with:

"As mayor, you shouldn't say that. Your police commissioner got into a fight with the bar association and got into a lot of trouble."

"4 Out of 5 Have It."

"That was because the lawyers didn't read the commissioner's report," snapped the mayor, delighting in the spirited exchange. "They read between the lines," he added.

By this time, the half serious, half humorous discussion became general. It wasn't a private fight between the mayor and Deutsch. Any one could get in.

And Controler Cunningham, who is a lawyer himself, put in his contribution to the defense of the embattled lawyers of the city.

"If knowledge of the law be a disease, like pyorrhea, then four out of five members of this board have it," he said, indicating the mayor, Adolf A. Berle Jr., the chamberlain, Deutsch, and himself—all lawyers, and all, except the mayor, apparently proud of it.

Cause of Debate.

The item over which the discussion started—the setup of a board of trustees to handle the financial side of erecting new buildings and stalls at Bronx Terminal market and liquidating the bonds necessary– was quite forgotten in the heat of the debate. But when it came up for discussion Corporation Counsel Paul Windel's report on the matter termed the transaction illegal.

"Well, we'll do it anyway," said the mayor. "But I suppose some pettifogging lawyer will come in here and try to stop us, I'll have him thrown out if he does.

NEW CANTON POLICE CHIEF.

Canton, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Ernest R. Cook today was appointed chief of police by Mayor Elect J. Grant Davis. He will succeed E. R. Johnson, who has served in that capacity for six years. Chief George Ruey and Assistant Chief Reuben Griggs, each members of the fire department for more than 20 years, will be retained.

BRAIN TRUSTERS YOKE BUSINESS TO GOVERNMENT

Private Industries Can't Buck Competition.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
THE COLLECTIVISTS IV.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Government in business, a policy which conservative economists have warned against for many years, is a thriving policy of the Roosevelt Brain Trust.

Mostly under the guise of emergency measures, the administration has set up creature corporations which are empowered, under their charters, to engage in almost any line of commercial enterprise under the sun. There has been no blare of trumpets to shout out the activities of these corporations, as in the case of the doings of the NRA and the AAA.

The professoriat is known to realize that the American public, having prospered for many years under a private business system, would rebel over a sudden and widespread entry by the federal government into competition with long established private industries.

But the government agencies have been pushing ahead, laying plans for increasing invasions of the fields heretofore reserved to private initiative.

Lead Tinkers' Invasion.

There are many Brain Trusters involved in these schemes to put the government in business, and among the leaders in the movement are the following:

PROF. REXFORD GUY TUGWELL, head of the Brain Trust.

INTERIOR SECRETARY ICKES.

PROF. MILBURN L. WILSON, director of the subsistence homesteads division.

HARRY HOPKINS, relief administrator.

DR. ROBERT KOHN, director of the PWA housing division.

HENRY T. HUNT, noted as a leader in many radical movements, general counsel for PWA.

Some difficulty has been encountered by these Brain Trusters in escaping the vigilance of the controler general, J. R. McCarl, who has refused to turn over government money to one of the new corporations and is threatening to withhold funds from the others.

Six Tentacle Corporations.

Mr. McCarl is a nonpolitical appointee who has been in office for 13 years and cannot be removed for another two years, except by impeachment, and is not eligible for reappointment.

Six corporations have been set up under the directions of the Brain Trusters. Five of these have been given charters under the laws of Delaware, which are known to be "easy," and to permit functions and activities not permitted in other states.

These five corporations are:

The Electric Home and Farm Authority.

The Federal Subsistence Homesteads corporation.

The Public Works Emergency Housing corporation.

The Commodity Credit corporation

The sixth government agency, incorporated in Tennessee, is the Tennessee Valley Associated Coöperatives, Inc. The Reconstruction Finance corporation, organized under the Hoover administration but taken into the embrace of the professoriat, has been broadening its scope of activities until it is now held in virtual control of the banking and credit operations of the country.

Frankfurter Man Rules.

Two of the corporations, the Electric Home and Farm Authority and the Tennessee Valley Associated Coöperatives, Inc., are under the control of the Tennessee Valley Authority. This creation of President Roosevelt is charged with conducting experiments in power control and socialization of peoples in a valley covering 42,000 square miles in five states.

The prime influence in the TVA is wielded not by Chairman Morgan but by a young radical, David E. Lilienthal, satellite of Brandeis and Frankfurter. For a brief period, Mr. Lilienthal conducted unsuccessful efforts, under the patronage of the radical La Follettes, to socialize the Wisconsin public utilities.

Recently TVA yearning for a badge of authority, similar to the Blue Eagle of NRA, adopted for its sign an upraised arm, with fist clutching a shaft of lightning and with bold square letters TVA below, an emblem typical of those employed in the soviet industries.

TVA under orders from the President is engaged in creating and distributing water power in the Tennessee valley and by summer will be selling fertilizer from the plant at Muscle Shoals. This plant constructed during the war to produce nitrates for ammunition has been inoperative ever since, because Presidents Coolidge and Hoover both agreed that its operation as a fertilizer plant would seriously injure the private fertilizer industry.

In addition to these duties, the TVA is building roads, setting up schools, organizing model villages and cities, transplanting populations, conducting agricultural experiments, all in a general Utopian scheme. The President has announced that if the TVA is successful the plan will be pushed into other fields, but the Brain Trust, without waiting to see if TVA will succeed or fail, is already preparing plans for the socialization of the Columbia river and Missouri river valleys.

Objections that the scheme is driving private business out of existence have been swept aside. Private power companies insist they cannot compete with the low rates fixed by TVA and continue to pay taxes and dividends to their millions of investors.

Workers and Industry Suffer.

The coal miners' unions have protested that the extension of power lines by the government agencies into areas now served by coal will deprive thousands of miners of their jobs. Railroad unions have complained that their workers will be forced out of jobs also as coal shipments cease while the power lines take on the work of coal in industry.

As an example of the extraordinary powers and authority possessed by the government corporations, the following powers are quoted from the charter drawn by the young radical, Lilienthal, for the Electric Home and Farm authority. The corporation is permitted:

"To aid in the distribution of electrical appliances and equipment by financing the purchase thereof through the lending and advancing of money, extending of credit and guaranteeing of obligations of individuals, firms, corporations and others upon the security of mortgages . . . and in general to carry on in connection with such financing a chattel mortgage-loan business.

Views of Business.

"To manufacture, buy, sell, deal in, and to engage in, conduct and carry on the business of manufacturing, buying, selling and dealing in electrical appliances and equipment and in goods, wares and merchandise of every class and description necessary or useful for the operation of the corporation."

The business philosophy of Lilienthal, as given by him in a speech before the American Academy of Political and Social Science at Philadelphia last Jan. 5, is this:

"Industry, by and large, is now administered by a business burocracy, and burocracy is much the same wherever you find it. Log rolling, mutual back scratching, and nepotism are common manifestations in the administration of large business under the new régime.

"In the hands of business burocrats industry grew complacent and fearful of innovations; became satisfied with its achievements, even while the disease of unemployment was destroying its very foundation.

"It became apparent that industry would not move unless it was led or pushed by an outside force. In this situation it became one of the new functions of government to supply the necessary stimulant to industry."

Functionaries Add Functions.

Under the charter granted to the Federal Subsistence Homesteads corporation, managed by Prof. Tugwell and Prof. Wilson, this agency is authorized, among many other things:

"To aid the redistribution of the overbalance of population in industrial centers by making loans for and otherwise aiding in the purchase of subsistence homesteads;

"To acquire or assist in acquiring in any manner, dispose of or assist in disposing of in any manner, build, construct, maintain, own, operate, improve, administer, and supervise subsistence homesteads, and to construct any buildings, plants, factories, or other improvements and facilities, or perform any other necessary or desirable operations or functions in connection therewith;

"To acquire or assist in acquiring in any manner, dispose of or assist in disposing of in any manner, construct, build, establish, own, operate, maintain, improve, administer, and supervise forests, parks, mines, industries, power plants, farms, commercial establishments, or any other enterprise or activities of any kind necessary or desirable to the success of such subsistence homestead projects, and to perform any other necessary or desirable operations or functions in connection therewith."

The charters of the other corporations are equally broad. Relief Administrator Hopkins is head of the Surplus Relief corporation, which is empowered to buy, sell, store, handle, and process any type of agricultural and other commodities.

The housing corporation, headed by Secretary Ickes and managed by Brain Truster Kohn can buy and sell any form of property or building materials, or make loans to any one performing those functions, and can engage in the construction, maintenance, and operation of any types of buildings.

Council Rushes Contract to Avoid Added NRA Cost

To avoid an added cost of $1,650 when the NRA electrical code becomes effective next Tuesday, the city council yesterday suspended the rules to award the contract of $22,643 to the General Electric company for equipment at the Cermak pumping station. Ald. John S. Clark [30th], finance committee chairman, pointed out the code would result in an increase of 7½ per cent over present prices.

AGREE TO REMOVE PRECIOUS METALS FROM FLOORING

The dispute over the State street mining laws was settled yesterday when agents for the Capitol building, 159 North State street, agreed to allow Herbert J. Buchsbaum, president of S. Buchsbaum & Co., manufacturing jewelers, to take the gold, silver, and platinum from the floors of Rooms 410 and 411. Mr. Buchsbaum agreed to replace the old flooring with new.

The controversy arose when Mr. Buchsbaum prepared to move his jewelry manufacturing concern out of the quarters which they have occupied for 42 years. Gold, silver, and platinum dust has fallen to the floor and been ground into the wood during those years. "There is $15,000 worth of precious metals in that flooring and we are going to take it out," Mr. Buchsbaum said.

The matter was settled yesterday when Buchsbaum posted a $265 bond to insure replacement of the floor.

FOREIGN TRADE RISING RAPIDLY DESPITE TARIF

Exports Top World and Imports Are Second.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—On the eve of the battle in the senate on President Roosevelt's request for wide powers to revise the tarif downward in reciprocal international agreements, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States reported today that our foreign trade is rapidly recovering.

Our domestic exports last year exceeded those of any other nation and in volume of imports the United States was surpassed by only one—Great Britain.

In the degree of foreign trade improvement in 1933 over 1932 "we rank well with the important importing and exporting nations."

"On an actual quantity basis," said the chamber, "a majority of our export and import lines have shown a distinct improvement over 1932 and a strong upward movement toward the higher levels of the five year average.

Raw Materials Moving Fast.

"In both our exports and imports raw materials and foodstuffs, essential to the industries and the daily life of the populations of other countries and of our own, constitute the big bulk of international exchanges and show how utterly impossible complete isolation is."

The report attributes much of the improvement in our export trade to the depreciation in the value of the dollar, but is silent on the influence of the NRA, the AAA and other agencies of the New Deal for the regimentation of industry. Leading business men, the American Bar association and other important groups are complaining that revival of the heavy industries is being retarded by the fettering provisions of the securities act and other New Deal legislation.

The American Federation of Labor has just begun an investigation to determine whether it is the securities act that is hampering the financing of expansion by the capital goods industries. If the federation sides with the employing group on this question there is little doubt that congress will amend the securities act in such manner as to eliminate the teeth put into it by the Roosevelt brain trust.

Finds 1933 Turning Point.

The Chamber of Commerce report emphasizes the significance of 1933 as a turning point in American foreign commerce. It shows that the steady decline in both export and import trade was definitly checked in the middle of the year, and was replaced during the last half by a substantial recovery movement. This paralleled in part, the chamber reports, the improvement in domestic trade and the change in economic conditions in many major sections of the world.

"A very appreciable impetus," the review says, "was given to export trade by the falling value of the dollar. So long as that value was uncertain, however, customers abroad were inclined to wait for still lower values before placing orders for merchandise; for the most part long term contracts were not feasible.

"Increased import duties abroad, quotas, preferential tarif agreements and exchange controls handicapped our export trade. The working of the British empire agreements would appear from the statistics to have definitly decreased our export business with the empire without having affected materially our purchases from the empire.

Demand Balancing Factor.

"In so far as the lower international value of the dollar discouraged the buying of foreign goods there may have been some tendency for imports to decline; however, business activity in the United States and the resultant demand for foreign produced raw materials and food products quite overbalanced this factor. Purchases in anticipation of higher prices in the United States undoubtedly had some influence in keeping our import trade at higher levels."

The review shows that, on an actual quantity basis, 118 out of 176 chief exports, or 67 per cent, were shipped abroad in greater quantities than in 1932, and that 38 out of 172 items, or 22 per cent, moved abroad in quantities in excess of the average for the five years, 1928-1932.

"Import figures show somewhat higher percentages of gains. Out of 154 chief imports, 108, or 70 per cent, were brought into the country in greater quantities than in 1932. In comparison with the five year average, 48 out of 154 items, or 32 per cent, came in greater volume," the review closes.

Set New Records.

All time export and import records, it is pointed out, were made during the year by a number of important commodities.

"The extent of our export trade recovery," the report says, "is definitly shown by the number and size of the increases in the quantities of merchandise shipped abroad. The gains over 1932 ranged up to 438 per cent.

"Exports of unmanufactured cotton for 1933 reached the huge total of 4,523,000,000 pounds, one of the largest amounts ever exported in a single year, although 6 per cent under the new record 1932 figure. It exceeded the 1928-'32 average exports by 10 per cent. In value, $398,212,000, this one commodity constituted nearly one-fourth of the total value of our export trade in 1933.

"A decided pickup was recorded by automotive exports in 1933, reversing the downward trend of recent years—significant of increased purchasing power in foreign markets. During 1933, 64,511 passenger cars were exported, an increase of 56 per cent above the small sales in 1932; still 67 per cent below the five year average exports. Motor trucks and buses made even a better showing, the 43,616 trucks and buses exported being 75 per cent greater than in 1932, though 56 per cent less than the five year average shipments.

Aircraft Gains Continue.

"American aircraft continued the steady advances made in recent years. During 1933 we exported 406 airplanes and seaplanes, an increase of 45 per cent over 1932 and 62 per cent larger than the 1928-'32 average.

"One of the encouraging features in our 1933 export trade was the increased sales abroad of American machinery and of iron, steel, copper and other metal products. During 1933 we exported more than 1,500,000 tons of heavy iron and steel products, or more than double the quantity exported in 1932; much less, however, than the 5 year average exports.

"Exports of foodstuffs, especially manufactured foodstuffs, were maintained in a number of cases above the 1932 figures. Despite restrictions of one kind or another in some of our best markets, exports of lard were 6 per cent above 1932 but 14 per cent less than the 5 year average.

"Meat exports were 21 per cent larger than in 1932, though below the 1928-1932 average quantities. Nuts made the most consistent gain among foodstuffs, 69 per cent above 1932 and 96 per cent above the 1928-1932 average quantity exported. Cocoanut oil and oil cake and oil-cake-meal exports made good gains. Heavy losses were recorded by both wheat and wheat flour exports, the former declining 89 per cent under the 5 year average.

Interesting Import Figures.

"On the import side of the ledger some interesting comparative figures are shown.

"Raw silk imports, with price fluctuating from $1.16 to $1.76 a pound, declined to 67,245,000 pounds, 9 per cent under the 1932 quantity and 15 per cent below the 1928-1932 average. Imports of standard newsprint paper were 0.1 per cent above 1932, but 16 per cent under the 5 year average. Wood pulp increased 30.9 per cent over 1932 and 13.5 per cent above the average.

"Increases in materials for our factories predominate among our imports. Many commodities were not only imported in large quantities in 1933 than in 1932, a low year, but they also exceeded the 5 year average receipts. Items with notable quantity gains over both periods include pig iron, nickel, wire, rods, platinum, copra, palm oil, tung oil, cod oil, quebracho extract, acids, cork, kapok, rayon hat materials, straw hats, linens, cotton rugs and gloves, binding twine, malt and spices.

"The following imports in 1933 were larger than in 1932, but fell below the 5 year average quantities: iron ore, aluminum, unrefined copper, ferro manganese, manganese ore, asbestos, flaxseed, manila, jute, cotton cloth, wool hosiery, wool fabrics, lether boots and shoes, nitrate of soda, shellac, china and porcelain, earthen crockery and stone ware, dyeing materials, cocoanut oil, wheat, wheat feeds, beans, an canned meats."

TENNESSEE HOSIERY MILL CALLS JOHNSON HAND IN TELEGRAM

Harriman, Tenn., April 25.—[Special.]—In a telegram today to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the Harriman Hosiery mill, ordered to surrender its Blue Eagle for alleged violation of the code, placed upon the NRA administration full responsibility as to whether or not it continues to operate.

The telegram asked whether or not the mill should operate "with this stigma" or close down and throw upon charity the 600 employés who are still working there despite a textile union strike order.

1,400 GUESTS PAY $50 A PLATE TO HEAR RABBI WISE

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, president of the American Jewish congress, spoke last night at a dinner in the Stevens hotel attended by 1,400 guests who paid $50 a plate. The meeting culminated a drive begun Jan. 25 by Hadassah, a Jewish women's organization, which raised $22,000 for the relief of Jews in Palestine.

Dr. Wise described Palestine's place in the general scheme of Jewish life, asserting that the city had served well as a refuge for German-Jewish refugees. He praised the Hadassah organization for the service it had rendered in medical care and mercy to all people in Palestine without regard to race or creed.

"The time has come," he said, "for Christian people to remember that as Christians they owe something to their non-Aryan brothers as the founders of Christianity."

Special New York City Tax Bill Signed by Governor

Albany, N. Y., April 25.—(AP)—Gov. Lehman today signed the special New York City tax bill enabling the city to raise an estimated $17,000,000 to balance its budget. The city is expected to impose a tax of one-twentieth of 1 per cent on the gross income of business concerns earning over $10,000.

ROBBERY TRIAL WITNESS JAILED AS A PERJURER

Judge Donald S. McKinlay in the Criminal court yesterday sentenced Richard Thrush, 26 years old, 4049 Sheridan road, to thirty days in the county jail for contempt of court arising out of perjured testimony. Thrush was a defense witness Tuesday for George Wilch and James Long, who were charged with robbing two drug stores on March 24. They were convicted and each was sentenced to one year to life in Joliet penitentiary. Thrush admitted that he had perjured himself in testifying that he was drinking with Wilch at the time of the robberies.

NRA WEAKENING UNDER STRESSES, JOHNSON SAYS

Plans Steel Code Change in Coming Parley.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.] — The NRA checkmated and under heavy attacks, is beating hasty retreats along several lines, its commander in chief, Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, confessed today.

President Roosevelt's drive, started two months ago to spread employment by forcing a shorter working week on industry, has collapsed. The steel code, charged with promoting a monopoly, is to be modified before the week is out. The penal powers of the NRA are to be dropped or soft pedaled. These three major defeats were all admitted today by the chief of the recovery program. In addition, the bombastic general, subdued and soft spoken, frankly revealed to newspaper men at one of his rare press conferences a host of minor problems which still are harrassing the NRA.

Takes Up Motor Strike.

On only two occasions did Gen. Johnson strike a defiant or hopeful note. He said he hoped to settle the automobile strikes at Cleveland and Detroit within 24 hours, and he declared that charges against the NRA for fostering monopolies were "all bunk."

In admitting that the President's drive to speed reëmployment by shortening the work week of industry had been laid aside, Gen. Johnson said that he had come to realize that the President's demand would work much greater hardship on industry than he had first anticipated.

"The question of reducing hours is going to have to wait awhile," Gen. Johnson confessed. "So much information on the matter has been sent in. The question isn't going to sleep, however. But it isn't going to be as easy as I first thought it would be for industry—I'll say that."

Wants Industry Hours Cut.

After the President at code conferences in February had demanded that industry cut down its working hours, employ more men, and maintain existing wage schedules, Gen. Johnson called on every industry to comply or to explain why it could not comply. Swamped in explanations, he has now decided that, with the exception of those few industries which have voluntarily complied, nothing further can be done at this time.

Questioned on the steel code, which has been attacked by the federal trade commission and in congress, Gen. Johnson admitted frankly that "there are some things in it which have to be changed."

He is going to New York on Friday to discuss those changes with the steel interests, he said, adding that the steel companies already have agreed to changes, which, in Gen. Johnson's opinion, will rectify most of the mistakes.

Denies Favoring Monopoly.

The general admitted that the basing point price system set up in the steel code was wrong, but he lashed out when he was asked his reaction to charges that the steel code stifled small industries in favor of a monopoly. No NRA code has favored monopoly, he rapped out.

If small industries are squeezed out because they can no longer pay less than the NRA minimum wage in order to undersell large concerns, that is merely too bad, Gen. Johnson said. He quoted President Roosevelt as saying that no industry which pays less than a living wage can be permitted to continue.

MAINE'S FIRST NRA VIOLATION CASE PUT UP TO U. S. ATTORNEY

Portland, Me., April 25.—(AP)—The first code violation case in Maine and perhaps the first in the country to be refered to a United States district attorney since authority to take summary action was vested in such federal officers, today was turned over to United States District Attorney John D. Clifford Jr., for disposition.

The Excel Dyeing and Cleaning company of Portland, a concern with branches throughout New England, was found guilty by the local code compliance board of violating the provisions of fair competition for the industry in this area. The complaint against the company was brought by the local code administration board for the cleaning and dyeing trade.

Howard H. Waldron, secretary of the compliance board, said after the hearing today that the Excel company was charged specifically with violating that section of the industry's code affecting price fixation. The hearing was private.

GANG'S BULLETS PILE UP MARITAL WOE FOR A COP

When a bunch of the south side beer boys riddled the home of Edward [Spike] O'Donnell with machine gun bullets one warm summer night in 1931 they probably had no idea that they were storing up marital woe for Policeman James P. Walsh of the Brighton Park station.

Policeman Walsh happened to choose that night—July 26, 1931—to be parked in front of Spike's home at 8143 South Honoré street with a young woman whom he had met earlier at a dance hall.

As the gangsters' car sped by, blazing away at the O'Donnell home, Spike, clad in pajamas and with a pistol in hand, raced outside, leaped on the running board of Policeman Walsh's car and pursued the other machine for some distance.

ment, sponsored by the radical group led by Senators Borah, Norris and La Follette.

And there was only a slight change in the senate amendment eliminating a clause in the revenue act which allowed holding companies to file consolidated income tax returns. The conference agreed to allow railroads to file consolidated returns, it being pointed out that railroads are forced by the law to incorporate in each state they pass through.

Others to File Separately.

All other holding companies must file a separate tax return for each corporation represented. This action had been attacked by Senator Harrison himself on the floor of the senate but the militant high-taxers in the senate insisted that this amendment, sponsored by Senator Borah, be retained. An estimated added 35 million dollars will result from this amendment.

The income tax publicity amendment also was retained with slight changes. The conference agreed that the detailed income tax returns of individuals and corporations should not be available for public inspection but that each return must be accompanied by a statement, containing the following items, which shall be subject to public inspection:

[1] Name and address; [2] total gross income; [3] Total deductions; [4] net income; [5] total credits against net income; [6] tax payable.

Sources Kept Secret.

Thus the sources of income of a corporation or individual will be kept secret but the tax paid and other information will be available, it was pointed out. It was said that the failure of a man like J. P. Morgan to pay an income tax will be made public although the operations through which he maneuvered to make this possible will not be published.

The senate receded slightly from its position on taxing trading in commodities futures. The house had proposed a tax of $5 per $100 traded and the senate had reduced this to $1, or 1 per cent. Upon the insistence of the house delegation, the tax was raised to 3 per cent.

The highly controversial 3 cents a pound domestic processing tax on imported coconut oil aroused much discussion at the conference. President Roosevelt had warned the senate that this tax violated the principles of the Philippine Islands independence act. The ilands sent to the United States yearly about 520 million pounds of coconut oil.

Let Philippine Tax Stand.

The conferees finally agreed to let the 3 cents tax stand upon oil imported from the Philippines but to raise the tax on coconut oil imported from other countries to 5 cents a pound. This was termed by Senator Harrison as giving the ilands "a break." A provision was retained that all revenue from the tax on oil from the Philippines be returned to the iland government.

The luxury taxes on soft drinks, furs, jewelry, and candy were reduced, affording a reduction of 14 million dollars in estimated revenue. Cancelation of the bank checks tax lost another 5 millions in revenue.

HARRY PAGET'S BODY EXHUMED IN POISON QUIZ

The body of Harry E. Paget, former Chicagoan, who died in St. Petersburg, Fla., on Jan. 30, was exhumed yesterday from a mausoleum in the Oak Hill cemetery at the request of a brother, George H. Paget, 41 East Schiller street.

George Paget told Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan of the Criminal court, who ordered the exhumation, that he had information his brother might have been poisoned. An examination of the body was made last evening by Dr. Jerry Kearns, coroner's physician, who said microscopic tests would have to be made to determe whether poison was present. These tests will require about ten days, Dr. Kearns said.

LAGGARDS OVERHAUL LEADERS IN TRIBUNE PAPER CARRYING RACE

BY HARRY A. LAIRD.
[Traffic Manager, Chicago Tribune.]

News from the four vessels of THE TRIBUNE's newsprint fleet that have been racing for the honor of delivering in Chicago the first cargo of 1934 was not encouraging at a late hour yesterday. Efforts of the Shelter Bay and Thorold to establish a big lead on the trip through Lakes Erie and Huron have come to naught because the ice barrier in the narrows leading to the Straits of Mackinac from the east is proving too heavy for their power, and the other vessels now have caught up to them.

The situation presents a problem for the captains. The vessels are now about eight miles east of Mackinaw City where there is open water that extends from Mackinac island to St. Helena, but the ice pack, although honeycombed, is fourteen inches in thickness.

Even after they win through the first barrier to the open water at Mackinaw City, the ships must face another stretch of ice that extends from St. Helena for a distance of twenty-four miles to the west toward Lake Michigan. The weather is raw and cold and the lack of high winds usual at this time of the year is delaying the opening of navigation.

POLICEMAN SHOT WITH OWN GUN; WOMAN ARRESTED

It is not quite clear how Mary Johnson, 25 years old, of the Albany hotel, got possession of the pistol that usually is carried in the holster of Policeman Charles Dixon of the Lawndale district. But what she did with it after she got it early yesterday is no mystery.

First, she fired at Dixon, who was with her in a room at the Hoover hotel, 3358 West Jackson boulevard. This made Dixon angry and he went downstairs and summoned policemen. When Patrolmen Edward Fiala and Fred Wright tapped on Miss Johnson's door she sent two bullets through the panel.

Fiala and Wright went to the lobby, sent a decoy telephone message to the gunwoman, and when she descended to meet the caller seized her. At the West Chicago avenue station she said she was sorry her aim hadn't been better because she cherished an ambition to "kill a couple of coppers and shoot my way out of a trap like Dillinger."

Charges are to be placed with the police trial board against Dixon, according to his superior officer, Capt. John Ryan.

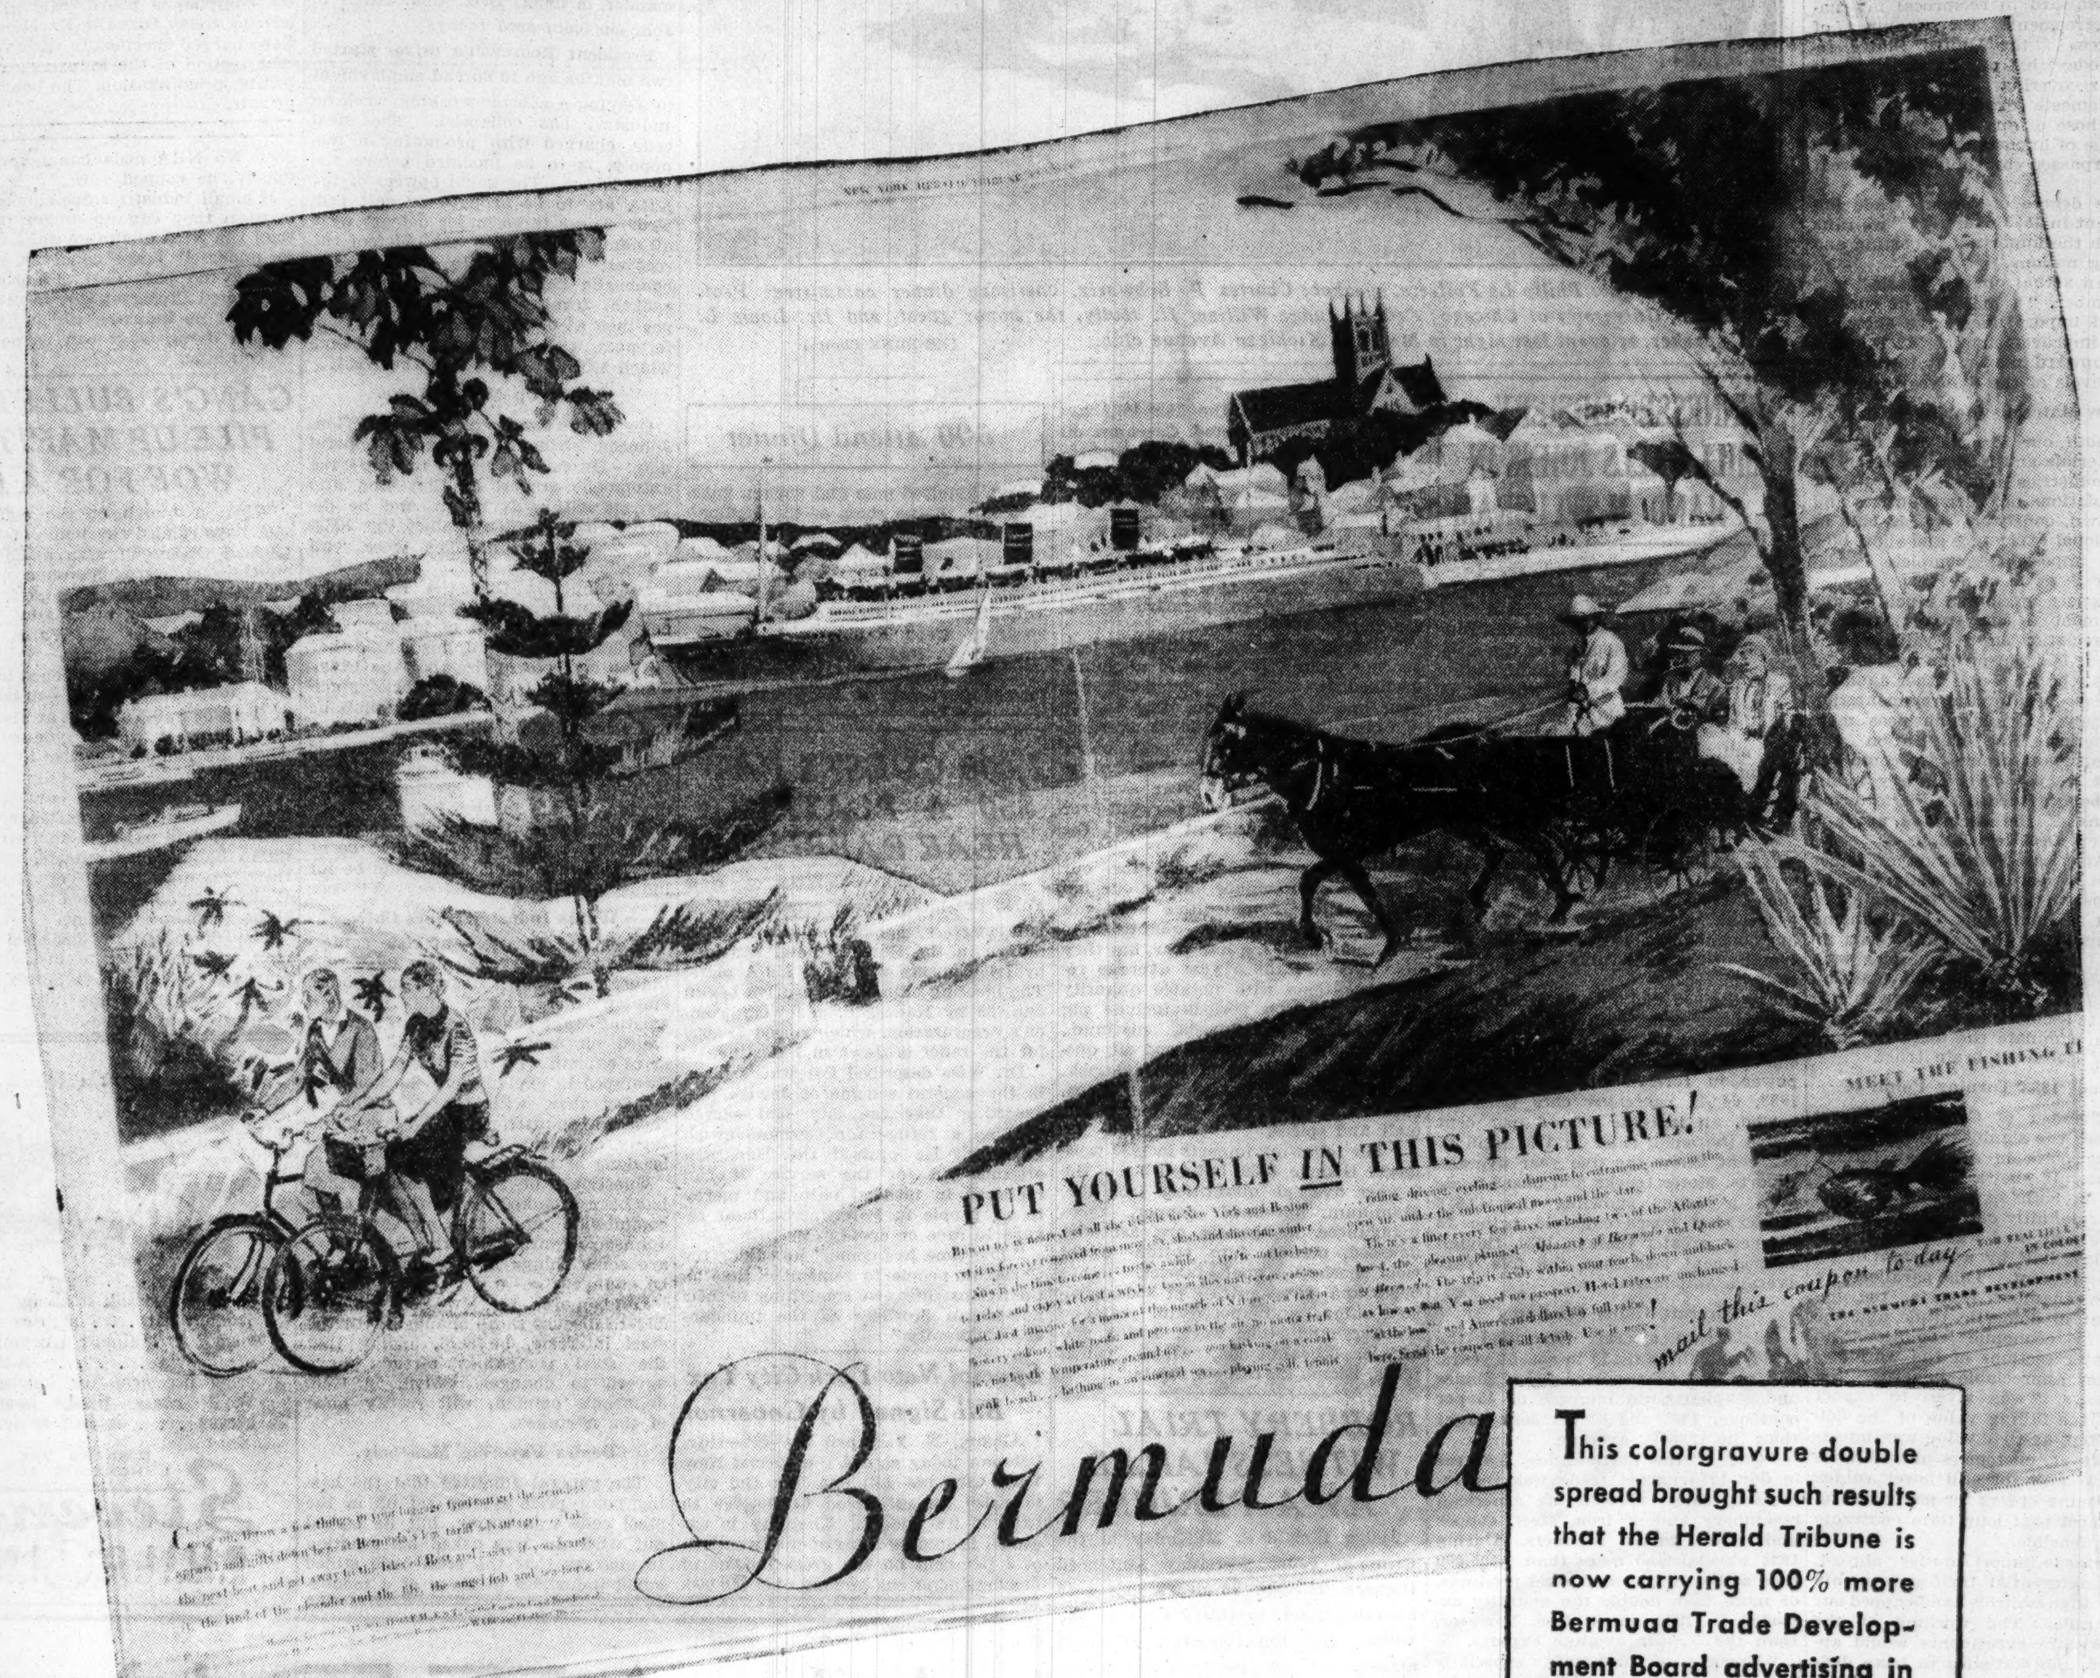
Herald Tribune COLORGRAVURE helps make Bermuda a "sell-out"



This colorgravure double spread brought such results that the Herald Tribune is now carrying 100% more Bermuaa Trade Development Board advertising in colorgravure than any other newspaper.

"Bermuda is practically a 'sell-out' till early May . . . you can feel confident that the colorgravure advertisements in the Herald Tribune played their part—a part as satisfying and noteworthy as any publisher could wish . . . The impression created by the special section of January 14th was truly a sensation . . ."

The quotation is from the letter of February 21, 1934, of the Wales Advertising Company, about the Bermuda Trade Development Board's campaign in the New York Herald Tribune.

What does the record of this Bermuda campaign mean to every merchant and manufacturer? Just this: A visit to Bermuda does not cost a fortune—but it does call for at least SOME surplus buying power—for ability to ACT upon advertisements of food, shelter, clothing and other basic items of comfortable living. Real buying power, however elusive it may be in some quarters, is found in exceptional volume in the Herald Tribune audience. That's why good results are the rule for Herald Tribune advertisers.

PUBLISHERS URGE INCREASED GUARD OVER FREE PRESS

Unanimously Resolve to Watch Rights.

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—The American Newspaper Publishers association today adopted unanimously a resolution commending its officers and code committee for their successful fight to incorporate the freedom of the press in the NRA codes for newspapers. The resolution also urged members to be increasingly vigilant in protecting a free press as a basic principle of American liberty and democracy.

Discussion was led by Howard Davis, business manager of the New York Herald-Tribune, in his address as president of the association and in his report as chairman of the code committee, and by Col. R. R. McCormick, publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in his report as chairman of the committee on freedom of the press.

Col. McCormick introduced the freedom of the press resolution in the course of his report, in which he charged that if the newspaper publishers had not made the fight they did last summer they would be in the same position today as the New Jersey tailor who was sent to jail for pressing a suit of clothes for 35 cents, or the New York milk dealer who was prosecuted for selling a quart of milk for 9 cents.

Tells of Three Attempts.

Arguing that the press could never, under the constitution, be compelled to accept special governmental control, Col. McCormick cited three instances that he said constituted efforts on the part of governmental authorities to suppress freedom of the press and speech. These were a threat of prosecution against an Alabama paper for editorials criticizing the NRA, withdrawal of press privileges from a Washington correspondent of a special service who criticized Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, and withdrawal of the Blue Eagle from a Massachusetts tailor who complained against the NRA in an advertisement.

Col. McCormick asserted that the press had not made its fight for itself alone, but for the whole people of the United States, as freedom of the press was not an exclusive right of newspapers, but belonged to any citizen who wished to criticize any act of congress—and was the bulwark of all the constitutional rights of the American people.

Replying to President Roosevelt's comment in approving the freedom of the press reservation in the newspaper codes that it meant freedom of expression, which would be scrupulously respected, but did not mean freedom "to work children or do business in a firetrap, or violate the laws against obscenity, libel, and lewdness," Col. McCormick asserted that this was a half-truth. He argued that freedom of the press could be abridged by any law or code that unreasonably raised the cost of production or unreasonably decreased the return from publishing by any interference with the transmission of news by telegraph or otherwise, or "any unreasonable interference with the freedom of the press which may ever be invented."

"Want to Coöperate."

Mr. Davis, in describing the long fight made by the publishers to safeguard the freedom of the press in the codes, declared that all the publishers wanted to coöperate with President Roosevelt in his recovery program and had proved this by accepting the codes despite the opinion of counsel that the newspapers did not come under the provisions of the NRA. In insisting on a specific reservation of freedom of the press in the codes, he continued, the publishers were living up to their highest obligations under the bill of rights to maintain a free press for the American people.

Col. McCormick in his report said:

"It is because publishing has certain threats to arbitrary government that our constitution saw fit to single it out for a special protection against the government. For, as Jefferson said, 'Our liberty depends upon the freedom of the press, and this cannot be limited without being lost.'"

Col. McCormick then told of the negotiation of the code, of the insistence of the publishers' committee of a stipulation protecting the freedom of the press, and of the final agreement of Gen. Johnson to incorporate such a provision, although disclaiming the necessity therefor.

IN SCALDING CASE

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Cecil and Mrs. Fanny Kitz of Milwaukee, who are charged with scalding an 11 year old boy during Halloween in 1932, were arraigned before Judge James F. Fardy in the Criminal court yesterday, and their attorney, Milton Smith, announced they would plead guilty to charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

Judge Fardy granted Mrs. Kitz probation, but sentenced her husband to 60 days in the county jail. Attorney Smith then said he had advised the husband to plead guilty in the hope that he, too, would receive probation or a fine and asked for permission to withdraw Kitz' plea of guilty.

"You will have to withdraw both pleas if you want to withdraw one," Judge Fardy said. The attorney did this and the case was assigned to Judge Grover C. Niemeyer.

The boy scalded by the Kitzes was Robert H. Jacoby, 4959 Lake Park avenue, who had been caught soaping the windows of a store at 5006 Harper avenue, owned by Kitz' sister. The Kitzes were tried on the assault charges last December, but the jury disagreed.

FOX RIVER GROUPS SEEK METHODS TO CONSERVE WATER

Continued lack of rainfall is causing the Fox river from Elgin south almost to Aurora to dry up and organizations of that district yesterday were seeking opinions as to what steps might be taken to conserve the remaining water.

At Geneva a meeting of the Fox river and chain of lakes commission, and the Fox valley federation instructed State Senator Arnold Bennet to confer with Robert Kingery, director of the division of waterways, and Atty. Gen. Otto Kerner, in Springfield yesterday.

Senator Bennett was to determine, among other things, what might be done concerning industries along the river which use quantities of water daily. An investigation also was considered to determine whether the resorts around McHenry, north of Elgin, were holding water back of their dams illegally.

N. YORKERS KICK WITH BOTH FEET AT CAB FARE RISE

Drivers and Companies Lose Heavily.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—New Yorkers are balking strenuously at the new 5 cent taxicab increase imposed by the city's obliging board of aldermen.

Fifteen hundred cabs have been forced to retire from the streets for lack of business since the new schedule went into effect.

Thousands of owner operators and small fleet owners operating principally in the less congested districts have had to restore the old rates in order to survive.

Drivers Lose Heavily.

The drivers generally have lost heavily on curtailed tips due to a growing practice of withholding the extra 5 cents collected by the companies from their gratuities. Nickel tips are given unblushingly in many instances, the drivers complain—something unheard of to the present taxi generation.

An official of one of the largest companies of the city estimated today that the business of his company, which operates some 2,000 of the total of 13,000 cabs on the streets, fell off at least 20 per cent in the first two months after the increased rates went into effect, Oct. 1 of last year. There was some pickup in December, due in part to the holiday season, he said, but labor troubles beginning in January and culminating in two strikes, one in February and another in March, made heavy inroads on the earnings of this and every other company of the city. Figures for April are not available as yet, but this particular official expressed the opinion that the showing of his company for this month would reflect substantial improvement.

Hope for Better Times.

A canvass of other large companies in the field revealed a marked disposition to minimize present earnings in favor of "prospects of better times ahead." Maurice Hotchner, general counsel and executive chairman of the United Taxi Board of Trade, readily admitted that none of the companies were making money, but insisted the industry's earnings had been nil virtually ever since the beginning of the depression. In fact, Mr. Hotchner said that some of the larger concerns had been losing money "for years." The head of one of them, Morris Markin, president of the Parmelee system, told the mayor's survey committee the other day that his corporation, which claims to be the largest in the field, had lost 3 million dollars annually for the last five years on its New York taxicab business.

While spokesmen for some of the companies claim—and cite statistics in support—that business has been picking up in the last few weeks, it is admitted their gains are due in no small measure to the elimination from competition of more than 6 per cent of the taxicabs which were operating before the new rates went into effect. As three big companies, the Parmelee, the Radio, and the Terminal systems, divide the major end of the business, the share of each from the elimination of this competition would in normal circumstances be considerable.

Bit of City Camouflage.

The new fare increase, making the first meter drop 20 instead of 15 cents and revising the schedule to call for 35 cents for the first mile instead of 30 and 20 cents for each succeeding mile, was passed originally as a camouflaged city tax. The O'Brien administration, with the city's banker creditors bearing down on it, found itself facing the alternative of being compelled to raise new revenue in a hurry or have the city thrown into bankruptcy.

An election was coming on, however, and with the talk of Tammany extravagance filling the air, the subject of additional taxes was a touchy one around the city hall. Some one in authority conceived the happy idea of "camouflaging" a tax on taxi fares by making the companies collect the additional assessment from the passengers and then turning it over to the city. The increased assessment would thus operate as a tax against the corporation but appear as an increased fare to the original payee, the passenger. It was a brilliant scheme and Samuel Untermyer, the city's financial adviser, estimated that when shorn of the sugar-coating it would net the city seven milion dollars a year.

But the taxi companies objected to being used as a catspaw for an extravagant city government in any such fashion, and took the matter to court. The upshot was an injunction restraining the city from collecting the tax but curiously enough passing over the sections of the ordinance authorizing the companies to collect the added 5 cents per ride.

Go Right On Collecting.

Whereupon the companies went blithely on collecting and banking the extra nickels as fast as they could rake them in. Some $350,000 was collected in the first four weeks of the new order of things. The pickings since that date have not been made public in view of the knockout of the tax clause. The companies submit, plausibly enough, that since the collection is their own business there is no reason for making segregated reports on income under the head of increased fares.

BOOST OF 10 CTS. A TRIP URGED IN TAXICAB RATES

Vehicle Commission Plan Sent to Council.

Declaring that present taxicab rates do not afford a living wage for the drivers or a fair return to the operators, the public vehicle commission presented to the city council yesterday a plan for higher and uniform charges.

The commission, composed of Police Commissioner Allman, City Controler Upham, and Corporation Counsel Sexton, also recommended that no more cab licenses be issued than were outstanding on Dec. 31, 1933. That number was 4,108.

Commission Proposes Rates.

The first point made by the commission was that there must be a uniform schedule of meter rates for all taxicabs in the city to eliminate any possibility of unfair competition. The commissioners then suggested this schedule:

Fifteen cents for the first one-third mile; 5 cents for each third of a mile thereafter; 5 cents for each two minutes' waiting time, and 5 cents for all extra passengers, whether one or more, for the entire trip.

It was suggested that these rates be put into operation as an experiment for as long as necessary to ascertain if they are fair to drivers, operators and the riding public.

The present taxicab rate is 15 cents a mile, with a 10 cent minimum charge in the case of the Yellow Cab company. Therefore the proposed new rate would add 10 cents to each trip charge for a single passenger.

"Present Rates Inadequate."

"It is obvious," the commission reported, "that aside from the unusual run of business during the World's Fair, the present rates are entirely inadequate."

Quoting from the records of the Yellow Cab company—the only records available—the commission showed that the average taxi trip is 2.1 miles, and the average fare is 38.9 cents a trip. This, the cab company declared, gave an average loss of 2.34 cents a trip.

No action was taken by the council on the vehicle commission's report. It is expected the matter will be referred to the local transportation committee early next week.

Due to an error by the Associated Press the roll call of the House of Representatives on the gas tax for schools bill in yesterday's editions recorded Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg as "absent or not voting." Schnackenberg was present and voted for the bill.

AAA BUILDS UP CASE AGAINST CHICAGO DAIRY

Attorneys for the agricultural adjustment administration yesterday made definite charges that the Edgewater Dairy company, 5348 Ravenswood avenue, failed to pay its farmer producers the price established for the Chicago milk area by the AAA.

Alfred Kahlert, president of the company, is defending himself before AAA attorneys against the charge of violating the milk marketing agreement, which sets the price to be paid to farmers. If violation is proved, Kahlert's license to do business may be revoked by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Thereafter he may be fined $1,000 a day if he continues in business, or he may be made subject, as in the case of other defendants, to a federal court injunction laying him open to a jail sentence if he continues the alleged violations.

Hearing of Case Resumed.

The hearing of Kahlert's case, which began on Tuesday, was resumed yesterday in the United States customs court room at 610 South Canal street. Elmer D. Hays, AAA attorney, is presiding at the hearing, and one of his colleagues, W. Carroll Hunter, is presenting the evidence of alleged violations.

The day's testimony of alleged "chiseling" on the price paid to farmers by the Edgewater dairy was built on testimony taken Tuesday from Carl M. Wick, office manager of the company. Wick testified that all the milk which the company bought from farmers living near Woodstock, in McHenry count, was bottled and sold as fluid milk, denominated class I. milk under the marketing code.

The company paid $1.50 a hundred pounds [3.23 cents a quart] for this milk. The milk code sets a price of $1.75 a hundred pounds [3.76 cents a quart] for such class I. milk. Wick testified that the company did not separate any of the milk it bought from farmers to obtain cream, but bought cream from other milk distributors.

AAA Auditor Takes Stand.

Yesterday Robert P. Alexander, auditor who handles the pool and adjustment account of the Chicago AAA milk administrator, Frank C. Baker, testified to some hypotheses arrived at on the basis of Wick's testimony.

The pool and adjustment account is a rather complicated accounting setup under which milk dealers who buy only enough milk to meet their bottling requirements pay to the AAA assessments made against their farmers.

These assessments go to dealers handling a large amount of surplus, and eventually to the farmers supplying those dealers. The effect of the arrangement is to charge every farmer in the Chicago area for his proportionate share of the surplus milk production, not required for bottled use and therefore sold at lower prices, regardless of whether he, individually, is responsible for any of the surplus production.

Charges $1,200 Withheld.

Using approximate figures for the Edgewater company's purchases of milk, based on Wick's testimony, Auditor Alexander estimated that for the months of February and March the company had withheld from the pool more than $1,200 which under the AAA pool plan would have gone to fatten the milk checks of farmers who product the surplus milk of the market.

The Edgewater case was set aside temporarily after Attorney Seelig had presented part of his defense testimony, and hearing was started on charges of violations against the Joliet Dairy Products company. A third defendant, Frank Smid, milk and cream broker at Kansasville, Wis., is also scheduled for hearing at this week's sessions before the AAA representatives.

ILLINOIS APPLE TREES IN BLOOM CALL TOURISTS

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Anna, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Hills of southern Illinois, foothills of the Ozarks, are adorned with blossoming apple orchards, making their annual bid for tourist trafic from Chicagoland. This week-end will probably be the last opportunity this year to enjoy the sight. For a few warm days will whisk the white petals from the trees.

This small city, near the tip of this state, a tip formed by the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, is 355 miles from Chicago with fast pavement all of the distance. It is far enough south so that the spring is two to three weeks ahead of the Lake Michigan area.

Touring Into Spring.

The highway north and south of here, U. S. 51, dips and bends in gentle curves and grades affording broad vistas that resemble mountain scenery. Spring flowers are abloom and the woods are turning a variety of shades of green.

The orchards on the hillsides in this section of Illinois produce one of the state's important agricultural crops. It will be a rich harvest this year, because other fruit areas, including Michigan, New York, New Jersey, and Maryland, suffered from the severe subzero wave of late February.

H. H. Lamer Jr., a grower north of here and vice president of the Southern Illinois Horticultural society, estimated that the apples and peaches will bring $750,000 to the farmers of this territory this year, compared with $100,000 crops in 1932 and 1933 and as contrasted with a loss from a bumper crop in 1931, when there was a national surplus and prices hit bottom.

Some of Trees Damaged.

The February weather that destroyed crops and killed many trees in other parts of the country also did some damage here, but increased prices will more than compensate the local growers. Mr. Lamer said some buds were killed on the peach and early varieties of apple trees when the thermometer dropped to 10 below zero on Feb. 26, but enough survived to bring farmers their best money crop of the depression, providing nature is kind to them for the rest of the crop year.

The preferred route here from Chicago, as recommended by the Chicago Motor club, is over U. S. 66 through Joliet to Bloomington and thence south on U. S. 51 through Decatur and Vandalia. Also of interest to tourists hereabouts is Cairo, 37 miles farther south, with its civil war associations; Wickliffe, Ky., with its archæological excavations, and Fort Massac state park near Metropolis, Ill.

By Bob Becker

Barley Proves Popular.

April 25, 1934.

THE barley which has been planted here on THE TRIBUNE experimental farm [Wisconsin 38, a malting barley] has been acclaimed 100 per cent perfect by two interesting residents on the place. When Clarence Thurow, manager of the farm, was in the fields yesterday he saw two prairie chickens gravely walking over the newly planted field and stopping now and then to sample some of the seed which was broadcast on the plowed ground.

The barley plot is right next to a field which the flock of prairie chickens call their hangout. Therefore it was natural for some of the birds to come into the planted area and look things over.

One of the prairie chickens [the male] strutted around his mate, encouraging her to pick up some of the barley seed with as much authority as if he, instead of the farm, had put it in.

The farm is feeling the effects of no rainfall. Here we are in the middle of a dry spring which follows a year that was considerably below normal as far as rainfall was concerned. The fields need rain and plenty of it.

The cumulative effect of this long dry period going back to 1933 is now being shown in the behavior of one of the flowing springs on the farm. The one that supplies water for the 118 steers at the big feed barn has just about quit flowing.

This shows that the continued shortage in precipitation has affected the water levels deep down in the earth. I have noticed that even the old reliable well at Clarence's house seems to be giving out occasional hints that it isn't quite up to par in its water supply.

The tractors and the work horses certainly have been making things hum in the fields. Here is the sort of record the boys ring up in the course of a day behind the machinery:

Sleezer takes a tractor and double discs 12 acres. Then Guenther moves into a 20 acre field and harrows that tract [for flax]. Sleezer and Johnson go after a couple of acres with the tractor and plow and turn it over in no time.

Then out comes the coffee mill style of broadcaster which scatters seed on top of the ground and in this manner a six acre seeding of Oderbrucker barley is in the ground. [This Oderbrucker variety is another malting barley which the experimental farm has decided to test out this season.]

The final touch to the barley planting is to drag a harrow over the field. However, there was some time lost in this work because Sleezer's tractor folded up and refused to work after 4 o'clock just as if it knew all about this "shorter hours and higher pay" slogan which one hears about these days. An examination of the machine showed that the magneto needed a little servicing. After two hours of tinkering and repairs it was ready to go again.

We have a couple of little pigs that ought to be going around on crutches judging by the way they are limping. They have been spending a good deal of their time in the feed lot with the steers. Day before yesterday some of the frisky steers must have sideswiped the two little porkers. And now they have such bad charley horses that they can hardly walk.

COLLEGE WINS SUIT FOR $500,000 TO REGAIN FUND

Peoria, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Trustees of Illinois college, at Jacksonville, won their suit in the United States District court today against William G. Goebel, Jacksonville, official of a defunct bank, who was charged with misappropriating the college's $500,000 endowment fund.

Judge J. Earl Major, in a decree signed here, specified Goebel, who was treasurer of the college and cashier of the defunct Ayers National bank at Jacksonville; Millard F. Dunlap of Jacksonville, president of the bank, Andrew Russel, vice president, and the bank itself should account to the college for the funds.

The judge ordered that $81,544, which remained in cash when the bank closed Nov. 21, 1932, should be made a trust for the college drawing five per cent interest from April 13, 1933.

Judge Major found that Goebel took securities from the college fund which was in his custody and gave them to Dunlap, who in turn pledged them with various banks as collateral for loans to himself and to the securities company Goebel and Dunlap operated.

BENTON HARBOR GIRLS PRIMP FOR CONTEST TONIGHT

Winner to Compete in Blossom Fete.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Benton Harbor, Mich., April 25.—[Special.]—Thirty-one young beauties of this lakeside town made their final preparations today to capture the title of "Miss Benton Harbor" at a contest in the Liberty theater tomorrow night. The winner will become a candidate for the supreme honor of reigning as "Queen of the Blossoms" over the nationally famous blossom festival here early in May.

The festival will bring to the twin cities of St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, May 6-13, thousands from nearby states during that week, when the heart of Michigan's fruit belt bursts into bloom. For weeks in advance the most beautiful and charming young women in the fruit belt communities compete to represent their communities. This year, according to Elwyn Simons, a member of the general committee, the number of entries exceeds the totals of recent years. Between 600 and 700 girls have entered the contests, which are being held tonight, tomorrow, and Saturday in 29 communities. The final contest to select the queen of the festival will be held here May 2.

Benton Harbor's contestants spent today putting last touches on their dainty evening frocks and making appointments with beauty experts, for tomororw when they promenade across the Liberty stage the judges will take particular notice of their beauty, personality, form, style, and carirage. Advance ticket sales indicate that the theater will be packed for the event.

The parade of beauties will start at 8:30 o'clock. An hour later the judges will have made their selection and Bernice Krieger, "Miss Benton Harbor of 1933," wil present the new queen with a bouquet of flowers. The House of David ladies' band will play during the judging.

The judges announced today by J. Harry Pound, secretary of the general committee, are Mrs. Jack Dempsey, wife of the prize fighter; Miss Karon Von Cronk of Battle Creek, an actress; Tom Conley, Notre Dame football coach and former star; Dr. F. P. Andrews, Kalamazoo physician, and Col. W. S. Gilbreath, Detroit, manager of the Automobile Club of Michigan.

KISSING OF WIFE CALLED EXCUSE FOR HIGH FARES

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—Evidently counsel for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad heard the late Lew Dockstader, the minstrel, sing his song about the convenience of a railroad station for kissing purposes. Lew used to advise young men to take their girls to railroad stations, where kissing is customary and free.

H. D. Boynton, assistant commercial counsel for the New Haven, at a hearing today before Public Service Commissioner George R. Lunn on the application of commuters for a reduction in fares, proclaimed that commuters use the railroad stations as kissing posts.

Arthur H. Fairfield, special assistant to the general manager of the railroad, said that commuters were permitted to kiss their wives on railroad property, as though the railroad were doing them a favor.

"Yes, and you still permit them to kiss their money good-by," put in Patrick J. Rooney, corporation counsel of New Rochelle, which is financing the commuters' case against the railroad.

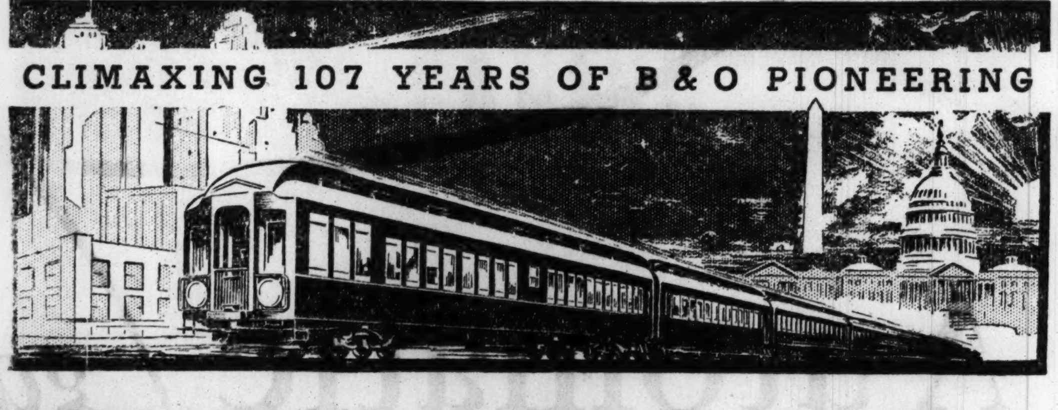
CLIMAXING 107 YEARS OF B & O PIONEERING



NOW—Baltimore & Ohio Air-Conditions Every Important Train on the System

With the B & O, air-conditioning is not an experiment. It was the first railroad in America to offer the public air-conditioned equipment.

In 1930—it placed in service the first air-conditioned car;
In 1932—the first all air-conditioned through sleeping car trains, St. Louis to Washington-New York and Chicago to Washington-New York.
In 1933—the B & O had in service more air-conditioned trains and cars than any other railroad.

Public appreciation of B & O Air-Conditioning was immediate and emphatic . . . And Now—convinced that air-conditioning has done more to attract passengers than any improvement since the sleeping car, the B & O this season is extending air-conditioning to include every important train on its system.

FROM CHICAGO TO WASHINGTON AND THE EAST, you will have your choice of traveling on these two premier all air-conditioned trains, with convenient leaving times.

BISHOP PROTESTS AS NAZIS CENSOR CATHOLIC PRESS

Charges Hitler Violates Vatican Concordat.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 25.—The Roman Catholic bishop of Aachen, whose pastoral letter to his flock was censored by the police, protested today to the Hitler government against this "violation of the Vatican concordat."

Part of the bishop's letter appeared in the Muenchen-Gladbach, a church organ. The final paragraph was left blank, and marked "permit to print was not granted."

Catholic church officials charge this is a volation of the concordat, which specifically guarantees the right of a bishop to address his followers through his own press, without restrictions.

Other Letters Suppressed.

According to the Saarbrueckener Landeszeitung, other Catholic church organs also have been forbidden to print bishops' pastoral letters.

All of these letters refer to the conflict between the Catholic and Hitler youth organizations. The latter are trying to compel young Catholics to join the ranks of the Hitler youth movement and submit to 100 per cent Nazi training.

The Catholic Youth associations held an extraordinary meeting here today, at which the chief of the Catholic youths declared that they had always been patriotic and that there was no need for them to change their organization. This brought the retort from the Nazi organ, West German Boebachter, that the Catholic youths "will give only lip service to the Nazi state as long as they are deprived of the Nazi education" provided in the Hitler youth movement.

The attitude that the present stage is only transitory and that the Catholic youths will soon be absorbed in Hitler youth organizations, despite the pope's protest, was evidenced in a decision of the Württemberg police, who today issued "temporary instructions for both Catholic youths' organizations and the Hitler youths."

These instructions decree that church organizations must refrain from organizing sports for youths, since only the Hitler youth is entitled to supervise sports. Excursions and hikes are listed as sports which the church is not allowed to organize for its youths.

In Westphalia, where excitement is running high in Protestant circles, the governor requested the press to refrain from commenting on the church situation for four weeks, because "public discussions of these problems may have disastrous consequences."

Charge New Red Plot.

BERLIN, April 25.—(AP)—The National Zeitung, the newspaper of Premier Goering of Prussia, declared today that communists throughout the world mean to stage another "Sacco-Vanzetti swindle."

The newspaper said the action was scheduled for May 1 in labor demonstrations outside of Germany and that the demonstrations would be directed against Germany for the continued custody of Ernst Torgler, former communist leader of the reichstag, and Ernst Thaelmann, former communist candidate for president of Germany.

The newspaper reported that several foreign labor delegations were in Berlin seeking permission to see the former communist leaders in jail and added that permission would be granted them if the diplomatic representatives of nationalities present recommended such permission.

Sees Plan to Discredit Germany.

The real object of the foreign delegations, however, says the newspaper, is to seek material with which to discredit Germany.

"Naturally," says the National Zeitung, "Nazi Germany is not going to promote a second Sacco-Vanzetti swindle like that which in its time threatened the law and order of all countries, even causing an attempt on a diplomatic representative of the United States.

[On Oct. 19, 1921, Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers were alleged to have been responsible for a bomb sent to Myron T. Herrick, then ambassador in Paris. On Oct. 30 of that same year, Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers made threats against the United States embassy in Cuba and Maj. Gen. Enoch H. Crowder. It was six years later before Sacco and Vanzetti were electrocuted at the Charlestown State Prison, Mass., for murder.]

SENATOR LEWIS LAYS WAR PERIL TO HUGE LOANS

Debts Defeat Peace Parleys, He Says.

The real reason for failure of world peace and disarmament conferences since the world war has been the unwillingness of the United States to disturb the credit of nations to whom loans of 25 billion dollars have been made. This statement was made yesterday by United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis when he addressed the Chicago Bar association.

Senator Lewis said the United States would have been able to enforce terms of the Briand-Kellogg peace pact had not this country been the creditor of almost every other nation. Because o' this fact international finance has been the chief obstruction to world peace, he stated.

Wants Situation Prevented.

The only possible remedy for the deadlock between disarmament and financial security for loans made by American citizens, said the senator, is the announcement of a new policy which will prevent the piling up of such international debts in the future.

Senator Lewis cited as indicative of his knowledge of the true facts his experience with President Wilson in Versailles immediately after the world war and his later appearance at The Hague.

Recalling fears expressed by England, France, Italy, Japan, Russia, Germany, and Poland as reasons for their refusals to disarm, Senator Lewis said all these nations signed the Kellogg pact as a gesture toward insuring world peace.

U. S. Power to Judge.

The pact, he stated, gives the United States the power to "herald the nation which goes to war as unworthy the friendship of civilization, and to withdraw all credit from the aggressor nation." The United States also was given the privilege of sitting in judgment to determine which of the warring nations was at fault.

"In all the conflicts waged since the world war not once has the United States sat in judgment. Do you want to know why not?"

Answering his own question, he explained that should the United States pronounce judgment for violation of the peace pact on any one of the nations which are debtors of this country, the condemned nation would assert that credit is slandered and destroyed.

The next step, he said, would be to declare void the securities held by America for the loan, asserting the American declaration had destroyed their ability to pay.

The United States, he asserted, after advocating refusal of any further foreign loans, would summon each nation to private counsel, there to "banish all differences and close all disputes."

MARCONI 60; SAYS HE IS 'IN BEST OF HEALTH' AND 'BUSY AS CAN BE'

ROME, April 25.—(AP)—Guglielmo Marconi, "in the best of health" and "busy as can be," celebrated his 60th birthday today by receiving the wishes and plaudits of the world. This morning the Rev. Fr. Oreste Trinchieri of San Francisco, representing Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, conferred honorary citizenship of the American city upon Marconi, who, in reply, recalled his visit to San Francisco and California's welcome to thousands of Italians.

The rest of the morning he spent quietly at the Academy of Italy, of which he is the president. Then he went home for his birthday dinner with his family.

"How do you feel, now that you are 60?" Marconi was asked.

"How do I look?" he replied. "I feel in the best of health."

Regarding his work, he revealed that "we are constantly plugging away at an ultra-short wave in my yacht at Genoa; it is too early to make an announcement at this time."

Farmer Is Shot Crossing from Bavaria to Austria

VIENNA, April 25.—(AP)—The official Austrian news agency today quoted the Linz Volksblatt as saying a farmer was fatally shot on Austrian territory after crossing the Inn river from Bavaria in a small boat. Before he died in the Braunau hospital he said that after he landed he saw two persons exchanging shots and then he himself was hit. The shooting was attributed to smugglers.

HOLD SUSPECT FOR THEFTS OF $41,500 JEWELRY

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—Hugo Willgerod, alias Hughie Wills, alias Hugh J. Willis, was under arrest in Englewood, N. J., today. He is a fugitive from justice, wanted here on indictments charging him with two robberies, jewelry value at $41,500.

Of that total $24,000 was said to have been taken from the late Gertrude Williams, ex-Follies girl, a suicide, on March 9, 1934. When robbed March 27, 1931, Miss Williams was residing on East 67th street. She died penniless.

The other robbery was that for $17,500 from Mrs. Margery Ardell April 5, 1931.

FORBID VIENNESE TO THROW POSIES FROM WINDOWS

VIENNA, April 25.—(AP)—Flowers must not be thrown from windows during Vienna's festival of rejoicing May 1, replacing the Socialist May day, the official gazette warned today.

Apparently the government remembered that a bomb was effectively concealed in flowers in a recent attempt on the life of Vice Chancellor Emil Fey.

Many members of Vienna's elected government, including Dr. Karl Seitz, Socialist and deposed burgomaster, will be able to hear the band music from their cells in prison.

CHILD HINTS U. S. AIMS AT PLANNED WORLD ECONOMY

Trade Envoy Issues Paris Report; Heads for Berlin

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 25.—Indicating that the chief purpose of his European trip is to study the technique of "planned world economy," Richard Washburn Child today summed up for the American press the results of his stay in France.

Child left by train tonight for Berlin where he will try to sell Chancellor Adolf Hitler the new idea of an NRA for the whole world.

Child's announcement was contained in a mimeographed statement, entitled a "memorandum," which was released by the press department of the embassy here and was supplemented verbally by Child in the course of his collective interview with the American press at the embassy. S. Pinkney Tuck, press officer of the embassy, assisted the envoy during the interview.

Claims "Significant Impressions."

This document, written in the third person—mostly—and in the style of a news story rather than a diplomatic communique, commences by revealing that "significant impressions have been obtained by Mr. Child, special envoy of the secretary of state."

"Thanks to the active coöperation of Ambassador Jesse Isidor Straus and the embassy staf, " the statement continues, "the former ambassador to Italy [Child] has been able to report to his government changing conditions in economic progress in France since the London economic conference and such political matters as bear on them."

The really vital part of the memorandum, however, is the part which expounds the opinion of the former ambassador to Italy on world economic problems.

Argues for World Economy.

"He—meaning the secretary of state's special envoy—also expressed the view that side by side with political diplomacy there must grow up a new economic diplomacy," reads the handout. "With the disappearance of feudalism there developed community economy which expanded to national economy. The world now faces the need of an ordered world economy in which no great nation carries on a costly economic war.

"This does not imply that my government would be incapable of reprisals for injustices, but indicates the sincere desire of the President and Secretary Hull to coöperate in the development of machinery for real international coöperation to fit the new world economy."

Asked to amplify his ideas of world economy, the organizer of the Republican "Roosevelt for President" club, said:

"There is a growing realization of the necessity for world economy, the technique of which remains to be worked out. However, necessity is the mother of invention."

Wants World Organized.

Child stressed the fact that his mission is chiefly concerned with this problem of planned world economy and a technique for achieving it. That he was not thinking of the old free trade ideal of world economy, but some kind of organized, controled and planned adaptation of consumption to production on a world-wide scale along the same lines as America's New Deal was indicated by his closing remark that "All Europe is interested in America's domestic experiment and is now talking about planned world economy."

One phase of Child's report, which does seem to have some connection with expanding American foreign trade as distinguished from organizing world economy, was the finding that "confidence steadily is pointing to new stability and prosperity in France." Child said he hoped this would open up more chances for American trade, but did not suggest anything to do about it.

Report Debts Discussed.

There is also a report that Child has been discussing debt reduction, payment of debts obviously being an obstacle to planned economy everywhere.

Correspondents were much intrigued by the form of the Child "embassy memorandum," which apparently was designed to save them work.

"Knowing the other fellow's problems is the essence of good diplomacy," reads one excerpt which apparently reflects the zeal of the author of the document for enlivening the reader.

This predigested copy was greatly appreciated by the newspaper men, but they found abrupt transitions from the third to the first person not accounted for by quotation marks, confusing.

Here in the columns of the Chicago Tribune, where the women of this market seek their style news, color can give extra sales power to your advertising.

It can tell the story of quality . . . give emphasis to cut and drape, pattern, line and mass. It can suggest imponderables. Or drive home a message with brute force.

Why not take advantage of the high attention value and sales strategy of Tribune run-of-paper color? The cost is hardly more than for black-and-white reproduction. And, on the testimony of advertisers, Tribune color is well worth the slight extra cost.

Through Tribune run-of-paper color you can open distribution quickly. You can speed up turnover, build volume, get double duty out of a small budget . . . achieve any one of a dozen special purposes for which other advertisers have used Tribune color successfully.

Color advertising in the Tribune is peak selling. In Chicago and suburbs alone it takes full advantage of the daily interest of 620,000 families. And, on Sunday, of 243,000 other key families living in the cities and towns adjacent to metropolitan Chicago.

Ask a Tribune representative to show you how you can put the extra value of Tribune run-of-paper color into your advertising in this market.

"Bookkeeping Situation" Hit by U. S. at Trial.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Can a Christian be a criminal? This is the bone at which the lawyers gnawed all day today in their closing arguments in the trial of Bishop James Cannon Jr., and Miss Ada L. Burroughs, his secretary, who are charged with having conspired together to make improper reports of certain expenditures back in the anti-Smith Democrats' fight of 1928.

Attorney M. J. Fulton, a friendly old gentleman up from Richmond to defend Miss Burroughs, pointed to her long service with the Anti-Saloon league; pointed to the number of clergymen who had been her character witnesses, and argued that "this little woman," being a good Christian could not "become, overnight," a bad conspirator.

Attorney Ridicules Defense.

Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson ridiculed this defense; insisted that he didn't care how many times the bishop and Miss Burroughs went to church; they were guilty of conspiracy to evade the corrupt practices act in '28.

Mr. Wilson fired the first gun in the closing arguments. He sent most of his shots toward the bishop's bowed head. The bishop, he shouted, had built up a defense on these four legs:

A tin box; a "bookkeeping situation"; dead men, and the phrase, "I don't know."

During his testimony Bishop Cannon, in explanation why certain moneys do not show up in his several bank accounts, frequently declared that he kept money, O, many thousands, in a little tin box, which he felt was safe as a bank. That sounds silly to Attorney Wilson and he told the jury so. He admitted that "maybe today, banks are shaky," but he reminded them that back in the boom days "everybody kept money in the bank."

Refers to Three Checks.

As for the bookkeeping situation, it refers to a transaction on Feb. 11, 1929, by which Bishop Cannon gave Miss Burroughs three checks totaling about $18,000 from his bank account which had a balance of only $549; and received from Miss Burroughs three checks totaling about $18,000 from a bank account which was already $80 overdrawn.

The bishop contends this was merely a "bookkeeping transaction."

Mr. Wilson dubbed it "check kiting."

Included in the bishop's checks was one for $17,300, supposedly the part of the $65,300 contributed to the campaign by E. C. Jameson of New York, which was spent only in the south. The remaining, and unreported $48,000, Cannon declares, was spent only in Virginia, and therefore did not come under the provisions of the corrupt practices federal funds act.

Scorns "Dead Men" Defense.

As to the "dead men" defense. Here Attorney Wilson heaped a lot of scorn on the bishop. "It seems mighty funny," he told the jury, "that the two men whom the bishop makes the pivotal figures in all this transaction should be the two men [the Rev. Sidney Peters and J. W. Hough] who have since died and cannot be called to court."

The fourth defense, "that stock phrase of 'I don't know,'" is too transparent, Wilson feels, to need comment.

Then he sailed into the bishop's attitude on the stand when he repeatedly sought to absolve Miss Burroughs from any knowledge of the transactions.

"That may sound like chivalry to you," the prosecutor told the jury "but it looks like cowardice to me; just hiding behind a woman's skirts. He knows that if she goes free on a conspiracy charge, he'll have to go free."

Zaro Agha, 'Methuselah' of Turkey, Refuses Age Test

ISTANBUL, Turkey, April 25.—(AP)—Turkey's "Methuselah," Zaro Agha, has declined to undergo a test to determine his age, fearing the experiment might detract from his fame as the world's oldest man at 160. Dr. Behdjet Sabot, on behalf of a French gland specialist, tried hard to induce Zaro Agha to submit to the test, even offering financial assistance, but the centenarian was unmoved.

Aviation Notes

Both the army and navy are having new high speed single seat, fighting planes developed for experimental purposes, according to recent announcements. The Boeing Aircraft corporation of Seattle is building the army plane and the Northrop-Douglas company of Los Angeles is constructing the navy ship. The Boeing plane is designed to have a top speed of 265 miles an hour and the Northrop-Douglas a top speed of 260. The fastest single seat fighters now in service have a top speed of 231 miles per hour.

Northwest Airways which formerly flew mail between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, and has continued to carry passengers over this route following cancelation of its mail contracts, has recently received the first of a fleet of six new Lockheed Electra's high speed transport planes carrying 10 passengers and crew of two pilots. The new ship, low-wing, twin-motored, with retractable landing gear, will be put in service within a few days. It cruises at 203 miles an hour and has a top speed of 221 miles an hour.

Transcontinental and Western Air is preparing the first of its new Northrop Deltas, an 8 passenger, single motored transport plane, for a coast-to-coast dash for a new speed record for ships of this classification. The present transport record of 13 hours and 15 minutes is held by T. & W. A.'s new twin-motored Douglas.

BERLIN, April 25.—The latest casualty in the ranks of the German press is the Deutsche Tagestzeitung which will cease publication on May 1 after a lifetime of 40 years. Formerly the mouth piece of the land union and conservative land owning classes. it now shares the fate of the Vossische Zeitung, Boersen Zeitung and many provincial newspapers—to say nothing of the entire Socialist press—which found themselves unable to sustain existence under the rigorous press control of the National Socialist state.

INSULL INDIGNANT BECAUSE HE WAS CAUGHT BY TRICK

He Voices Resentment Against Turks.

S. S. EXILONA, April 25.—(AP)—Samuel Insull declared resentfully today it was only because of a trick he went to jail in Istanbul and thereby made possible his extradition to the United States on fraud charges.

A Turkish police officer, the former Chicago utilities promoter maintained, told him he was being taken to a court. But instead of that he was taken to a detention prison, where he did not realize the truth until later.

Then, Insull added, the officer merely smiled when he objected to the tactics.

He Grits His Teeth.

Whenever the subject of his detention by Turkish officials comes up, Insull grits his teeth and his mouth droops. He has an expression of resentment or fighting determination at such times.

He feels also that he was not fairly treated when the Greek tramp steamer Maiotis, on which he was fleeing to a Black sea port, was halted at Istanbul.

He insists that under the terms of the Bosporus Straits treaty, ships stopping for less than 24 hours have the privilege of transit and accompanying guarantees. He accuses Turkish officials of forcing him to remain in the harbor beyond the 24 hour limit.

Laughs and Eats Heartily.

Nevertheless he laughs often, eats heartily, and sits up late discussing with other passengers such topics as politics and business. He carefully conceals any feeling he may have toward American authorities.

He was up early today, as usual, despite a light heart attack last night, which he said was due to too much smoking. Today, consequently, his big black cigars were much less in evidence.

TRIES TO END HER LIFE, MOURNING AVIATOR'S DEATH

Three weeks ago Miss Kay Richardson, 30 years old, of the Belmont Plaza hotel, 505 Belmont avenue, was informed of the death of her fiancé, Edgar Fageros, in an airplane accident at Fairbanks, Alaska. While preparing early yesterday to attend his funeral in Minneapolis misfortune pursued her again.

A suitcase belonging to Miss Richardson and containing clothing and jewelry valued at $455 was stolen from her automobile in the loop. She returned to her hotel and informed the management that she was leaving for the funeral. Shortly afterwards she was seen floundering in the shallow water off Belmont harbor and was rescued by John Fertl, a watchman for the Chicago Yacht club near by.

Miss Richardson was taken to the John B. Murphy hospital, where she became hysterical and could give no explanation of her act. She and Fageros were to have been married in June.

None of the girls was in a serious condition.

Concerns Dispute Over Navigation.

MOSCOW, April 25.—(AP)—A letter written by George Washington in 1785 to an unidentified man concerning a dispute over navigation on the Mississippi was reported tonight to have been found in the Moscow Historical museum.

The communication, which is a part of the collection of the lat Count G. V. Orloff-Davidoff, a Russian antiquarian, is dated "Mount Vernon, June 21, 1785," the Daily News says.

Text of Letter.

It begins with the salutation "Sir" but gives no evidence of the identity of the man to whom it was sent. It reads:

"I am greatly obliged to you for the several communications of your letter—I wish disagreeable consequences may not result from the contentions respective to the navigation of the river Mississippi.

"The emigrations to the waters thereof are astonishingly great and chiefly of that description of people who are not very subordinate to law and good government.

"Whether the prohibition from the court of Spain is just or unjust—politic or otherwise, it will be difficult to restrain people of this class from enjoying natural advantages.

Hopes to Avert Evil.

"It is devoutly to be wished that Mr. Gardogin would enter into such stipulations with congress as may avert the impending evil and be mutually advantageous to both nations.

"After the explicit declarations of the emperor respecting the navigation of the Scheldt and his other demands upon Holland he will stand, I think, upon favorable ground; for if he recedes his foresight and judgment may be arraigned and if he proceeds his ruin may be involved.

"But probably I am hazarding sentiments upon a superficial view of things when it will appear ultimately that he has had important objects in view and has accomplished them."

The letter is signed "Yr. obed. hble. s.—G. Washington."

In the same collection letters also were found written by the duke of Wellington in Spanish in 1818 to Edmund Burke and the original manuscript of Walter Scott's novel "The Talisman."

AGREE ON RELIEF PROGRAM FOR NEXT 15 MONTHS

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—Gov. A. G. Schmedeman of Wisconsin said today after a conference with Harry L. Hopkins, relief director, that a program of relief and work relief had been agreed upon which would obviate the necessity of calling a special session of the Wisconsin legislature.

The program, the governor said, would cover a period of 15 months starting May 1. He added the state would be allocated $2,500,000 for May. Schmedeman said he had been assured of an additional $100,000 for drouth relief for April. The state's May quota is $600,000.

Twenty-five graduate nurses employed in the Frances Willard hospital, Central avenue and Flournoy street, walked out yesterday in protest against their wage scale. They returned to work within an hour after a committee of physicians, members of the hospital staf, promised to act as arbitrators in the wage dispute.

The nurses left the hospital at noon, but returned to their patients shortly afterward at the urging of Dr. Otis M. Walter, head of the staf. They told him, he said, that the hospital has been paying them $25 a month, with their room and board, and that they are asking for $40 a month. They charged, according to Dr. Walter, that the hospital recently increased rates charged patients for their services by 40 per cent, but did not increase pay.

Dr. Walter, Dr. J. L. Rosengard, and Dr. J. A. Valentine form the arbitration committee.

ANOTHER TROJAN HORSE IN ILLINOIS.

Mr. Murray, the Lynn, Mass., men's specialty store proprietor, lost his Blue Eagle because of an advertisment reading, "The operation was successful, but the patient died." The statement was held to be contempt of the code, and upon the finding of the local compliance board the Washington NRA authority restrained Murray from any future use of his eagle, with the intent of starting a boycott against him. Case conciliated after critical publicity.

The small New York milk dealer whose case went to the United States Supreme court was fined because he gave away a loaf of bread with two quarts of milk. He was caught under a state law which the federal Supreme court upheld, although the dissenting opinion declared that it was being made a crime to conduct business honestly and to the satisfaction of both buyer and seller.

The Florida cleaner and dyer who was cracked down upon because he cut under the code price escaped the clutches of the law because Florida had no statute and a federal District judge ruled, in effect, that if this cleaner and dyer was to be regarded as engaged in interstate commerce the law had gone crazy.

A California cling peach canner, brought into court because he had failed, among other things, to contribute to a fund to buy up surplus peaches and not can them, brought down on his company a federal District court decision that the power to regulate interstate commerce clearly implied the power to regulate commerce within the state when necessary to accomplish national purposes.

Milk dealers in the Chicago milk shed find that judicial proceedings conducted not by judges, but by milk administrators, will cost them their right to do business if they undertake to do it on terms satisfactory to them, to the farmers from whom they purchase their milk, and the consumers to whom they sell it. Mr. Shissler is one who lost his license in such proceedings. Mr. Maged, the New Jersey tailor who was fined $100 and sent to jail for 30 days because he pressed a suit for 35 cents instead of 40, was caught under a state law, his sentence being mitigated after critical publicity.

These are some of the instances in which citizens in business, mostly small citizens in small business, have been caught in the new ruling that they cannot conduct their business honestly, to their own satisfaction and to the satisfaction of persons with whom they deal, and at the same time conduct it legally and without fear of the law and of punishment. It is a muddled situation in which the right of the federal government to crack down legally upon victims within a state is far from clear. The question of right is in doubt in Washington; but it is certain that if the state has imposed these laws upon its people they are surrendered to the operations of codes without any defense that will stand in court. What saved the Florida dyer and cleaner was the absence of a state law. What caught the New Jersey tailor was a New Jersey law. The bread and milk case in New York came under a state law.

At the request of the Washington administrators, Gov. Horner is endeavoring to put through a bill for an Illinois NRA. If he succeeds in doing so the citizens of the state will be exposed, without defense, to anything that may be proposed against their interests in Washington. The last line of defense, the defense in their own sovereignty, will be taken away from them. Among the many objections in principle which can be made to such a surrender of state police power, the realistic one of example will stand out most clearly. It is a sound constitutional objection that the states are losing essential rights when they agree to conform in this fashion to federal law and intrust enforcement to federal direction and control. They did this identical thing in accepting the 18th amendment, and most of them began to regret it at once. With so recent an example of error it is rather remarkable that in Illinois there should be politicians who think the people of the state want to submit themselves again to the federal dragonade in an even more serious and comprehensive form. Under prohibition they subjected themselves in one aspect of their lives; under the Horner bill they would be caught in almost every particular affecting their business, their right to work and earn a living, and their general welfare. It does not seem possible that the legislators would dare to do this.

THE WRATH OF RAINEY.

Speaker Rainey's violent reaction to Dr. Wirt's disclosures has been an interesting political phenomenon which seemed easily explainable. As a professional politician up for reëlection to office and also as a leading member of his party organization it was natural that he should be seriously perturbed, even though it might have been expected that so seasoned a veteran of politics would avoid exposing his emotions in so violent a form.

But now comes our neighbor, the Progress of Johnston City, with remarks that may throw some additional light on the matter. Some three years ago, says the Progress, Brother Rainey made an extended visit to the soviet socialist republics and shortly after his return was invited to give his impressions to a gathering of the Illinois Press association. "The remarks of Congressman Rainey," says the Progress, "were considered so radically communistic that many officers and members of the press association were chagrined that he had been their guest speaker. Those responsible for Mr. Rainey's appearance on the program apologized to the chair and press members made apologies to their guests."

The Progress concludes that "current charges that Speaker Rainey is connected with the brain trust plot to promote communism in America came as no surprise to those members of the Illinois press."

There was little publicity at the time for Mr. Rainey's enthusiasm and little comment; but the subsequent drift of public discussion will give it more prominence no doubt, especially in the 25th district, which will presumably want to know the views of its representative more definitly than perhaps it has in the past. Public interest must extend beyond the 25th district not only because Mr. Rainey as speaker is one of the chief figures in the Democratic party as well as a public official of large influence but because the country is increasingly interested in how far Democratic party leadership has departed from the traditions and principles the party has been supposed to cherish.

ENCOURAGEMENT BY DISCOURAGEMENT.

The administration at Washington has deferred "until next year" the large scale housing program of which much has been heard ever since the depression set in. Meanwhile, the government is determined to embark upon a huge program of publicity intended to encourage owners to borrow sums ranging from $200 to $2,000 for repairing and rehabilitating existing houses. These loans are to be privately negotiated.

There are thousands of single family and apartment houses in need of repair. There are tens of thousands of building mechanics in all the trades who are in need of work. No one with any practical sense can believe that the desirable objective of employing the idle building tradesmen in repairing the existing houses will be achieved as long as the government is merely postponing its own construction program which will go far to destroy the investment in repairs. No sensible owner of a building will borrow under such circumstances and no prudent lender will lend.

Here is one more instance of the contradictory nature of the government's policies. It discourages while it encourages; and when its conflicting policies result, as they frequently must, in disappointment, it blames the tories and shouts about synthetic dead cats.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE BRAIN TRUST.

The government continues to permit foreign supplies of rye and bourbon whisky to enter the United States free of quota restrictions and at the same time is commanding American farmers to grow less corn and is refusing to impose a justified dumping duty on subsidized exports of rye from Poland. Likewise no serious interference has been placed on the use of imported blackstrap molasses in the manufacture of alcohol for beverage purposes in substitution for corn.

Illinois farmers may be excused if they can make no sense out of these contradictions. Neither can any one else.

Editorial of the Day

TUGWELL VS. MAGED.

[New York Herald-Tribune.]

There are many fair words and high ideals in Prof. Tugwell's address to the newspaper editors. It is interesting to know that in his view the New Deal is designed to end regimentation and enlarge liberty.

But there is at least one citizen in the news of the day who will be puzzled by this eloquence. That is Jacob Maged, the Jersey tailor who has been sitting in jail under sentence for pressing a suit of clothes for 35 cents instead of 40 cents, the NRA minimum.

There are others. There is Leo Nebbia, for example, the small shopkeeper of Rochester, who sold milk. He gave a loaf of bread to a purchaser who bought a second quart. So he was tried and convicted of the crime of violating NRA.

Just how much of this "cracking down" the administration intends to order is still in some doubt. Perhaps as much as the country will stand. The fact is unmistakable, at any rate, that if NRA on its present comprehensive scale is to be anything but a failure and a muddle, its codes must be enforced in just this detailed ruthless fashion. Prof. Tugwell refers to prohibition as an example of the impossibility of regimentation in America. But the army of dry agents, the clogged courts, the crowded jails which the eighteenth amendment yielded would be as nothing compared to the Ogpu that would be needed to enforce the hundreds of NRA codes in all their details of price fixing and labor regulation. If Prof. Tugwell does not know or realize this fact he is strangely lacking in a sense of reality.

This defect of unreality runs throughout Prof. Tugwell's argument. He pays lengthy and eloquent lip service to the freedom of the press and pooh-poohs the idea that it was or ever could be threatened under the New Deal. But he carefully ignores the fact that the New Deal has already limited the freedom of the air—that the radio has been largely turned over to the praise of everything that the Roosevelt administration has done. He makes no mention of the persistent and inexplicable effort to prevent the newspapers of the country from recording their constitutional rights in their code.

Those who eagerly pick up the address in the hope that it will yield some indication as to the aims of the administration can find scant comfort in it. Prof. Tugwell not only refuses to compare it with any of the centralized states of Europe—he refuses to define in any respect the direction in which it is traveling. Is the jailing of tailors and milk dealers who dodge the NRA by so much as a nickel to become general? Is the regimentation of labor, through the government's compelling all employés to join willy-nilly a national union, to be halted or to be resumed? Is the new farm policy to follow the lines of the Bankhead bill and make the production of too much of anything a criminal offense? Or what?

Prof. Tugwell faced an unusual opportunity to attempt a candid definition of the aims and philosophy of the New Deal. He has dexterously avoided that opportunity. He has expressed a number of noble ideals to which all men are glad to subscribe. He has asserted a number of glowing generalities with respect to the New Deal which are so glaringly at variance with the record that, if names and places were omitted, the reader would never guess that it was America and the Roosevelt régime of which he was speaking. Dr. Tugwell concedes that we are "on our way." If he knows "where we are going" he does not choose to tell.

PURITAN MOTHER—"And with great and good reason, my child. For on that very morning didst not our good Neighbor Bradford get ye cruel Indian arrow through ye seate of his pantes, and did not Deacon Maydew get mightily chased from ye woods by ye bloodthirsty savages and didst come galloping down ye road to hys home with hys tongue hanging from hys mouth only about three jumps ahead of ye screaming aborygynes?"

DORCAS—"But when I would even to go to pyck ye wild flowers upon last Wednesday with some of ye village lads and lassies didst thee not say me nay?"

PURITAN MOTHER—"Aye, daughter, and when thy companions who would not heed my warnings essayed to go forth to pyck the wild flowers from the ground what did they pyck instead? Verily, for the last three days they have been pycking Indian arrows from their hydes instead, and great good fortune they were not all slain."

DORCAS—"Oh, I wouldst I could live here these hundred years until finally ye cruel savages were gone and ye blessed civilization was spread all over ye land and life was simple, sweet, and safe."

FATHER—"Well, well, let's all get in the auto and take a nice ride out in the country."

MOTHER—"What, and have that Dillinger poking guns into our faces every few miles? I should say not."

FATHER—"But an old college friend of mine, Bill McGluke, has bought a dandy little farm 'way out in the country; fine place for the children to romp; cows, pigs, horses, bees, sheep—all that kind of thing—and he's expecting us out."

FATHER—"But think of the fun the children will have out there in the open country with the birds singing——"

MOTHER—"Yes, and the bullets singing, too. No, thank you!"

FATHER—"Well, let's go somewhere else, then. Some place where we'll be sure not to bump into Dillinger."

MOTHER—"There is no such place. He is here, there, and everywhere. He is in town, in the country. We dare not hardly move. Heavens! he may be behind that door this minute with his gang ready to kill us all in cold blood."

FATHER—"Gosh! I wish we lived back in the good old days of the Puritans, hundreds of years before there were any Dillingers and life was simple, sweet, and safe."

"U. S. READY to Ask Japan's Intentions in Dominating China."—Headline. It would also be important to find out if it's the intention of two and two to continue to make four and to discover the intention of a butcher at the stockyards with a big ax in his hands rapidly advancing on a fine fat steer.

IT'S LIFE.

Dig your hands deeply—
Never ask why—
Press to your lips
What you gather—a sigh,
A stain or a smile,
A day of dim strife—
What do you care,
You have known it—it's life.

SOME HAVE STICK-TO-IT-NESS.

It has been said that fat people have no strength of purpose when it comes to reducing. They know that obesity shortens life and they want to squeeze the last drop out of that lemon. They know that obese persons have an increased liability to high blood pressure, diabetes, and a few other diseases, none of which they hanker for. What is more important, they know that surplus fat does not make for personal pulchritude and they want to be pretty or handsome.

There are some who say that knowing all this and more, and having these desires, hopes, and ambitions, they have not the perseverance to reduce and then to keep the weight down. A life insurance company that pays out many million dollars prematurely, as they think, because of the overweight of their insured, came to the conclusions that their employés were setting their insured a bad example. They made a survey of overweight in their personnel and the reasons for it. The survey was rather surprising. They then organized courses in weight reduction and pushed them in the headquarters office.

A large part of their overweight people were reduced to proper weight for height, age, and build. The result was highly satisfactory. A few years later they investigated the same group. A large proportion of the perfect thirty-sixes noted at the end of the courses in reducing had gone back to the presurvey weights.

To reduce and stay on the desired weight level it is necessary to change the food habits and to follow the new ones for the remainder of life. The experience seemed to argue that fat persons were short on stick. Now comes a fine rebuttal of this opinion.

An actress has just died who weighed 250 pounds when she went on the stage in her youth. She was a great hit because she was roly-poly, fat, and appeared to enjoy being a target. In spite of the fact that losing weight would remove one of the foundations of her success on the stage, this woman determined to reduce. She took off one hundred pounds. That was about fifty years ago. She stood by her guns and the weight was never regained. In fact, one of her successes of later years was in a part in which she was a slender woman. When more than seventy years old she fell, broke her leg, and developed pneumonia during convalescence, from which she died. Old people with broken legs who develop pneumonia while the fracture is repairing seldom survive whether they are fat or thin.

DISEASE OF HEART.

Mrs. J. A. E. writes:

1. Is there any known way a person can get to be a chronic cardiac, or what does that mean?

2. Please give definitions of chronic cardiac or valvular disease, and mitral stenosis and insufficiency.

3. Can the above be inherited?

1. "Chronic cardiac" is an abbreviation used by physicians. A chronic cardiac is one who suffers from some form of heart disease. There are several causes of chronic heart disease.

2. The first is a disease of the heart valves; the second is chronic endocarditis affecting the mitral valve and causing obstruction and leakage at the mitral opening.

3. No.

DIET OF SERVICE.

F. L. J. writes: What is cholecystitis and what is the best treatment and food for it?

REPLY.

It is chronic inflammation of the gall bladder. The best treatment consists in overcoming constipation by diet and development of right habits.

Dieting is of great service. The proper diet consists principally of fruit, vegetables, milk, bread, and cereals. Meat once a day is enough. It is better to be sparing with eggs, fats, and oils. No condiments, alcoholic beverages, stuffings, dressings, rich foods, or heavy meals. The supper, if any is eaten, should be light.

POPCORN.

Mrs. L. H. writes: Is popcorn fattening?

REPLY.

Not very. It would be if one ate enough of it and kept it up. But that would be a hard job. Ordinarily, we do not eat a great deal of popcorn measured in pounds or in calories.

DEVELOPING ARMS.

T. Y. writes: Will you give a treatment of exercise to develop the arms? The rest of my body is plump enough, but the upper arms are too thin.

REPLY.

Pitching hay is fine. So are rowing, swimming, wrestling, and boxing. So is gymnasium work on the ropes, ladders, and bars.

PSYLLIUM SEED.

T. J. N. writes: E. S. can be cured of colitis by taking the white psyllium seed. The white has had the rough shell taken off. I have known of several cases that were cured by this treatment, which gives an easy and natural movement of the bowels and thereby reduces inflammation.

SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE.

Chicago, April 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Recently my father died in Wisconsin. One of his heirs is only 18 years of age. 1. Can this estate be settled before this heir is 21? 2. Can the administrator make a private settlement with any of the heirs before this time? 3. How long before an appraisal of the value of the property has to be made?

A. D.

1. The probate proceedings could be completed, if that is what you mean to ask. If your father left no will, then the real estate could not be sold without additional court proceedings until the minor becomes of age.

2. Yes, in the foregoing sense.

3. No necessity for any appraisal appears on the facts that you state.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—British income tax authorities are turning their attention to a new source of revenue. Instructions have been issued to tax collectors to make every effort to secure the assessment of those persons whose ordinary income is augmented by tips.

This means that many thousands of people whose salaries are just low enough to be exempt from taxation will find themselves in the receipt of demand notes for payment of income ta . The people thus affected by the new order will include pursers, gamekeepers, hall porters, stewards, golf caddies, commissionaries, waiters, taxicab drivers, and railway employés.

One taxation expert said he estimated that if the order is enforced vigorously it should produce, at the very lowest, an extra $5,000,000 for the exchequer.

The popularity of cruising may have had something to do with the authorities' decision, because the first and most vigorous drive is being made against pursers, stewards, and even navigators and commanders of merchant vessels. They are also trying to tax the tips of hotel waiters and porters.

An outstanding example of the money made from tips is provided by the case of the late Nicholas Mockett, head porter at the Savoy hotel for many years, and well known to many wealthy American visitors. When he died his estate was proved at $100,000.

Page boys at some London hotels are known to make over $40 a week in tips at the height of the season, while one door porter, at least, is reputed to receive over $10,000 a year in gratuities. Waiters make anything from $25 to $50 a week and more.

Rushville, Ind., April 15.—[Friend of the Insured.]—My private car insured for public liability and property damage is sometimes used on errands for my employer, who insists that he could be held liable in case of an accident and wants me to insure him against loss. Is this true? If so, how can I protect him?

H. E. B.

The employer is generally responsible for the acts of his employés while engaged in the business of the employer. You can protect him by means of an indorsement to your present policy naming him along with yourself as the assured, or he can protect himself against damages arising out of the operation of all his employés' cars by taking out a contingent automobile liability and property damage policy.

Chicago, April 18.—[Friend of the Insured.]—I am planning to install an oil burner in my home and would like to know what effect it will have on my fire insurance policy?

R. M. B.

The installation and use of an oil burner does not void your insurance policy, and it is not necessary to notify the insurance company. However, the standard fire insurance policy does not cover loss or damage caused by smoke originating from the faulty operation of stationary fuel oil burning apparatus, and if you desire to insure against this smoke damage loss it will be necessary for you to have the policy extended to include this additional coverage, which will require the payment of a slight additional premium.

CHARITY AS ADMINISTERED.

Chicago, April 17.—Why does the county hire young girls as relief workers?

What do they know about what a family needs or how to judge human nature? They do not know and are not equal to the responsibility of their jobs. They are as mechanical as they can be, all having the same line of talk and an air of importance that would befit Mrs. Roosevelt.

I am a man 65 years of age, born and lived in Chicago all of my life. A victim of depression. I applied for relief at the S. W. station. I was denied relief by a girl [who was too young to go to the Fair last summer by herself] because I have a son. She quoted "the law" to me, saying if he had only a slice of bread "the law" required him to divide with me.

Now, my son has a wife and a 21 months old baby. He works for the board of education. He has had only one pay day since last September. His gas has been cut off, phone taken out, credit gone at neighborhood stores, and the landlord clamoring for his rent. If I went to live on him I would take some salt and pepper along, for I guess we would have to eat the baby. If, according to "the law," I take part of that last crust of bread, what would his poor wife and baby do?

We all know that there must be laws to properly govern anything, but those that enforce the laws are supposed to use good judgment and good old common horse sense. If every law on the statutes were enforced to the letter, why, we would all be in jail.

I offered my services for two wars, have served as a juror on five occasions, helped my father pay taxes for thirty years, and offered and gave my son for nine months across the seas for Cook county. My neighbor has not been here long enough to get a hair cut, and if you should ask him where the county building is he would drop dead from fright. He has his rent paid, gets clothes and plenty of food, while I, a native son, have to hustle to get coffee and rolls.

AN EXPLANATION.

Chicago, April 17.—One of your contributors asks, "How does raising the general price level make for more consumption and business?"

If a country has about 350 billions in value of property to begin with and then has it reduced to 250 billions, its net assets are decreased by a hundred billions. If it owes 200 billions, its creditors have 200 billions and its debtors 50 billions. The element of our population which represents initiative and enterprise has lost two-thirds of its working capital.

Is it a wonder that we have business stagnation?

If the value of this property were again increased to its former level, we would enable the enterprising part of our population to use its full instead of one-third of its capital.

The reaching of this objective was the aim of our government. An auspicious start was made, but our government is now in full retreat from its objective.

There is nothing magic, unethical or unsound in such an objective. It is only plain common sense—the kind of sense which in our overeducated, superficially civilized world has almost ceased to exist, at least temporarily.

TAXI RATES.

Chicago, April 23.—The cab driver who told your correspondent, Geo. S. Parker, that he had only made 80 cents between 7 a. m. and 1 p. m. was undoubtedly telling the truth. I have gone longer than that to make the same amount. Under the old rate of 25 cents on the flag and 10 cents one-half a mile we could at least make a living. Maybe that rate was too high, but I know the present rate is too low because cab drivers can't live on what they make at it. The public wanted this low rate and the drivers have been patient and have tried it out. We feel now that the city council should set a rate that will make it possible to buy food for our families and pay rent. Even if the volume is cut down a little bit, it will be better than carrying people at practically street car rates and making nothing at it.

RAILROAD BONDS.

Michigan City, Ind., April 23.—President Roosevelt is reported to have served notice on the railroads to convert their bonds into stock in order to reduce their capital obligations. Is it possible that a President of the United States would so far forget his trust as to openly advocate repudiation? And with a large part of life insurance funds invested in railroad bonds, would not this repudiation spell chaos?

What this country needs is a creditors' association for political action.

MISS DEAL.

THE WORLD'S FAIR POSTER.

Chicago, April 23.—The public would probably appreciate an interpretation of the new official World's Fair poster published in THE TRIBUNE Sunday, April 22. A poster should tell the story at a glance and not compel a person to study it like a puzzle in order to extract the meaning.

SOMETHING FOR THE FAIR.

Chicago, April 23.—As an added attraction for the World's Fair this summer, why not anchor Mr. Insull's prison ship, the S. S. Exilona, in one of the World's Fair lagoons? Every sucker would gladly spend a quarter to visit this now famous ship.

THE SECOND BAPTIST CHURCH.

Chicago, April 13.—The notice of the death of Dr. William Lawrence, former pastor of Second Baptist church in Chicago, which church I used to attend when living on the west side, gave the address of the church as Lincoln and Jackson.

The church was located at the time I attended it at the corner of Monroe and Morgan streets, across the street from the Methodist church.

It would be interesting to me to know how many people who see this remember the days when Dr. Lawrence in all his wonderful power and splendor held his audiences spellbound each Sunday morning and evening at that address.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

I suggest a plebiscite which would enable the people to voice their opinion and desire in regard to this menace.

JUDGE PONDERS NOT GUILTY PLEA IN RACKET CASE

Directed Verdict Sought for 18 Defendants.

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan of the Criminal court will rule this morning on motions for directed verdicts of not guilty in behalf of the 18 defendants in the racket conspiracy trial. At the same time Judge Finnegan will make a decision on defense motions to compel the prosecution to elect which counts of the 23 in the indictment it wishes to apply to the various defendants.

The judge indicated during arguments yesterday, that he would rule favorably on a motion in behalf of Ald. Oscar Nelson of the 46th ward, one of the defendants, demanding that the state choose the count on which it wants Nelson's status decided.

Arguments By Nelson's Counsel.

"I think there should be an election by the state," said the judge following arguments by Attorney Floyd Thompson, counsel for Nelson.

Special Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber replied that the stand would stand on the first count—the general conspiracy count which covers in a general way the charges contained in the other counts. Immediately the prosecutor changed his mind and after arguments which lasted for some time he announced the prosecution would stand on all counts.

The judge, however, has it in his power to issue a mandatory order on the prosecution to elect one or more counts of the indictment to apply to a particular defendant.

Following this change of front by Mr. Raber, Judge Finnegan declared he wanted the prosecution to explain where it contends Ald. Nelson was brought into the alleged conspiracy. This explanation, the judge said, he wanted in connection with the defense motion for a complete directed verdict on all counts.

Wants Prosecutor's Reasoning.

"I would like the state to analyze some action of Nelson's which first brought him into the conspiracy," the judge said. "I want the prosecutor's reasoning on that."

Prosecutor Raber explained that the state does not contend Nelson had any part in any violence or even had any knowledge of such acts. He said, however, that Nelson is legally responsible for such acts because once he joined the conspiracy he is responsible for the acts of any co-conspirators.

"Nelson got into the conspiracy when he put over the laundry contract," said the prosecutor. "That contract is absolutely illegal."

Raber referred to a contract between the laundry drivers' union, which Nelson represented as attorney, and the Chicago Laundry Owners association. The contract provided that association members should pay union drivers $30 a week but that nonassociation members should be charged $40 a week. This was in effect a boycott and a conspiracy in restraint of trade, Raber argued.

Nelson Tries to Speak.

For the first time during the trial Ald. Nelson rose to his feet to take part in the arguments. Before he could speak Defense Attorneys Benjamin Short and Joseph Harrington, drew him back into his seat and Attorney Thompson did the talking. The latter, in a vitriolic attack on the prosecution, characterized the state contention as "utterly ridiculous and nonsense."

"Human decency should compel the prosecutor to presume Ald. Nelson innocent instead of trying by the wildest stretch of imagination to draw unfair inferences and prove him guilty," Attorney Thompson said.

Should Judge Finnegan force the state to reduce the counts applying to certain defendants his ruling would not affect the possible punishment in the event the defendants are found guilty. The punishment would be the same on one or all counts, the maximum being one to five years in the penitentiary.

However, an elimination of counts would limit the testimony which the jury would consider in deciding the case.

Both sides wound up their testimony earlier in the day. The prosecution had called 174 witnesses, including four rebuttal witnesses, while the defense had a total of 91 witnesses. The trial, which started on Jan. 4, is the longest in the history of the Criminal court.

During rebuttal testimony the prosecution won a victory when Judge Finnegan reinstated the testimony of Nell Wolf, a stenographer in the office of the late Attorney General Edward J. Brundage. Her testimony, which was stricken out at the end of the state's case, was to the effect that Ald. Nelson went to Mr. Brundage's office with Al Capone.

Rebuttal testimony was introduced for the purpose of impeaching testimony given by Attorney Morris I. Kaplan and Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, noted economist, both defendants.

The trial may reach the jury some time Saturday. Judge Finnegan ordered night sessions from now until the conclusion of the trial over the protests of Mr. Raber. Assistant State's Attorney Thomas Dodd Healy will open the arguments for the state this morning. He is expected to talk all day and possibly part of tomorrow.

ST. PAUL MAYOR IS DEFEATED BY A MARGIN OF 575

St. Paul, Minn., April 25.—(AP)—A 42 year old attorney will be St. Paul's next mayor if the contents of carefully guarded ballot boxes yield the same result as that obtained in unofficial counts.

The election, in which Mark Gehan apparently deposed Mayor William Mahoney after one of the city's most exciting campaigns, may not be settled even after the canvassing board meets Thursday, it was indicated tonight.

Supporters of Mahoney who viewed the unofficial 575 vote margin given Gehan in the record breaking 93,000 ballot vote as too scant to be decisive, indicated a recount would be sought should the canvassing board uphold unofficial totals.

Two men without previous political experience were among the six successful council candidates. H. E. Warren, Independent, led the field, while Alex F. Peterson, Labor candidate, was sixth.

Chief issue in the campaign fought along party lines, was the recently outlined state platform of the Farmer-Labor party, characterized by Independents as communistic.

Charge $121,000 Income Was Reported as $5,253

St. Paul, Minn., April 25.—(AP)—Allegations that Leon Gleckman had a net income of about $121,000 in 1929 and reported on $5,253 were made in Federal District court today at the opening of his trial on charges of income tax evasions for 1929, 1930, 1931, totaling, with interest, $103,000.

APPLY LAST PAINT TO DUDE COLLEGE FOR BRITISH COPS

Servant Awaits Each Six Students.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 25.—There is intense activity within the new British police college at Hendon, because the first term begins May 10 and the handsome police palace, standing on its own splendid acres, is not quite finished.

Today electricians, carpenters, painters, and plumbers were working at top speed to get everything ready for the new students. There are to be separate bedrooms, hot and cold water and one servant for every six students.

Books and Sport.

There is a library, a restroom, a quiet room, a room where women friends may be entertained at tea and after theater, and a dining room. Sport includes football, cricket, tennis, swimming, and horseback riding. Students who do not drive an automobile will be taught to do so in the college grounds.

Students will be called at 6:30 o'clock in the morning by a sergeant with a hand bell, and will work throughout the day in lecture hall or classroom, with intervals for meals. They will end the day's studies at 4 p. m.

Dinner will be served at 8 p. m., at which all students must wear full evening dress with white bow ties.

Pay and Vacations.

Studies will include every modern crime fighting device known.

The course will last 15 months, after which not only a perfect policeman is expected to be turned out, but a perfect gentleman as well. Students will receive $17.50 as their weekly pay, out of which must come a $5 weekly mess bill. Uniforms and other clothing are to be provided free. The students will be granted leave every week-end and will be given three months' leave and 12 months of training.

FILIPINO LEADER EXPECTS ILANDS' FREEDOM IN YEAR

Predicts Quick Action on Congress' Offer.

Quezon, on his way back to Manila from Washington, said: "I predict the machinery for making the ilands actually independent will be completed within one year and a Filipino chief executive will be occupying Manila's Malacanan palace instead of an American."

He said he believed the Philippine legislature would accept the bill quickly and that afterwards a constitution would be completed acceptable to the President of the United States, thereby assuring independence.

Emigrants Rejected.

MANILA, P. I., April 25.—(AP)—Emigration from the Philippines to the United States had virtually ceased today.

The liner President Grant sailed for Seattle this afternoon without a single Filipino passenger. Five intended emigrants were rejected because the United States will limit Filipino immigration to 50 a year as soon as the legislature accepts the independence law, expected about May 1.

One hundred sixty already on their way on the liner President Hoover, which is expected to reach San Francisco after the independence law has been accepted, probably will be admitted, Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy was informed today.

Asks Delay of Sugar Law.

To save Filipino sugar planters from a year of virtual nonactivity, Gov. Murphy said he has asked Secretary of War Dern to urge that the Jones-Costigan Philippine sugar quota be made effective July 1 instead of retroactive to Jan. 1.

The governor said the retroactive clause would give the ilands an estimated surplus of 610,000 tons, or approximately two-thirds of the entire year's quota, because of previous shipments. This surplus, he said, could be wiped out only by limiting next year's production to 315,000 tons, or a fourth of the present crop.

An alternative would be to hold the surplus and attempt to dispose of it at foreign markets. At present the United States consumes practically the entire sugar output of the ilands.

CLAIMS JEWS IN MEXICO LIVE IN TERROR OF FOES

MEXICO CITY, April 25.—(AP)—A statement that Jews in Mexico are living in terror owing to an apparently German inspired campaign against them, was made today by Louis J. Wise, an American Jew in business here.

Wise said a committee of prominent members of his race shortly would ask President Rodriguez for protection "so that the fears of Jewish merchants will be allayed." It is estimated there are 10,000 Jews in the country.

Wise asserted that numerous articles on Germany, including speeches by Chancellor Hitler, had been reprinted in the newspaper Defensa published here, under the same titles with which they were issued in Berlin.

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a weekly radio feature—will be presented tomorrow by Mary Meade over station W-G-N. Tune in at 2 o'clock for Miss Meade's market chat.

BY MARY MEADE.

Think you've tried everything going? Perhaps. But I'm wagering that there are yet a considerable number of cooks who haven't even a bowing acquaintance with bread made in a double boiler!

It's a bit Johnny cakish in texture, and yet it gives one bread without the need of heating up the oven, in fact, gives one bread whether there is any oven or not. It goes like this:

DOUBLE BOILER CORN BREAD

1 cup white flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup yellow corn meal
1 tablespoon sugar
½ cup chopped dates
¾ cup milk
2 teaspoons caraway seeds
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Grease heavily the inside of the upper part of a double boiler. Shake flour about in it until the grease is evenly coated. Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder, and add the corn meal, sugar, dates and caraway seeds. Warm the milk and stir it in slowly, then add the melted butter. Beat up and pour into the greased boiler. Cook over hot water, over a low heat, until firm. This may take 2 hours, but the bread need not be watched, since overcooking will not harm it. To serve, turn out the corn bread on a plate and slice.

And have you ever been in the sad state of having ordered more ice cream than the guests could consume and having to drink up the soup or guiltily douse it down the drain? Then here's a saver for your self-respect and your tummy. Turn the weepy stuff into a light, delicious gelatin dessert. Use a level tablespoon of granulated gelatin to stiffen 2 cups of melted ice cream. Soak the gelatin for five minutes in 2 tablespoons of cold water, then melt over hot water. Stir this into the cream and, if you would do the thing up with a real flourish, add chopped dates.

Seem to be going in for driblets today, don't we? So we'll have another which promises to give a funny new twinkle to some of our salads. Don't, however, overdue the idea or it might loose its charm. To perform it, shake crisp lettuce leaves free of their drops of water and dip the lacey edges into cheery red paprika sprinkled generously on a plate. The gay red fluting makes a smart background behind whatever chilly vegetable salad you pile into the center of the leaves. Cabbage salad, with bits of minced red and green pepper to give it a nip, is one contender for honors.

Then as long as we're out for the odd and remarkable, there's news in the spinach world. For this scandalously vitamized favorite has taken cheese unto itself and is giddily going in for rolls! The way of it:

SPINACH CHEESE PUFFS

1 cup cooked spinach
1 egg, beaten
1 cup soft bread crums
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter
½ teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon pepper
Dash of allspice
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Chop the spinach and press out any free water. Combine the bread, egg and spinach, adding the rest of the ingredients to this. Mix well and form into balls about 1½ inches in thickness. Roll in flour and drop into hot fat (385 degrees F.) to cook until golden brown. Drain on rough paper and serve very hot.

WINNIE WINKLE, THE BREADWINNER: The Danger Point

You can talk about foundations all you like; they're simply swell aids to a smooth, harmonious makeup—but the more we see of skins (and we see plenty of 'em) the more we realize that natural skin smoothness and suppleness are better in every respect than camouflage.

If the skin is healthy and well nourished with the proper amount of oil you're off to a head start toward a beautiful face with your powder smoothing over it like a suede finish, with your rouge blending in, sans streaks, and with your entire makeup an enhancement instead of a mask. With basic skin soundness the rest is easy.

Right now skins are crying for reconditioning, we find—and if the summer winds do skin some damage in the way of making it crinkly now's the time to kill two birds with one stone. It's been months since we came across a certain cream, called a "deep tissue cream," that seemed almost too good to be true. We wouldn't let our enthusiasm for its merits walk right away with us—so we held off to ponder it more carefully and to watch its effect on the dry skins of several pals.

We've watched and looked for flaws—but we're still wildly enthusiastic about it. It isn't a cheap cream, nor is it too expensive. It's priced just about right for its merits, in our opinion. It's tremendously rich and it is simply splendid for dry, sensitive skins. It's entirely a treatment or corrective cream, not a cleanser, and you can take our word for it that it's a honey.

For the young, sensitive skin always troubled with dryness that even a foundation can't conceal it's advised for daily treatment, and for all middle aged skins we'd advise just slathering it on face and threatening-to-be-crinkly necks.

Face powder in the same line is outstanding, too, for its texture and quality; its maker planned it especially for dry type skins, and she's done a wonderful job in capturing seven grand shades that will blend with the most difficult skin tones.

Using the cream daily should condition the skin beautifully and the powder just tops off the effect. You'll find both in Chicago shops.

Plucking Brows Gives Pain but Aids Grooming

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

If you see a woman with eyebrows that need plucking and trimming today, you can be pretty certain of one of two things about her. Either she doesn't give a care how she looks or [and more likely] she is victim of a sensitive skin and can't bear to have her brows plucked. I know several who'd sooner submit to a major operation than be dragged up to a chair for eyebrow plucking.

I have been trying to find out from experts on eyebrow grooming just how they manage a sensitive patron. They agree most patrons qualify in some degree of sensitiveness, that some are simply more stoic in face of discomfort. One expert told me of having her nerves upset for a week when a patron let out a blood curdling yell you could hear at the other end of the building. Just over an eyebrow yank! The client was one of those hysterical women who never had learned to take anything on the chin without trying to acquaint the high heavens with it.

If you apply warm cotton pads to eyebrows and thus soften the skin up a bit, soften it further with an application of cream, you'll ease off the "pain twitch" with a hair yanked out by the roots. Then there is a technique about tweezing, that of grasping the hair close to the root and pulling with one quick jerk. No parleying for time, remember. And pull in the direction in which the hair is growing. Also, you can take your thumb and forefinger and stretch the skin upon which you are immediately working and lighten the discomfort. But OUCH or no OUCH, you've got to get that eyebrow line snapped up.

Chanel Uses Linen-Taffeta Combination for Severely Tailored Summer Suits

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Chanel shows the most alluring summer suits to be found in Paris. They are simple tailleurs made of flax or linen crash and they are cut, as our drawing shows, like classic woolen suits. For blouses she uses plaid or striped taffeta, which she makes into sleeveless waistcoats. The whole ensemble is topped by a little hat made of the same taffeta as the blouse. This linen and taffeta combination is a boon to the business woman who has to look trim and fresh all day in the hottest weather.

The model shown is composed of a crash suit in dark blue and a waistcoat of vivid green taffeta with black and white crossed stripes making a plaid design. The skirt is a plain, four gored skirt that is comfortably wide at the bottom though it looks straight. The hip length jacket is fitted and has wide revers and a flat tailored collar. The sleeves have cuffs of crash and over these cuffs of the taffeta.

The blouse boasts small revers and a tailored collar that lie over the jacket collar and revers. It buttons down the front on taffeta covered buttons and it has no sleeves.

The small Chanel hat has a rolled up brim, is made of the same taffeta as the blouse, and is trimmed with a taffeta flower set in front.

City's Sailors Busy Getting Boats in Shape

Some Have Launched Craft at Great Lakes.

BY JUDITH CASS.

FOR half a hundred Chicago sportsmen, leisure these days means a pair of blue denim overalls, a dumbiron, a marlinspike, a putty knife, and several whiffs of oakum and turpentine. They are the basement and garage shipwrights who would rather calk seams and air sails than listen to a symphony or dine with the President.

Whether it's the lights of A Century of Progress, spring in the air or just fun that has gotten the feel of boats into their blood it is hard to tell, but from all indications there's going to be a bigger crop of them on Lake Michigan waters this summer than ever before.

Playing the rôle of "icebergers," Roger Bronson, Owen B. Jones, and William Quigley Jr. already have launched their boats in the Great Lakes harbor, but Stuart H. Otis, Benjamin Carpenter, and Hugh A. Reading are still having the indoor sport of fitting out their craft.

Mr. Bronson, who bears the title of "father of the little fleet," got his catboat rigged sharpie, the Cellarette, into the waters at the Great Lakes last Saturday at the same time that Mr. Jones launched his Parthian. The name of Mr. Bronson's boat indicates where it came from. Now it's four years old. Young Mr. Quigley already has two boats in the harbor that he has built himself and there's a third one in the process of construction in his Lake Forest cellar.

Cluverius Opens Harbor to Public.

All of the boat owners who sail their craft from the Great Lakes harbor feel greatly indebted to Admiral Wat T. Cluverius, for the harbor was officially closed to the public more than a year ago and it is only through the admiral's generosity that they are able to use it.

Mr. Carpenter's 25 foot yawl, the Sonja, which took shape a year ago last winter in his home cellar, is still in the shipyard up at Waukegan, but it will be in the water before Decoration day. Mr. Otis isn't quite so sure that his craft will hold up when it gets into the water. It's a second hand knockabout sloop that he picked up last winter, but he's been having no end of fun putting it into shape.

It will be the middle of the summer before Mr. Reading plans a christening ceremony, for he still has a major share of work to do before his 21 foot Marconi rigged sloop is ready to be launched. It was quite some time before his friends discovered that he had turned shipwright, but almost any Saturday afternoon or Sunday now finds him at work in his Highland Park garage. Across the street from Mr. Reading, Dwight Davis is expecting to start work any day on a smaller catboat.

On Saturday afternoon Morrow Krum's Soupcon will be christened with his little nieces, Joan and Cece Hill, daughters of the Boyd Hills, breaking a bottle of champagne across the prow. One will wield the bottle and the other will put a coin beneath the mast.

More pretentious north shore sailors are the John G. Curtises and the Corwith Cramers. The Curtises have a large power boat that they bought last year and use to take parties of their friends across the lake on warm summer evenings. The Cramers are just back from a southern cruise on their Seafoam III., which is a 38 foot wheeler. Philip Randall of Lake Bluff has recently converted a coast guard boat into a de luxe cabin cruiser.

Chauncey McCormicks Return from Coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick are back in their apartment on Lake View avenue after a beautiful winter in Miami, having motored north. They do not plan to move out to their country place at Warrenville until the middle of May and their three sons will not return from Groton until near the end of June.

Mrs. Warren M. Salisbury is a member of the Florida winter colony—she had a house at Daytona Beach—who is just at home. Her son, Kimball Salisbury, and his wife also are at home from a trip to Florida, but young Warren Kimball Salisbury, who has been in Phoenix all winter, will not be back until the end of May, when the weather here will be more settled than it now is.

Mrs. Chauncey J. Blair, who has been spending the winter in California with her sister and brother, Mrs. Arthur Acton and Guy Mitchell, came to town with them Tuesday and is at the Ambassador East for ten days or two weeks. Mrs. Acton and Mr. Mitchell are at the Stevens, but their stay in Chicago is to be very short, for they are leaving today or tomorrow for the east.

The junior Denis E. Sullivans have taken an apartment at 3500 Lake Shore drive, which is now being redecorated to the taste of the former Betty Offield. In a few days they will move into it from the Drake, where they are stopping now.

New Babies Are Receiving Attention.

There are rounds of calls being made at the homes of several of the "young marrieds" to see the new babies in the households. Relatives and friends are admiring little Roberta Royal Vilas, daughter of the Royal C. Vilases, who was born on April 10. She has been named for her father and for her mother, the former Roberta Harvey, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert H. Harvey.

Mrs. Gilbert Ward Amberg and her infant son whom she named Peter, because that is her favorite name, are going from St. Luke's hospital to the Ambergs' apartment on Pine Grove

When Society Dines and Dances

Mrs. Charles Meyer (left) and Mrs. Douglas S. Offutt are two attractive young matrons often seen at smart places where dining and dancing are on the program of entertainment. Mr. Meyer is sitting beside his wife, who is wearing one of the very new sheer capes, and Mr. Offutt is next to his wife, always striking looking with her blonde hair and dark brown eyes. Mrs. Meyer is the former Mary Lake and Mrs. Offut was Emily Battelle before her marriage.

Schools Offer Two Engaging Music Events

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Choral and solo performances by the Columbia School of Music, a chamber music program and an opera by the School of Music and Little Theater of De Paul university gave engaging entertainment to two crowded audiences last night.

The Columbia organization was at Kimball hall. Here a woman's chorus under the direction of Louise St. John Westervelt did some able singing of chorales and part songs. Between groups there were some effective solo appearances by Raymond Anderson, violinist, Jeuel Prosser, violinist, and William Hughes, pianist.

Meanwhile, the De Paul groups were appearing at their Little theater, 64 East Lake street. A chamber music organization consisting of Edward Gradman, first violin, Leon Stein, second violinist, Morris Agres, viola, Leonard Krupnick, cello, and Rose Saron, piano, played the Brahms Quintet in F minor in spirited and dramatic fashion. After a short intermission the curtain rose again on Wolf-Ferrari's one act opera, "The Secret of Suzanne."

It was sung in English, a good translation that projected the sense of the piece and fitted the notes at the same time. Two singers who understand how to sing English, Ray Olech as Count Gil and Joan Arthur as Countess Suzanne, and another speechless member of the cast, Norman Gottschalk as Sante, romped through the slender but amusing little farce and made it a good entertainment. The program will be repeated on Saturday afternoon.

Addison Jones, pianist whom memory fails to disclose as having played here before, appeared in the Young American Artists series at Curtiss hall last evening. While undoubtedly qualifying as a young American, he is a more matured artist than a number of others who have appeared on this list in the past.

He has a good tone and a well developed pair of hands, he is technically up to some of the brilliant Liszt concert numbers, and he is musically conversant with both the lesser and the greater Chopin works. He is also a composer, a work called "Paprika" and described as a "Fantasie Virtuostique" from his pen being the concluding number on the program.

Knit Ensembles Good Enough to Fool Expert

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Weary knitters can now wear new knitted things without laboring day and far into the night counting stitches themselves. Some one has saved a lot of time by designing some spring knitted ensembles and suits that look so hand knit that they would fool an expert. This collection is well worth a long inspection.

The colors are worth special notice . . . a violet shade that would please the most capricious seeker of this flattering color, a soft star sapphire blue, and a dusty pink. Then there is a seafoam green, a delectable shade of turquoise blue, and a perfect honey in chalk white.

The two piece suits of string in pink or white are perfect . . . the very lacy open work sweater-blouse tops are so decorative they look like lingerie blouses. The skirts are made to be revered, to keep the things from bulging. The short sleeved blouses have surplice front closings while the jacket usually has long sleeves and a ribbed knitted effect around the waistline to make them fit smoothly.

Incredibly soft angora makes some other simulated knits that will make you fret until you own them. Some white numbers boast a decorated hem on the skirt. The sweaters are very lacy and open and the long sleeved coat effect is slimming with small stitches and a ribbed section at the waistline.

There is a smart robin's egg blue two piece model made with a businesslike blouse that buttons up the front and has two small pockets. It ought to be good for the active golfer. Striped knit is used for a slim up and down striped skirt in shades of gray and black. The skirt has a green belt and the soft knitted blouse of almond green is worn tucked in the skirt.

One of the outstanding white knits is made with a two colored scarf, in deep red and blue, that ties snugly around the high neckline. Another has crystal buttons that fasten in the front, and still another has a roll collar of lacy weave.

Don't miss these new unusual knits, you'll find just what you have been wanting for weeks.

Good Morning!

Said Mr. Burns Mantle:

"When they come to the human urge for honoring the heroes of the motion picture industry in Hollywood, I suggest they put a statue to George Arliss in the city square and forget the others. . . ."

Well, I subscribe to that—partly. Personally I'd like one erected to Walter Huston, Lionel Barrymore, Paul Muni, Spencer Tracy, and a few others I could mention. But George Arliss really SHOULD have one. First, for "Disraeli." Second, for "The House of Rothschild." Other films of merit he has made. But for these two—Statue!

In this photoplay, which records the foundation of the Rothschild fortune during the days of Napoleon and Wellington, Mr. Arliss appears in a dual rôle—for the first time in his career that I know about. He is seen primarily as old Meyer Rothschild, who, in his Frankfort Ghetto home, started the money ball rolling. Then he is discovered as his son, Nathan.

And Nathan was the fellow who thought up the right answer to the battle of Waterloo. Nathan is acknowledged head of the five Rothschild brothers, each of whom has, according to old Meyer's dying request, established a banking house in a capital of Europe.

In both rôles the star is remarkable. He is a Shylock. He is a Disraeli. He is a great heart, a shrewd brain, an invincible sense of humor combined and personified.

While the cinema makes no mention of drawing parallels between conditions at that time and this, it does so to considerable effect. But it is, first and foremost, a tribute to the gallant Jewish clan that rescued Europe from Bonaparte, though sorely tempted by a perfectly natural yen for vengeance, to swing their aid to other quarters.

The film is vividly and vigorously presented. The cast surrounding the star is a sound and brilliant one. Especially was I impressed by the work of Helen Westley as the elder Mrs. Rothschild.

Scenes that will cleave to your memory are:

Nathan's French loan coup.

Dialogue is sharp and salty.

". . . But, sir," says the hackman to Nathan Rothschild, "your daughter, Julie, always gives me more than this. . . ."

"O, yes?" replies the banker. "Well, Julie has a rich father and I haven't."

"I can't make you any younger . . ." croaks her physician to Matriarch Rothschild.

"I don't want you to make me any younger. I want you to make me older . . ." she cackles. And to her admiring son, Nathan . . .

"You're a good bargainer. You know God wouldn't let me go at 88 when he knows he can get a hundred. . . ."

AND, my sweets, the United Artists also has a new Walt Disney Silly Symphony for you! The three little pigs may, indeed, be pork chops now, as the crooners say, but they, Little Red Riding Hood, Grandma, and the Big Bad Wolf were certainly much alive when this delightful comic was made!

See you soon!

AN unknown and hitherto unsung heroine of science is Mrs. R. English Smith, whose husband is in charge of the basic science laboratories at the Hall of Science at the Fair. Mr. Smith told Paul Paddock that one of the technicians in charge of arranging the vibration display that shows how tuning forks produce sound waves was worrying considerably over the problem. Ordinary waves stretched from the forks didn't transmit the wave motion satisfactorily. He went home pretty depressed one evening to find his wife making a pair of bloomers. (Maybe that's the real news of the story; we didn't know they were still being worn!) He began to tell her his troubles and as he talked he idly fingered a bit of elastic cord he found in her sewing basket. Suddenly an idea seized him.

"What's this?" he asked.

"The waistband of my bloomers," his wife replied.

"You can't have it. We need it for the Hall of Science," he informed her.

The next morning he took it to work with him, tore off the ordinary string, substituted the bloomer cord, and found it worked to perfection.

THE pianist who last played for Isadora Duncan is now appearing in a Chicago night club. He is Allen Coe, and he played for her when she last danced in Berlin. Recently the tall dark pianist was at a tea at which each person was asked to tell about any famous man or woman he knew. Mr. Coe remained quiet until he was urged.

"Surely you must have met a famous person somewhere," the hostess insisted. Then he thrilled his listeners by telling them tales of the famed Isadora.

A FRIEND back from Milwaukee, where he made a tour of some of the big breweries, reports that every employé of the breweries is given a gallon of beer a day for his own consumption. This includes not only the workers but the men in the laboratories analyzing and testing, and the carpenters and painters working about the plant. There is one stipulation, though. They can't start to drink before 10 o'clock in the morning. Promptly at 10 the first cans of beer are passed about, a quart in each can. This happens four times a day. In the old days the amount was not limited to a gallon. Each worker drank all he wanted, but this was found to be pretty expensive. We do hope they don't feel badly about not being allowed to start before 10 a. m.

BY way of report. Another name for a telephone slug is a talking tablet. . . . When Ambassador Dodd gave a speech the other evening he wore in the lapel of his coat, not a carnation but a fuchsia. . . . If your evening gown has a train, to be really chic you must have one of those long ruffled slips to show when you hold up your train. One smart couturier makes them to order at, believe it or not, from $45 to $75 apiece. . . . Sign in Peoria, Ill.: "H. J. Bridegroom, Justice of the Peace." . . . Steps to the Altar.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Here is another of the blocks expressing a religious motif. Since ecclesiastical interpretations in quilting are characteristically picturesque, it is only natural that this quilt design should be striking as well as dignified. The arrangement of the completed blocks does much to create an illusion of "Steps to the Altar."

A Vicious Circle

SYNOPSIS.

Dorinda Quarles is found stabbed to death after a dinner party in her Paris apartment. Unscrupulous, Dorinda had served a drug to her fourteen guests, which was provided by one of them, Bannister Mowbray. Helen Roderick, who was a friend of Dorinda's mother, Lady Agatha, discovers the crime early next morning, and all the guests, except Dinah Blake, a young American artist, lying about in deep sleep. Tommy Rostetter, a journalist, was Dinah's dinner partner. Dinah's engagement to Christopher Loughton, in the American embassy, was, according to gossip, broken on account of Dorinda. Dinah returns two days later, her memory a blank, to the apartment she shares with her cousin, Hallie Pemberton. She had been sleeping in the studio of absent friends. Tommy persuades her to pretend an engagement to him to prevent a jealousy motive. Dorinda's stepfather, Basil Jethro, celebrated Oxford scholar, was her guardian and trustee. The two were on unfriendly terms. Dorinda had told Dinah that she suspected Jethro of giving her mother an overdose of a drug. Tommy suspects Jethro and searches for proof. He confides to Loughton his suspicion of Jethro. Loughton volunteers to go to London to look up Lady Agatha's will. Tommy believes that Jethro registered as two persons in the Stanislas hotel where he stopped the night of the murder, one in disguise, as Jethro had not been seen leaving the hotel. A Dr. Klauber from the University of Prague had the room next to Jethro's. Tommy wires Prague and learns there is a Dr. Klauber, who just returned from France and England. Tommy is at the Stanislas hotel when Jethro comes in.

CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS.

What was Jethro doing here? Not once had it entered Tommy's mind he would return to the Stanislas, but then if the man was innocent of wrongdoing, why should he not go where he pleased? At any rate, here he was, asking in a cool, well pitched voice whether, in the agitation of his departure, he had forgotten to leave his address. The manager, obliging and wreathed in smiles, replied that although no letters had come, he would not, in any case, have been at a loss.

"You see, monsieur," the latter explained, "the gentleman who brought the sad news to you last week has been stopping with us. He would have known how to find you. And that reminds me—did you recover the suitcase he was inquiring about?"

Inside the elevator cage Tommy groaned, "Merciful God—that's torn it!" He was seized by the desire to find the deepest hole in Paris and crawl into it, but in the self-same breath, as it were, he was straining his ears to catch the philosopher's reply. The elevator, however, checkmated him. With matchless perversity it chose this exact moment to give a volcanic shudder and lurch skyward, the grinding of its mechanism drowning every other sound. Today was evidently marked for ill-luck.

"Caught with the goods!" muttered Tommy, as hot with shame he flung his belongings together. "Now he'll be wondering what the hell I'm up to—and he won't have to wonder long. He'll know. The point is, what'll he do about it?"

When, after a suitable interval, he ventured down again, the lobby was clear, and so, strangely enough, was the manager's brow.

"Mr. Jethro came in just now," remarked the man brightly as he juggled with change. "I took the opportunity to ask if he had found his suitcase . . . and three francs makes twenty-five. Thank you, monsieur. . . . He said he had been mistaken about losing it—left it somewhere in a fit of absent-mindedness, so that's all right."

"No, that didn't upset me, but something else did. It was—" she broke off voiceless.

Tommy, transfixed, turned the amazing answer over and over. It did not suggest the spontaneous rejoinder of one taken by surprise and justifiably annoyed at interference in his affairs. And yet, he argued, Jethro was not exactly a spontaneous man. He had a quick brain, and great self-control. He must have grasped the situation in a twinkling and devised the sort of reply calculated to nip curiosity in the bud. This almost certainly would be the explanation, but all the same a germ of doubt stirred among the dead ashes in Tommy's mind. He lit a cigarette, took a few meditative puffs, and returned to the topic of the German guest.

"I'm afraid I was quite wrong about your Dr. Klauber," he said. "Here's the wire I got from Prague, and as you see there's no pretense about this professor business. For that matter, the man I took him for is certainly English, and a German accent in speaking French is not easy to imitate. That should have warned me. I suppose his clothing looked German, too?"

"Well—I could not say for sure. There was nothing very distinctive about the hat or the overcoat. The latter was good but old—might have come from almost anywhere. I imagine it was kept mainly for traveling, because it had creases in it, as though it had been packed away, and it had a decided smell of camphor."

Camphor! It was coincidence, nothing more. The idea that Jethro might have chosen to impersonate a real man seemed wholly fantastic. It would be waste of time to pursue this will-o'-the-wisp further—and yet. . . .

Proof! Tommy felt he must get hold of incontrovertible proof, or else he might forever blame himself for giving up the chase a moment too soon. Was there nothing which could put the matter beyond a doubt? His eye fell on the register, and at once he know the answer. Handwriting!

He cursed himself for not having thought of this long ago, knowing as he did how impossible it is to fake handwriting so as to deceive an expert. If Klauber was Jethro, this signature of his would reveal to the trained eye insuppressible evidence uniting it with the small, uneven characters it so little resembled. He could hardly ask to borrow the register, and besides a single signature might not prove sufficient. There were, however, the alien registration slips, filled in by every foreigner on arrival. He asked if these had been collected for the past ten days, and to his great relief was told they were here, in a drawer.

"The police are not very regular about coming for them, monsieur. Sometimes a fortnight goes by—and again they may want them tomorrow, in which case it might be awkward for me if one was missing."

Tommy explained that he would require this particular slip for one night only. The manager gave his consent, and in another minute Tommy was running through the pile of forms, from which he selected Klauber's. The name alone was in block letters, the other entries in writing which corresponded with that in the register. Tommy still had the page of Jethro's notes in his pocket, and moreover knew the correct man to give a verdict on the two specimens. If they were executed by the same hand, this person would know.

Seeing by the clock that it was almost 7:30, he dashed posthaste to the Rue de l'Echelle, toiled up four flights of dusty stairs and hammered on a door. No response—the expert had gone home, and though Tommy put in the best part of an hour trying to locate him, he saw, at last, he would have to postpone his test till the morning. Bad luck again! Tommy paused long enough at a restaurant to partake of a thick steak and a cup of black coffee, then drove to Dinah's flat. Hallie Pemberton met him, and a single glance at her face told him things were not going so well.

"O, please talk to Dinah!" urged the little woman agitatedly. "She declares she's just physically worn out—they were at it five solid hours today—but I believe there's something more than that. Maybe she'll tell you."

With fear at his heart, he went into the little bedroom where the girl lay, staring up at the ceiling, her hair in two heavy braids resting along her shoulders. When he sat down beside her and took her cold hands in his, she made a brave effort to reassure him.

"I'm all right, really. It's just this cat-and-mouse business that goes on and on. I thought they'd finished trying to worm things out of me, things I don't even know myself—but this afternoon I had that beastly instrument attached to me again while the judge kept bringing out objects to show me."

"Go on," Tommy prompted. "What sort of objects?"

"Everything under the sun. A ring Dodo wore, a sketch she did at Colorossi's, a handkerchief with her scent on it, an old protograph of . . . Chris. No, that didn't upset me, but something else did. It was—" She broke off, voiceless.

"Don't be afraid. Let's have it."

"A—a gramophone record—broken in two."

Tommy searched her eyes closely, secretly terrified lest the sight of the broken disc had brought back some submerged horror, but he answered with perfect casualness.

"I know the one you mean. It was lying on the floor next morning. But why should it upset you?"

"Because," she whispered, her small face ashen under the shaded lamp, "it was . . . our tune. All last year we called it that. I was 'Miss Virginia,' of course. Gramont knows what it means to me . . . though how he's found out I simply can't imagine."

avenue this afternoon. For the next few weeks Peter, who was born on the 15th, will be the center of attention.

The Franklin E. Agnews' [Suzanne Kohlsaat] son was born on Friday the 13th in St. Louis where the Agnews have been living since October. He is named Franklin E. Agnew III., and one of his uncles, Edward M. Harkness, also was born on a Friday the 13th.

The former Elinor Whiting and Edward H. Hagey are proudly showing off their son, John Bradford Hagey, who was born on the 9th at Passavant hospital. The baby was named for Mr. Hagey's father and for Mrs. Hagey's brother, Bradford Whiting.

The Junior Robert Lindsay Scotts are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Catherine Grace, last Friday at the Evanston hospital. The baby's mother is the former Catherine Brown. The Scotts have a son, Robert III.

Another baby born at St. Luke's is Andrew Houston Allen, son of the Harry Allens. He was born last Thursday and is named for his maternal grandfather, Andrew B. MacCaughey. His mother is the former Margaret MacCaughey and he has an older brother, Harry Jr.

In Hartford, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Paul P. Swett are still receiving congratulations on a son born on April 14 whom they have named Steven Carton Swett. Mrs. Swett is the former Catharine Carton, daughter of the Alfred T. Cartons of Lake Forest.

J. Russell Forgans Return to New York.

The J. Russell Forgans, who dashed out from New York to spend a few days in Chicago with Mr. Forgan's mother, Mrs. David R. Forgan, in Evanston, returned to New York Tuesday. Their plans for the summer are indefinite, but their family and friends are hoping they will come back to Lake Forest.

Mrs. David Forgan plans to go to her cottage, "St.-Andrews-by-the-sea," at New Brunswick, Canada, in June, to spend the hot months. Her daughters, Mrs. Halstead Freeman and Mrs. Philip L. Dodge, who also have a house in New Brunswick, will spend the summer there, too.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. Shaw will return home tomorrow morning. They have been in Bermuda for a spring vacation.

Mrs. William W. Gurley and her daughter, Miss Helen Gurley, returned last Sunday from a trip through the Panama canal. They will remain in Chicago for a month and then will leave for parts yet unknown for the summer.

Grove House to Hold Rummage Sale Today.

The article that is creating the most stir in the three shops where the Grove house board is holding its annual rummage sale today is a rowing machine in perfect condition. Mrs. John M. Butler and Mrs. Porter Allen, co-chairmen of the sale which will benefit the Grove House for Convalescents, report such good collections of clothes and white elephants that they had to rent three shops to store the articles in, one at 621 Grove street, the shop next door to it, and another one directly across the street.

For the last two days board members and committee chairmen and their friends and relatives have been working in the shops to be ready to open the sale to the public at 9 o'clock this morning. Among the hardest workers are Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Frederick S. Colburn, the president of Grove house; Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, Mrs. Kent Clow and Mrs. John Stewart, who are in charge of ladies' clothes; Mrs. Arch W. Shaw, Mrs. Morris K. Wilson and Mrs. Robert T. Sherman.

Entertainment of 100 mothers and at least a few fathers for one hour beginning at 11 o'clock this morning is the assignment of Walter Cummings and his brother, Arthur. The faculty at the Boys' Latin school where the two young men are enrolled, has invited them to tell of their trip last summer.

Walter and Arthur will take turns talking and showing the pictures that illustrate the lecture. Among the countries they visited last summer in company with their mother, Mrs. Walter Cummings, were Russia, Iceland, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

Chicago Red Cross Will Meet Today.

Many of Chicago's fasionable women will have luncheon today in the ballroom of the Blackstone hotel, where the annual meeting of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross will be held. Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. Charles Garfield King, Mrs. C. Morse Ely and Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine comprise the committee that has arranged the luncheon. The principal guest will be Dr. J. L. Biggar of Toronto, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross. James B. Forgan Jr., chairman of the Chicago chapter, will preside, and Col. Albert A. Sprague, treasurer, will make his report.

The talk that Nicholas Remisoff, the Russian artist, is to give today after luncheon at the Little Traveler will be of special interest at this time when the talk at all smart assemblages touches upon the recent visits to Chicago of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, for Mr. Remisoff will speak about the history of the Russian ballet.

Having been intimately associated with it through his work as a designer of settings and costumes, he is certain to have much to tell. Many are planning to drive to Geneva from the city and the north shore to hear him.

Birthday Party for Mrs. Willett Gorham.

A huge cake decorated with a large circle of glowing candles will give away the special purpose back of the party the Sidney Gorhams are having this evening at the Woman's Athletic club. It is to be a birthday celebration for Mrs. Willett N. Gorham, who was Lucie Jacobs before her marriage a year ago to the Gorhams' youngest son. The junior Sidney Gorhams and a few intimate friends will be present.

Numerous dinner parties have been planned for tonight preceding the Cinema Art soirée that the Association of Arts and Industries is giving in the ballroom of the Drake hotel. Nine privately owned films are to be shown.

There will be a record attendance at the 30th concert of the Paulist choir tonight at Orchestra hall. The Rev. Eugene F. O'Malley again directs the choir, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Armour again head the list of box holders.

To benefit the building fund of the Sacred Heart school the auxiliary of the Sacred Heart and the alumnae are sponsoring a dancing, bridge and supper party on Saturday, May 12, in the Crystal ballroom of the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Luncheon of Infant Welfare Auxiliaries Is Spring Style Show

It wasn't meant to be a fashion show, and every one was so busy thinking and talking about the worth while work that the Infant Welfare society does that no one bothered much about what she or her neighbors were wearing, but the luncheon yesterday given by the woman's auxiliary of the society at the Woman's Athletic club was like a showing of new spring styles, so smart did every one look.

There are senior and junior auxiliaries of almost every center, but it would be difficult to decide which are the seniors, so youthful and chic are all the women who work for Infant Welfare.

Last year the woman's auxiliary contributed $91,952, made 21,819 garments and quilts for Infant Welfare babies and sent 722 volunteers to help in the station conferences. There are 29 centers with approximately 1,200 members.

Smile a Weapon Parents Should Use Frequently

It's Indispensable to Good Child Guidance.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Did you ever think what a nice thing a smile is? It brightens life up a lot. Find it missing some days from certain faces and you realize what a lovely, shining thing it is.

I think children must feel this more than we realize. For that matter they feel lots of things more than we realize. It is only when we ourselves are able to remember our childhood emotions or when on rare occasions we catch a glimpse behind the scenes in our own children's lives that something which has been only dimly in our minds is shown in startling clearness.

We grownups are so busy and so serious with our household and business and money managing and plans and thoughts that I'm sure our children miss too often the brightness that is usually translated into a smile—the responsiveness that often shows itself in a smile—or the lovingness which expresses itself in a smile.

A mother came down to breakfast the other day.

"How pretty your hair looks this morning, Jane—I've never seen it look so pretty," said the grandmother.

And then just to see what he'd say she turned to her grandson of 13.

"Doesn't mother's hair look specially nice this morning—all little curls?"

The lad looked up from his cereal.

"I don't know—mom always looks all right to me—I don't notice much difference—except when she's cross," he added with a touch of mischief.

Even with the touch of mischief it was undoubtedly the true expression of his feeling.

The warm smile—not an empty put-on one—that is on tap for our children means a lot to them. It means a lot in a classroom, too—but an episode in that connection I'll tell you some other time. The long, solemn face or the disapproving expression children see much too often around the house. Don't let managingness or practicalness or crossness wipe out the smile that children bask in.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

Mr. Sims is universally acclaimed the greatest living contract and auction player. He is captain of the renowned "Four Horsemen" team of four, and has won twenty national championships since 1924.

RESPONDING TO TWO NO-TRUMP OPENING BIDS.

Continuing yesterday's analysis of long-suited responding hands, you will realize why we do not automatically rebid the suit on strong hands, but must do so on weak long suits. The time factor is decisive. If the opponents can knock out the entry card before the suit is cleared, the situation may be hopeless in no trumps.

With a weak five-card suit, bid it and pass the opener's three no-trump contract, for reasons explained in last week's articles. With a six-card suit in a weak hand keep rebidding the suit. Even if it is a minor suit, there may be game in it. Your partner has bid two no trumps; his hand has no weak spot; trust him for eight tricks; your six-card suit should supply or establish three more before they can take in three tricks against you.

If it does not deliver game, probably there was no game in no trumps, and in the suit bid you are safer; first, because the set is unlikely to be for more than one trick; second, because your trump length will enable you to get in several times and lead up to the strong dummy for finessing purposes, and to ruff out some suit in which a low card may be set up in the dummy.

Finally, strip plays are possible only in suit declarations, while if an end play is there, it is far easier to prepare it with entry cards in both hands. Unless your suit is trumps, your hand will have no entry cards.

Sp.—J 9 x x x x   Di.—x x x
Ht.—x x   Cl.—x x

or

Sp.—J 9 x x x x   Di.—x x x
Ht.—K x   Cl.—J x

or

Sp.—J x x x x x   Di.—J x x
Ht.—A x   Cl.—Q x

must all be taken to four spades. The same reasoning would apply to similar heart holdings.

Sp.—A x   Di.—x x x
Ht.—x x   Cl.—Q x x x x x

or

Sp.—K x   Di.—Q x
Ht.—x x x   Cl.—J 10 x x x x

should be taken back to clubs up to a contract for game; but with a minor suit headed by the queen, and two other cards as good as queens, which are likely to furnish at least one reëntry since opener has bid two no trumps, the best game hopes would appear to be in no trumps. Holding

Sp.—K x   Di.—x x
Ht.—Q x x   Cl.—Q x x x x x

or

Sp.—K x   Di.—A x
Ht.—x x x   Cl.—J x x x x x

I would pass if my partner bid three no trumps over my three-club response. The latter hand I would regard as holding two reëntries; I could, therefore, expect my partner to bring in the clubs, even if he had to lead away from A Q x or A 10 x to do so.

When a King Makes All the Difference.

With a six-card suit headed by the king, the situation is far more hopeful. You may assume that your partner has A x x or Q J x in support, so that he can surely clear the suit by surrendering one trick in it. With an almost certain reëntry outside the suit, let the opener play the hand in three no trumps. Even if they lead the suit in which you have an entry, assume that your partner can win the trick in his own hand, clear your long king-high suit, and use your entry card to bring it in. With a singleton ace or singleton king as your sole possible entry, that suit is likely to be led, so you cannot stand no trumps and must rebid your K x x x x x suit up to game. Since these weak long-suited hands must be rebid in terms of the suit, you will see why the promising hands with five-card suits are rebid in terms of no trumps instead of the suit, when the first response was a minimum of three in the suit, but nevertheless opener responds with a slam try.

Depression Has Killed Hopes of This Fiance

BY DORIS BLAKE.

One of the things to come out of the unemployment confusion is the rearranged living code of those affected. In many instances compromise with an income cut has not proved the trial which a '29 point of view would have predicted. A good many folk found that they could get along on a great deal less and, in certain instances, it has been openly confessed that a more wholesome code of living resulted. A new set of values came out of the trial.

But here is a situation we have not seen discussed among the depression problems.

Martha tells of the four years of depression during which time her fiancé has not had steady employment. He has managed to get and hold jobs at intervals, but through no fault of his own, said jobs lacked the stability that spurs men on to better things. Each time that the young man was released from his job, it was because of a cutting down of employés. Naturally, since in each instance he was a newcomer, he was among the "dispensables." Martha explains that the house with which said young man was connected four years ago went out of business. What has happened to her young man, Martha notes with alarm, is a slow transformation from the old ambitious youth to a chap whose now favorite remark is: "What's the use?"

"He seems to be content with any old thing now," Martha says, "and it burns me up."

Instead of the old bright dreams they two used to dream together, today it's "There isn't any use trying to get anywhere. There isn't any use trying to save money, or building for a decent home, or studying or doing anything to get ahead." The "blight" is on the man to stay, Martha thinks.

What's to be done to restore the old self-confidence? Martha asks and answers: "I suppose it will only be done by women like myself never letting go."

A BLESSING ONLY .... NO MENACE TO ANY SOUND INSTITUTION

RADIO ADVERTISING

By M. L. ANNENBERG, President and Publisher of RADIO GUIDE

THE new thing is criticized foolishly, at first, then accepted placidly, then understood and praised as it should be.

When the locomotive came, it was said that hundreds of stage coach drivers would be put out of work. The locomotive gave new jobs to millions of workers, and paid to the least of them more than any stage coach driver ever got.

The first inventor of the sewing machine was persuaded by his wife to break up his model, "because it would put so many poor sewing women out of work." Another man made a sewing machine, somebody else attached electric power to it. And it has given work to millions of women who could not have found work with the slow hand needle, and enabled them to earn in eight hours more than Hood's poor woman in "The Song of the Shirt" could have earned in two weeks.

The linotype machine made the old-time "hand type" compositor fear that the world was coming to an end; for him, the printer was doomed. There are five times as many printers working on linotype machines as there ever were working at the case, straining their eyesight picking out the letters one at a time by hand.

The printing press was denounced. It would spread harmful ideas among the people, only the upper class should do the thinking, the lower classes should obey. Printed books should be kept away from them.

TO SUPPRESS BOOKS

England passed a law requiring every writer of a book to deposit his manuscript with the public authorities, and wait patiently, perhaps for a year, for permission to print, after proper censorship. By that stupid law, English literature might have been bound down indefinitely, and stupid, meddling legislation even now might interfere with the usefulness of the radio, unless public opinion should exert itself.

Fortunately, English freedom of thought found a defender in the great Milton. He wrote his "Areopagitica," denouncing arrogant stupidity that would have chained liberty of thought and speech. The printing of Areopagitica" killed, once and for all, the attempt to control the written word in England, and it is, undoubtedly, thanks to Milton, so wisely selected by Cromwell as secretary to put Cromwell's iron thought into words, that this nation has freedom of the press incorporated in its constitution.

The people may some day have to insert in their constitution a clause specifically guaranteeing "freedom of the radio." Freedom of the press means freedom of thought and its expression. The radio, newest and greatest medium for thought-expression, supreme medium for spreading thought throughout the world, should be free as the air through which radio's message travels.

Why Radio Advertising?

There have been foolish objections to using the radio as a medium for advertising. This country has even been advised to follow the example of England, and forbid use of advertising by radio.

The United States should not follow, but be warned by the example of England, warned by its dull, dismal radio programs, warned by the fact that owners of British radio sets are taxed to pay for a program, stupid and unattractive, and must "tune in" on programs that originate in France, Germany, or elsewhere on the continent, to escape dull British programs based on "no radio advertising, and no money to pay for good programs."

For newspapers, advertising makes possible the production of newspapers that people want, and for weeklies and magazines the same.

Mr. Curtis of the Saturday Evening Post has issued editions that actually cost to produce as much as thirty-five cents each, and more, yet these publications were distributed to readers at five cents each, sold to boys that distribute them at a price giving them a good profit.

Would anybody suggest forbidding advertising in the Saturday Evening Post, the New York Times, the San Francisco Examiner or the Chicago Tribune? Such a suggestion would be considered simply idiotic.

The suggestion that advertising by radio be interfered with, for any alleged "reason" is similarly idiotic. Advertising makes possible radio programs of the highest value, makes it unnecessary to lay any tax on radio instruments once they are bought. We are taxed enough without that, Heaven knows.

Few things in this country are free, they include air, water, sunshine, and now the radio. Let us hope that official meddling will never interfere with that important freedom.

The Hitherto Inaccessible Now Free to All

There was a time when Grand Opera, performed in New York's Metropolitan Opera House, could be enjoyed only by the few that sat in the "diamond horseshoe," the other few that could pay eight dollars, plus government tax, for a seat in the orchestra, or the young and old, real lovers of music, that crowded the galleries, paying high prices even there.

Now, thanks to a radio advertiser, George Washington Hill of the American Tobacco Company, the programs of the Metropolitan Opera House are sent through the air, carried free, in all their perfection of voice, melody and orchestration, to millions of houses that joyfully welcome them.

What an education in music for children, what a delight, what a spiritual consolation for millions of mothers who never had hoped to know the world's finest music, interpreted by the greatest artists, and the finest orchestras.

Christmas Eve comes, and millions are inspired, filled with happiness and gratitude, when radio brings to them the magnificent voice of the great artist, Schumann-Heink, singing the most beautiful of all Christmas songs, "Silent Night, Holy Night," announcing the divine birth.

This, as is proper, not connected with any advertising program, is a public contribution by one of the great radio corporations, the National Broadcasting Company.

Radio advertising, thanks to Mr. Young and Mr. Swope, who rule the General Electric Company, engages the learned and capable master of music, Dr. Damrosch, to select for performance by a carefully chosen orchestra the finest of the world's music, interpreting it with his own voice for millions of American homes, where mothers and children listen respectfully and thankfully.

Such an artist as Eddie Cantor, from a mere entertainer of small crowds such as could be seated in a Ziegfeld show, or other theatre, has been made an intimate friend in millions of homes, thanks to Chase & Sanborn, who pay a very large sum to Cantor, although nothing like what his work deserves, and pay for the radio that carries his voice all over the nation.

Voices of Important Men

Indefinitely you could multiply instances of great service rendered by the radio, and advertising enterprise connected with radio.

It enables Henry Ford to address the nation on subjects far from advertising, and his son, Edsel Ford, to greet and encourage at the same moment every Ford dealer in the United States and Canada, and across the ocean in Great Britain, and elsewhere.

It enables Harvey Firestone Jr., son of a brilliant father, to talk to millions that use his father's product, so well known that it is not necessary to mention its name.

Radio, thanks to advertising energy, enterprise and generosity, brings to the public the most important and delightful personalities, the most magnificent, inspiring music, the news as it occurs hour by hour, events of the world and views of the most important men. All these things are offered to all of the public, to the solitary dweller in a city hotel that advertises intelligently "a radio in every room," or the still more lonely man in his little cabin on the desert, or his log hut in the forest. There comes to them, through the ether, all that is worth while and interesting.

Advertising Is the Commissariat of Radio

When an army sallies forth to conquer, it goes to redress a national wrong, protect from attack, or other reason. It does not go forth to eat, but it must eat. No army will go far without its commissary department providing food as the army marches. It is not true, as has been said, that "an army marches on its belly," but it is true that a hungry army, a half-starved army, an army that is not paid, is a discouraged and not very valuable army.

What the commissariat is to the army, and its efficiency in war, the advertising department is to the radio, and its efficiency in education, entertainment, and in establishment of close relations, mental brotherhood among men.

Helpful to True Newspaper Enterprise

Some newspaper editors object to what they call "competition of radio." They think money spent on radio advertising should be spent in newspapers, that advertising "belongs to them." In this country, advertising and other rewards belong to the man that can earn them. Nobody has any God-given right to anything.

Intelligent publishers know that, far from being harmful competitors, radio and radio advertising will, in the end, prove to be useful collaborators of true newspaper enterprise.

It is a timid publisher who has not enough confidence in his own newspaper to feel that it can survive honest competition. Such a man would do well to sell his newspaper and buy a soda water fountain. The radio cannot, as yet, supply ice cream sodas.

Advertising is minimized, kept in the background in radio broadcasts. Mr. Alfred P. Sloan Jr's. radio advertising of General Motors, for instance, admirably planned, is not detailed advertising. It is more a reminder, an artistic awakening of interest. It does not compete, or pretend to compete, with detailed advertising in newspapers, the magazine or weekly, in which exact reasons for buying a Chevrolet, Pontiac, La Salle, Buick, Cadillac, etc., with "knee action" and "non-draft ventilation," are set forth in convincing words and striking pictures.

Mr. Sloan, advertising by radio for General Motors, makes it necessary for his advertising department to concentrate more intelligently, intensively on advertising by the printed page, that his great organization may get the benefit of the nation-wide interest in his product, aroused by radio.

Neglecting Nothing—Utilizing Everything

What is true of Mr. Sloan is also true of Mr. Chrysler, who talks directly to his agents and the public, through the ether, true of various special brands, true of every thoroughly American enterprise that realizes the importance of neglecting nothing and utilizing everything within reach.

Newspapers should help to build up the radio, and the intelligent newspaper will do so.

The radio will help to promote and increase advertising in newspapers, magazines, weeklies.

Whatever benefits all the people of the United States benefits every good worker, advertiser, manufacturer in the United States.

And the radio at this moment, apart from the Church and public schools, is the American people's greatest blessing.

The best plan is to discuss matters frankly and openly, instead of whispering about them. I am an owner of newspapers in addition to being Publisher of Radio Guide, and I am convinced that radio will help newspapers, increase advertising, emphasize the value of publicity and in no way interfere with newspaper success, usefulness or profits.

If, however, radio were really a menace to newspaper advertising, that would be no excuse for conspiring against radio, or encouraging interference with freedom of radio, as important to the public as freedom of the press.

Radio needs newspaper co-operation, and newspapers need the power that radio can give them. And, happily, no good new idea has ever been killed by conspiring jealously, although the attempt has often been made.

The above article from "Radio Guide" is reproduced here because I believe it will promote sane and friendly discussion of a most important question.]

DON'T PASS UP SECOND FLIGHT HORSES IN DERBY

Winner May Be an 'In Betweener.'

This is the second of a series of three articles on the prospects of the various candidates in the Kentucky Derby.

BY FRENCH LANE.

There is an old theory among the horse track betting men that persons who eventually finish in front of the game do not play longshots. Neither do they waste their money backing short priced favorites.

They roll up their profits, according to the sages of the homestretch, by wagering on horses in the second flight, the sort of horses which win frequently and pay from 4 to 1 to 12 to 1.

It is the horses in the second flight of the sixtieth Kentucky Derby to be run one week from Saturday afternoon which are to be discussed today.

Not Quite Outsiders.

The prospective Derby field we have put together reveals nine of these "in between" starters. Their accomplishments cannot possibly place them among the stoutly backed favorites. Each is a little too good to be rated as a rank outsider.

Yet if you are going to try to pick the Derby winner and wager a few bobs on your judgment of horse flesh, you possibly will be out of luck if you overlook them. Colts and fillies are in the second flight of this year's Derby field which may beat anybody's race horse. The more we look them over the more we become convinced that the Derby winner is hidden away somewhere among these nine "in betweeners."

Two Noted Stables in This Class.

It may be that the presence in the second flight of the Derby hopes of two of the most famous racing stables in the world may have influenced us a bit in coming to this conclusion. The stables we have in mind are those of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney and of his aunt, Mrs. Helen Hay Whitney, whose race track nom de course is Greentree stable.

Still we don't think that's the case and do not believe either of these particular Whitneys will have much to say about this year's Derby.

Dan Sabath—A son of Monk's Way-Southern Kiss, the latter a daughter of the great Peter Pan. He will race in the silks of Albert Sabath, the president of the Hawthorne track in Chicago. Dan was a rogue at the barrier last season. He lost race after race because he didn't know just when to start running. He got away so slowly he was up against a handicap impossible for any horse to overcome. Finally he won a stake race—the Detroit Juvenile handicap—and wound up the season by turning in a smashing effort at Latonia to finish fourth in the mile of the Kentucky Jocky club stakes which was won by Mata Hari. He won only three races all year in 15 starts but was forever mowing down horses in his dash down the stretch. He has been the hardest worker of all of this year's Derby favorites. His trainer, B. S. Michell, saddled Reigh Count when Reigh Count won the 1928 Derby.

Jabot—A filly in the Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney barn and the smartest Whitney 2 year old to race last season. She won six races in 12 starts and $29,620. Col Bradley's Bazar beat her at a mile at Laurel last fall, then in the Selima stakes Jabot turned the tables and trounced Bazar. She is a daughter of Sickle-Frilette, the latter a daughter of Man-'O-War. For the most part she raced against those of her own sex last season.

Peace Chance — His workouts at Churchill Downs under the direction of the veteran western horseman Peter Coyne indicate he has a splendid chance to win the Derby. He will sport the silks of Joseph E. Widener. Peace Chance won two races in seven starts last year, failing to beat any horse of consequence. Yet he is bred in the purple. His daddy is Chance Shot, a son of Fair Play. His mother is Peace, a daughter of the English sire Stefan the Great. He has never been asked to race more than six fur-

In the WAKE of the NEWS

KENTUCKY DERBY.

THE sixtieth Kentucky Derby at Louisville May 5, a week from Saturday, appears in advance to have more class than in recent years. The prospective field "looks" better than since Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand set a record of 2:01 4-5 in 1931 and started that famous rivalry with A. C. Bostwick's Mate. Perhaps the field, taken as a whole, is better than since 1928, when Reigh Count in heavy going triumphed over the largest number of starters in Derby annals.

MRS. PAYNE WHITNEY.

This state of affairs is a great relief to turf commentators, even if the later events do not confirm the prognosis. It enhances the enthusiasm which one always embraces for a Kentucky Derby, and one feels he is honest to readers in that enthusiasm.

It was not so last year. Most of us thought the field was below caliber, in fact pretty ordinary. We said so in veiled words and by inference, going about as far as turf writers dare without getting too far "out on the limb." There always is the chance that some colt or filly will come along, go on to greatness, and upset pessimistic estimates.

That possibility is greater, of course, for the Kentucky Derby than for others, because it is the first great test of the year for 3 year olds. In the change from 2 year old babyhood to maturity some youngsters will show stamina for the longer routes, while others will fall into the class known as sprinters and milers.

Estimates of 1932 contenders were substantiated later. The year did not produce a really outstanding champion. The leading money winner of the year was Inlander, third in the Florida Derby and unplaced at Louisville, which found slow tracks to his liking in the Arlington Classic and Travers stake to compose his total.

Now turf class is an intangible thing. Royal breeding is no sure criterion. Noted sires and dams all too frequently have wayward sons and daughters, known in the vernacular as "counterfeits." In this category often are found many yearlings bringing the highest prices in the fall sales ring.

Ask an old horseman to tell why he thinks some particular horse has it before being proved and he'll give you an explanation of many words which simmers down to the fact that he really "senses" or "feels" it.

Perhaps The Wake and numerous others will be proved incorrect in appraising highly the class of probable starters May 5, but from somewhere in that list we think one or more notable performers will prove themselves during the racing year of 1934.

With surprises likely to come from any direction, we can make a good start on the list with Bazaar, Boy Valet, Black Buddy, Cavalcade, Count Rae, Discovery, Mata Hari, Sir Thomas, Riskulus possibly, and Time Clock. And such is the Kentucky Derby that an outsider may defeat any of those named.

It's strange what impresses when one has been away for several weeks in the southland doing stunts for Friend Arch. Riding home from the railroad station we remarked to the friend who had met us, "Just see how many cars with Illinois license numbers!" He looked at us in surprise and said, "Why not?" Then we realized, "Why Not?"

POLO TEAMS IN NATIONAL TITLE GAMES TONIGHT

Guest Arrives Today for Open Play.

Two national indoor polo championships will be decided tonight at the 124th Field Artillery armory arena, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue. The Chicago Riding club and New York Athletic club Winged Foots meet for the senior title, and the Boulder Brook trio of Scarsdale, N. Y., will meet the Cleveland Riding club for the junior crown.

Although defeated Tuesday, the lineups of the Winged Foots and Cleveland Riding club will not be changed tonight, it was announced by Art Borden, captain of the New York team, and Bill Fergus, the Cleveland leader.

Chicagoans Rough Riders.

Borden will be at his regular position as back, and his mates will be Buddy Combs and Billy Reynolds. Combs, who was the hero of last Saturday's opening game, won in overtime by the New York Athletic club trio, was not as effective in Tuesday's game. This was attributed to the fast and furious attack of the Chicago trio and their strategy of rushing Combs. These tactics also prevented Combs from feeding the ball to Reynolds, who was in position to score often.

Borden was so busy staving off the three-man attack of the Chicago Riding club that he had little opportunity to launch an offensive of his own. Nicholls proved especially troublesome to the New York star with his tantalizing shifts and change of pace. Capt. Corpening and Lieut. Smith did their part with hard, slashing riding in bumping opponents out of the way.

No less surprising than the victory of the Chicago riders over New York Tuesday was the 7½ to 4½ triumph of Boulder Brook over the Cleveland team. At the end of the first period it was a runaway for the Buckeyes who forged into a 5½ point lead. But from then on the easterners held the western junior champions while piling up point after point.

Borrow Ponies.

The Cleveland team will be handicapped tonight in the matter of mounts. Capt. Fergus revealed yesterday that only five of the team's string of eight ponies are in perfect condition. The other three, he said, would be at their peak by Saturday night, but will not be used tonight.

Fergus asked for a delay, but Johnny Loeb, captain of Boulder Brook, has found it necessary to return to New York, and tonight's game will be played as scheduled. Pony worries were somewhat alleviated when the Boulder Brook players agreed to loan the Clevelanders one of their string, and several Chicago polo stars offered the pick of their strings. IS THIS DEAN'S BIG YEAR?

Sidney Dean, captain of the University of Iowa track team, will make his last bid for a Drake relay championship in the quarter mile Saturday. Dean, a senior, expects this to be his big season.

[This is the fourth of a series of sketches on university track and field men in the central states. The next will be published Monday.]

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Will Sidney Dean, captain of the University of Iowa track and field team, win a major championship before he is graduated this spring? This is his ambition, and because the slender senior from Traer, Ia., is well liked by fellow athletes and classmates many are following his races this year.

Dean is the ninth track captain at Iowa in the last 12 years who has been a quarter miler. In dual meets he also has competed in the two dashes, and while he has scored well in all, getting 26¼ points so far this year, he never has led the field home in any event of conference or national import.

Fuqua Is Out of Way.

This may be the year, although there is Ivan Fuqua, of Indiana university, conference champion, barring his path in the Big Ten. On Saturday, at the Drake relays, however, Dean's ambition may become a fact. Fuqua and his fellow Hoosiers have elected to run at the Pennsylvania relays.

This decision was made primarily because Fuqua, Hornbostel, and other Indiana seniors always have competed at Drake and before they ended their span of intercollegiate competition they wished to visit the Penn relays. What is Drake's loss at its silver centennial is a gain for Dean.

For two years Sidney Dean was an also ran in the Conference and National collegiate 440 yard races. He hasn't the physical qualifications for the race, which probably is the most grueling of all running events. Dean is only 5 feet 9½ inches tall and he weighs 155 pounds.

Dean Moves Up.

Last year in the National collegiate meet at Soldiers' field Dean finished fourth. Slats Hardin of Louisiana, Fuqua, and Ablowich of Southern California were ahead of him. In the National A. A. U. meet Dean was runner-up, the same position he held in the Big Ten indoor meet at the University of Chicago this winter when Fuqua broke the Conference indoor quarter mile record. This belated bid for prominence is the basis of Dean's hopes for a championship this year.

BORDAGARAY AND HAYES LEAD SOX TO 3-2 VICTORY

Wyatt Gets Credit for Whipping Tigers.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., April 25.—French Bordagaray, who could make a good living teaching roosters to crow; two silent men named Jack Hayes and Whit Wyatt, and several other fine fellows were the heavy gents in a stirring White Sox victory over the proud Detroit Tigers today. The score of the event, which saw the Sox make two runs in the eighth and one in the ninth after trailing, 2 to 0, was Chicago, 3; Detroit, 2.

Bordagaray, inserted in the lineup for the first time today, knocked three hits in a row as his share of the Sox total of eight safeties. The third of these precipitated a combination of Sox accomplishments and Tiger panic which tied the score.

Hayes' part was a single which launched the vital eighth inning rally and another single which drove in the winning run in the ninth.

And Wyatt continued the Sox only winning pitcher because he permitted only six men to face him in the eighth and ninth innings. The Sox have played six games and Wyatt has been the pitcher of record in four of them, twice as the victor—the only winner, incidentally, on the Sox staf of eleven pitchers.

Mr. Jones Does Well.

But while we are talking about pitchers, do not sniff at the day's work of one Samuel Pond Jones. For six innings Sam held the enemy to two widely separated singles and in no sense bogged down in the seventh. Since the Sox won, it is not ungraceful to say that the Tigers were extremely lucky in the process of making those first two runs of the game in the seventh inning.

And now, perhaps, is the time to tell just what happened in the Sox eighth and ninth innings, rousing peppery sessions in which joy supplanted the most dismal gloom you've ever seen around a baseball outfit.

First, here's the way the Sox tied the score in the eighth, the tying marker coming over on a wild pitch just before the third out was accomplished. Hayes led off with a single to center. Uhalt batted for Shea and flied to Goslin. Swanson batted for Jones and beat out a slow roller toward third, Hayes stopping at second. Frasier replaced Auker. Bordagaray knocked that third successive hit, a single to left, scoring Hayes, and when Goslin threw the ball past Cochrane Swanson reached third and Bordagaray second. With a long fly needed to tie and a single to put the Sox in front, Haas popped a gentle foul to Owen for the second out. Frasier then loosed a peach of a wild pitch which enabled Swanson to score the tying run, Bordagaray pulling up at third. Bonura was thrown out by Frasier.

Hayes Crabs Act.

Misplay in Ninth Prevents Shutout.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Cubs continued to make progress yesterday, thus perpetuating and improving some of the unique records they have compiled to date. They hung up their seventh victory in as many starts, a matter in which the Cincinnati Reds assisted instead of opposing. And for the seventh time a starting pitcher, in this instance Pat Malone, maintained his position until the day's work was properly disposed of. The score was 6 to 1, and Pat would have had the added pleasure of a shutout if Bill Jurges hadn't blundered at the last moment.

The potent factor in the Cub attack wasn't hitting as might be suspected. The Reds seemed to be in a mood for comics. They amused 6,000 spectators with five errors, three of which were contributed by the usually reliable Jim Bottomley. Four of these slips happened while luckless Paul Derringer was trying to struggle through a six inning stretch. The Cubs picked up four of their first five runs as the result of these four miscues. The sixth run was 100 per cent earned. Jurges did this single handed by drilling a homer into the seats.

Hitters Records Broken.

Some of the records the Cubs weren't able to carry into the seventh day of work concerned only three players. Tiger Klein had hit safely in six straight games. Tuck Stainback and Manager Charles Grimm had done the same. Yesterday the trio went hitless. Not one of them hit anything resembling a safe smash. Klein, three times against Derringer and once against relief man Ray Kolp, didn't even drive a ball beyond the infield. Neither did Grimm. And a high southwest wind made it an ideal day for these two left handed swingers to lift a ball into the right field bleacher.

Malone now can boast a fairly commendable record against the Reds who last season kept themselves in good health by feasting on Cub meat. Last week at Cincinnati, Malone halted them on one run and five hits. Yesterday it was one run and six hits. Incidentally, the Reds have contributed five of the seven victories that are holding the Cubs at the top of the percentage column with a perfect average.

Attempt to Desert Malone.

Malone's first bit of trouble was caused by his mates making an apparent attempt to desert him, but Pat refused to blow up under the strain. Jurges originated the idea of giving Pat something to fret over. He fumbled a grounder by Comorosky. Not to be outdone, Babe Herman muffed Koenig's fly. Piet's sacrifice put the runners on third and second. Malone cleaned up this situation by getting Hafey on a pop to English and Bottomley on a roller to Grimm.

The Cubs went through two fruitless innings and Jurges then opened the third with a double to left center, thus bringing on a two run splurge. The two bagger was followed by a pass to Hartnett. Derringer tried to catch Jurges off second, but inadvertently hit the Cub shortstop in the back with the ball. Jurges went to third on the error. Malone bounced into a double play, Jurges scoring. English survived when Bottomley let a soft roller escape. English stole second and ran home when Billy Herman dropped a Texas league single in short center. Piet threw out Klein to conclude the inning.

Malone Walks Two in Sixth.

Bottomley assumed responsibility for starting the Cubs on the way to three runs in the fifth. With one out, Hartnett popped to Bottomley who dropped the ball. Bottomley picked it up and tossed to second hoping to get Gabby there, but the throw went wild. Gabby scored on Malone's single to center. English doubled into the right field corner and Malone refused to quit running until he had crossed the plate. English took third on the throw in. Billy Herman walked. While Derringer was tossing out Klein, English scooted across the plate. Babe Herman's fly was the third out.

The second hit off Malone was a

Montana, Texas Squads First to Arrive.

Des Moines, Ia., April 25.—[Special.]—Athletes representing the universities of Texas and Montana were the first on the scene of the annual Drake relays, which will be held Friday and Saturday. Others entered in the games are expected to arrive tomorrow in time for workouts on the Drake track.

Coach Clyde Littlefield of Texas led five members of his team to Des Moines. Coach Littlefield will serve as official starter of the games. Montana will be represented by six men. Louisiana State's squad, national champion, is expected to arrive tomorrow morning.

N. U. OFF FOR DRAKE.

Ten Northwestern track athletes accompanied by Coach Frank Hill, will leave by automobile today for the Drake relays at Des Moines, Ia. The Wildcats will enter men in the distance medley and the mile relays as well as a number of individual events.

Also present at Drake will be Martha Stull, Northwestern co-ed who has been named queen of the relays. Miss Stull was picked from a group of beauties nominated by schools represented in the meet.

The Northwestern athletes making the trip are: Ollie Duggins, Fritz Kaumans, Jack Fleming, and George Farley, members of the relay teams, and Ollie Olson and Mal Read, high jump; Art Jens, hurdles; Ed Horne, javelin, and Bob Stephen and Hal Goers, shotput and discus.

PURDUE LEAVES FOR DRAKE.

Lafayette, Ind., April 25.—[Special.]—Coach Orval Martin and seven members of Purdue's track squad left today for De Moines, Ia., where the Boilermaker relay combinations will seek honors in the medley and two mile races in the Drake relays. Duane Purvis, national collegiate javelin throwing champion, will defend the Drake relays championship he won last spring as a sophomore. Kenneth Sandbach, world record holder in the 60 yard indoor high hurdles, will be strong contender in the hurdles.

The Boilermaker relay combinations will be selected from five men, including Capt. Popejoy, McQueen, Moore, Crossman, and Glendenning.

BADGERS ENTER ONE TEAM.

Madison, Wis., April 25.—[Special.]—Wisconsin will probably enter only one quartet of runners in the Drake relays at Des Moines Friday and Saturday.

The relay in which the Wisconsin runners will make their bid at Drake is the distance medley event. In this race Paul Krueger will run the mile, Karl Kleinschmidt the three-quarters, George Kay the half, and probably Charles Albright the quarter.

Wisconsin will also have few entries in the special events. Coach Jones' present plans provided for taking only Irv Rubow and Rudy Rotter in the weights, Bob Clark in the hurdles, and possibly Herb Steuwe, another hurdler, to the carnival.

MICHIGAN ENTERS RELAYS.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 25.—[Special.]—Two relay teams and five men for the open events will make up the Michigan contingent at the Drake relays Saturday. Coach Charlie Hoyt has decided definitely to enter teams in the quarter mile and mile relays.

The Wolverine representatives will be in only fair shape, as they have had just four days of outdoor practice. Cold weather and rain kept them indoors half of last week and after less than an hour's work Monday, had them penned up in Yost field hou again.

It appears that Willis Ward, Bob Lamb, Cass Kemp, and Capt. Tom Ellerby will make up the quarter mile team. Ellerby, Ed Lemen, Harvey Smith, and Harvey Patton will be on the mile team. In addition, Ward will compete in the high jump and 100 yard dash; Dave Hunn will work in the pole vault; Skip Etchells in the discus; Adam Stone in the javelin, and Neree Alix and Rod Howell in the two mile run.

MISSOURI SENDS NINE.

Columbia, Mo., April 25.—[Special.]—The University of Missouri's track team will leave tomorrow for the Drake relays at Des Moines, Ia., Friday and Saturday. Nine men were named today by Coach H. J. Huff to make the trip.

The men named to represent the Tigers in the games include Cooley, Flanders, Warner, Hatfield, Cooper, Nichols, Young, Hardy, and Walker. The Tigers took second place in the medley and third in the 880 yard relay in the Kansas carnival last week.

NEBRASKA TO SEND 17.

Lincoln, Neb., April 25.—(AP)—The University of Nebraska will be represented in the Drake relays at Des Moines, Ia., Friday and Saturday by a team of 17 track and field athletes headed by the Cornhuskers' star hurdler, Heye Lambertus. Part of the contestants will leave here tomorrow and the others Friday morning.

BREAKS RECORD IN TRIAL.

Springfield, Mo., April 26.—(AP)—Stopping off here for a brief workout en route to the Drake relays at Des Moines this week-end, Jack Torrance of Louisiana State university this afternoon put the 16 pound shot 55 feet 8 inches.

The throw beats his own American record of 53 feet 3½ inches and the official world record of 53 feet ½ inch. Coach Moore and several Drury college athletes measured the toss with a steel tape and announced the distance. Eight other Louisiana State athletes besides Torrance are entered at Drake.

List 17 Track Records for O. K. by Board

PARIS, April 25.—(AP)—A compilation made by L'Auto, French sporting publication, revealed that applications for 17 world records in track and field athletics will be considered when the International Amateur Athletic federation meets at Stockholm in August. L'Auto listed only the records about which there was no doubt and which appear certain to receive official consideration.

The list includes nine performances by American athletes, two of them by Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette university sprinter. Metcalfe's marks are 10.3 seconds for the 100 meter dash, equaling the record held by Eddie Tolan and Percy Williams, the Canadian Olympic star, and 20.6 for 200 meters, duplicating the record established by Roland Locke in 1926.

List Morriss' Record.

Although Johnny Morriss, Louisiana hurdler, was officially timed in 14.3 seconds in the 110 meter hurdles, the mark listed by L'Auto is a tenth of a second slower, 14.4, duplicating performances by Percy Beard, the former Alabama Poly athlete, and Jack Keller, the Ohio State ace.

The current accepted record for the event is 14.4 held by E. Wennstrom of Sweden and B. Sjostedt of Finland. The failure to include Morriss' better time recalls the official change made in awarding world record recognition to Locke's 220 in 1928, the first time the congress was called upon to consider records made in tenths of seconds. Then the record submitted for Locke by the Amateur Athletic union was 20.5 seconds, but the international body would only grant the 20.6 mark.

Eastman's Mark Up.

The other marks submitted for Americans are Ben Eastman's 600 yards in 1:09.2, which is one and two-tenths second faster than the eight year old record of D. G. A. Lowe of Great Britain; a high jump of 2.04 meters [6 feet 8 5-16 inches] by Walter Marty; a 4.37 meter [14 feet 4⅜ inches] pole vault by another Californian, Bill Graber, and Leo Sexton's shot put mark of 16.6 meters, approximately 53 feet ½ inch.

There appears to be little chance the Sexton's toss will be accepted as a mark of 53 feet 1⅞ inches, made by Franz Douda of Czechoslovakia, also has been submitted. Marty, who does his jumping for Fresno State college, already has bettered the record submitted for him.

MOSS, HELGETH JOIN MILLS; FACE HOUSE OF DAVID

Two new players will be in the Mills' lineup when the club opens the season Sunday at Mills stadium in a double header with the House of David team.

Malcolm Moss, former Chicago Cub pitcher and Benny Helgeth, former Philly infielder will oppose the Benton Harbor team. Manager Bill Harley is confident these veterans will add considerable strength to the Wisconsin-Illinois league champions.

Harley also announced the signing of Johnny Conlon, outfield; Wally Shanner, outfielder and former Red Sox player, who joined the Mills near the close of last season, and Bert Atkinson also an outfielder.

The first game Sunday will start at 1:30 o'clock and ladies will be admitted free.

Woods and Waters By Bob Becker

Chicago waterfowl hunters had an opportunity to discuss duck shooting regulations with J. N. Darling, chief of the U. S. biological survey last week, when Mr. Darling was in Chicago to speak before the annual convention of the Izaak Walton league. The occasion was a quiet luncheon in a downtown hotel.

There was no publicity. It was an unscheduled get together of some 35 prominent Chicago duck shooters who wanted to meet Mr. Darling and hear his views on the waterfowl situation.

The luncheon was arranged by Robert Bartlett of Chicago in coöperation with Seth Gordon of the American Game association. Approximately 15 big shooting clubs in the Illinois river country were represented. All present were eager to hear Mr. Darling's views of the duck baiting question, open seasons and other controversial problems affecting waterfowl hunting.

Among the "higher ups" in conservation circles who exchanged ideas were: Former Senator Harry B. Hawes; Charles Thompson, acting director of conservation for Illinois; Theodore H. Frison, chief of the Illinois Natural History survey; Brooke Anderson, member of the migratory bird advisory board, and Gordon.

Among the hunting club representatives were: Phillip D. Armour and William E. Clow Jr., officers of the Duck club at Henry, Ill.; N. Landon Hoyt, secretary and treasurer of the Wild Wing lodge in Mason county; Walter C. Peacock of the Crane Lake club; L. H. Barkhausen, proprietor of the Cuba Island shooting preserve near Saidora, Ill.; John B. Drake, president of the Grand Island lodge, Bath, Ill.; Charles Fernald, Chicago banker, who is a director of the Wild Wing lodge, Mason county, Ill.; Phillip F. W. Peck of the Sanganois club in the Illinois river bottoms, and many others.

All of the duck shooters present obviously were much impressed by Mr. Darling's frank observations and sincerity. He told them that by July 1 and certainly not any later than the 10th the survey would have reports on the northern duck crop. At that time shooting regulations for the coming fall will be decided upon.

He made it plain that it is up to the advisory board to decide on the length of the hunting season. He also said the number of days allowed for shooting ducks and geese could not possibly be more numerous than the duck supply would stand. In other words, the duck situation is now at a point where American shooters must continue to watch the seed stock. We can have duck shooting, but not any more than the duck population will stand.

Mr. Darling said he had two flying squads of federal wardens in the field to catch spring duck shooters. One squad caught 19 of these violators in one day on the Platte river.

He also told how he had had to hire an attorney with his own money last week to defend the two federal wardens who, in self defense, shot an Illinois river spring duck shooter with 15 ducks in his game bag.

WISCONSIN SIGNS ASSISTANT COACH; TO DROP THREE

Madison, Wis., April 25.—[Special.]—A reorganization of the University of Wisconsin althletic department was made known today, following approval by the board of regents of the appointment of Arthur Mansfield, former Badger athlete, as an assistant professor in physical education.

Mansfield, at present athletic director at Springfield [Ohio] High school, won a letter in football, was a member of the basketball squad, held the all university heavyweight boxing championship for two years, and played regularly for three years on the baseball team, being captain his senior year.

The reorganization will relieve Guy Sundt of instructional work in physical education courses, and eliminate three present members of the athletic department with completion of their courses in June.

They are George Nelson, replaced this year as freshman basketball coach by Bud Foster, and at present an instructor in physical education; Delbert Secrist, assistant frosh football and baseball coach, and Walter Mathias, manager of intramural wrestling.

Mansfield will teach courses in physical education now handled by Sundt, assist in coaching freshman football, handle freshman baseball, and manage intramural wrestling and boxing. He was voted a salary of $3,450 by the regents.

KAUFMAN PITS SKILL AGAINST SIGILIO'S PUNCH

Veteran Confident He Can Handle Slugger.

Joey Kaufman, eastern lightweight who has been boxing 10 years, expressed confidence yesterday in his ability to halt the winning streak of Frank Sigilio, who has won all of his 15 professional fights. They will meet tomorrow in the main event of the Cicero stadium boxing show.

"I know just how to fight this fellow," Kaufman said, "and he's not going to hit me with that powerful right to the jaw."

Kaufman has fought the best flyweights, bantamweights, featherweights and lightweights with a measure of success. His ability to stave off rushes and hard punches of his young opponent tomorrow, however, will have to be proved. He appears in good physical condition.

Sigilio toyed with a sparring partner for three rounds yesterday in his final drill. He was the aggressor, jabbing, hooking and crossing wallops to the head and body. The fine effort did not seem to have any effect on Kaufman, who was training near by.

Earl Taylor, Joe Redd, and Babe Davis are due today from St. Louis for their matches at White City tomorrow. Taylor is paired with Young Stuhley, Redd will oppose Henry Rothier, and Davis will clash with Jack Kracken. Each of these contests is set for six rounds. Another six rounder on the program will bring together Lou Terry and Geno Salvatore.

Jim Cummings, middleweight, sparred with Angelo Garlow yesterday for a six round encounter against Johnny Liston at Peoria Monday. . . . The card scheduled at the Rainbo Fronton Friday has been postponed until May 4. . . . Gene Higgins is to appear in the windup against a suitable foe. . . . Leo Rodak has signed to head the show at the Fronton on May 11. . . . Mickey Joy and Eddie Chinski, welterweights, are being sought to meet in a feature scrap Monday at Midway arena.

BASES ON BALLS HELP YANKEES BEAT A'S, 3-2

Three Passes, Single in 4th Score 2 Runs.

MacFayden, who also defeated the A's last week in Philadelphia, yielded the Mackmen only eight scattered hits, two of which came in the ninth inning, when the former Red Sox hurler squelched a budding rally with Jimmy Foxx on second base with the tying run.

Alton Benton, rookie righthander up from Oklohoma City, pitched well enough to win most games but one streak of wildness in the fourth inning proved costly. He walked Combs, Ruth and Gehrig in succession to fill the bases. A force out sent Combs home with one run and then Lazzeri crashed through with a single to score Ruth.

2 GRANDMOTHERS ENTER 31 MILE MARATHON WALK

Cincinnati, O., April 24.—(AP)—Two grandmothers were entered today for the National A. A. U. 50,000 meter walk to be held here Sunday.

One is Mrs. Cordelia Schwartz, who admits to 50 years and not a bit more, and who has seven grandchildren. The other is Mrs. Lillian [Ma] Trimpe, who has one grandchild, but won't admit her age.

Both are residents of Cincinnati. Both insist they're in this thing to win, 50,000 meters or not. Fifty thousand meters is exactly 31 miles and 125 yards.

They will have to do it in less than ten hours to get recognition. The men struggling in the competitive division for National A. A. U. marathon titles must cover the distance in less than 7½ hours, with no time out for lunch. Bill Chisholm of Los Angeles, former Olympic Walker, ranks as the favorite.

Ma Trimpe claims a hike to the World's Fair and back last October as an indication that she can stand the pace. Mrs. Schwartz holds an American Walkers' association silver trophy for achieving 425 miles of hiking during 1933.

They are entered in the so-called recreational division, an open event over the championship route. Twenty other entrants, all but a handful of them men, will be their competitors.

MOON MULLINS—WILLIE GETS AN EARFULL

THEN CAME VICTORY NO. 7!

Sox Rally to Whip Tigers, 3-2, in Ninth

walked. Marberry, who pitched nine innings yesterday, came in for a big hero strong man appearance, and Hayes promptly crabbed his act by slamming a single to left, scoring Appling with the winning run, Dykes stopping at second. Chamberlin was put on second to run for Dykes, but did little running, for Ruel fouled to Cochrane and Wyatt forced Hayes.

The Chicagoans' belated burst of power blasted the Tigers out of first place, the Yankees supplanting them.

Zeke Delivers Again.

A single by Bonura in the first inning and one by Bordagaray in the third, each after two were out, gave the Sox whatever advantage there was in the first three innings, for in the same span Jones held the Tigers to one hit, a single by Gehringer in the first inning.

The fourth was almost airtight on both sides. Bonura walked to start the Chicago half, but never got to second. In the Tiger half Jones made Walker pop to Hayes, then fanned Greenberg and Fox.

In the first half of the fifth Hayes, Shea, and Jones failed to get the ball out of the infield. In the Tiger half Hayes threw out Owen and Auker fanned. Then Rogell registered the second Detroit hit off Jones, a single to center. Gehringer ended the inning with a foul to Shea.

Frenchy Gets Lost.

Bordagaray led off the sixth with his second and the Sox's third hit, a single to center. Then Frenchy suddenly stopped thinking. He ran clear to second on Haas' fly to Goslin and easily was doubled, Goslin to Greenberg. Rogell threw out Bonura. Nice infield work retired Cochrane, Goslin, and Walker in the sixth. Dykes and Bonura both were noble in this session.

Simmons, Appling, and Dykes were soft touches for Auker in the seventh, after which the Tigers came to bat and started activity in a big way. Greenberg got a double when Haas failed on an attempted shoestring catch in short center. Fox beat out a bunt which Jones grabbed near the third base line, Greenberg taking third. Owen tapped to Jones, who had Greenberg trapped between third and home until Shea fell to his knees, allowing Greenberg to return to third. Fox had taken third, but when he saw Greenberg back on the base he started back to second, whereupon Shea got to his feet and threw the ball to Hayes at second.

Much Ado About Nothing.

At this juncture Greenberg started for home, whereupon Hayes threw the ball to Dykes near home and Dykes overtook Greenberg on his second retreat to third. While the chase was going on Fox again moved to third and owen to second. Auker tapped to Appling and Fox beat Luke's throw to the plate. Rogell singled to right, scoring Owen and putting Auker on third, but was out trying to reach second, Bordagaray to Appling. Hayes threw out Gehringer.

Wyatt, who went to Chicago in the deal which sent Frasier to Detroit, went in to pitch the eighth. Cochrane beat out an infield single, but Goslin hit into a double play and Walker fouled to Bonura.

Cubs and Reds End Series Today; Root Will Pitch

The Cubs-Reds affairs for the time being will be concluded this afternoon at Wrigley field. Charley Root will make his second start of the season for the Cubs. The Reds' pitcher will be either Larry Benton or Allyn Stout.

To encourage the purchase of scorecards the club is offering a daily prize. Each card is numbered and the holder of a number drawn each afternoon will be presented with a season's pass. This is merely another step in the year old warfare between the club and an afternoon paper which prints a scorecard with players properly numbered.

Klein didn't intend to be retired on a pop foul in the first inning, but that's the way he went out. In trying to pull away from one of Derringer's pitches, Klein wasn't quick enough and the ball plunked off his bat and into Koenig's hands near the Cub dugout.

Jurges forgot in the first inning that the Cubs had a center fielder. He went out there determined to get a short fly by Hafey. In spite of the interference Stainback went about his business and grabbed the ball but first knocked the intruder off his feet.

COALS TO PLAY SQUARES.

The Logan Square baseball nine will meet the Spencer Coals at the Logan Square park, Kedzie and Elston avenues, Sunday. It will be the second contest of the season for the Squares.

Cubs Defeat Reds, 6-1, for 7th Straight single by O'Farrell with one out in the fourth. A double play fixed that. The third hit was by Derringer at the start of the fifth. Jurges helped to keep this from becoming serious when he went back of second to make a one-handed stop that cost Koenig a base hit. For additional excitement Malone walked two in the sixth, but the second pass came after two were out. Slade then lifted a harmless fly to Klein. In the home half Jurges uncorked his homer into the left field bleachers.

The Red seventh was somewhat of a novelty, for they managed to record a pair of hits in one inning. Comorosky beat out an infield single after one was out, but Koenig rolled into a force play at second. Then Piet singled to center. Billy Herman went into short right center to get Hafey's popup and thus avoid complications.

Malone had only one out to go in the ninth to assure himself a shutout. Jurges then fumbled Comorosky's grounder and still had a chance to get his man but threw wild. Comorosky was permitted to go to second unmolested. Koenig drove a grounder straight at Billy Herman, but the ball took an unexpected bounce for a single, Comorosky scoring. Klein took Piet's liner to end the battle.

Sox Outfield Veterans Fall Down at Plate

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., April 25.—No one blamed Manager Lew Fonseca for shaking up his White Sox outfield today by the insertion of Frenchy Bordagaray. In the first five games of the season the combined hitting of the outfield equaled the number of hits made by Zeke Bonura, though the Simmons-Haas-Swanson total of eight hits was for nine bases, whereas Zeke in the first five games knocked eight hits for a total of 19 bases.

The grand average of the three outfielders in the first five games was .140. Swanson and Simmons made three singles in 21 times at bat, each, while Haas made a double and a single in 15 times at bat.

Milt Gaston will pitch tomorrow's final with the Tigers and will be opposed by Vic Sorrell, who beat the Sox on the second day of the season.

After tomorrow's final with the Tigers the Sox will push off for a three day visit in St. Louis, where they expect the weather to be warmer and the chore a bit less arduous. Earnshaw may pitch tomorrow if the weather isn't too unpleasant.

Elden Auker, sophomore right hander, who started for the Tigers today, has appeared in three of the five games the Tigers and Sox had played against each other to date. He relieved Marberry in the season opener, though Firpo was credited with the victory. He relieved Schoolboy Rowe in the third game and was the losing pitcher.

Al Simmons now is using a 35 ounce bat, as compared with the 38 ounce implement he wielded in the business of leading the American league in hitting. Somebody told him he was swinging late.

Lew Fonseca Jr. didn't care much for his bat boy job in the opener yesterday, even though possessed of a regulation green storm coat. The young Californian liked his job better today. It was just about as cold, but the wind wasn't blowing so hard.

Ex-Philly's Homer, Double Score Five Runs.

Boston, Mass., April 25.—(AP)—Hal Lee, obtained from Philadelphia in a winter trade, escorted the Boston Braves to a 9 to 4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers today for their third straight triumph, by hitting a home run and a double which accounted for five runs.

Lee cracked out his home run in the fourth with two mates on base to tie the score and then broke the deadlock in the sixth, when with two men again on the bases, he hit his double.

ONLY THESE IRONS HAVE THESE 3 AIDS TO BETTER IRON SHOTS

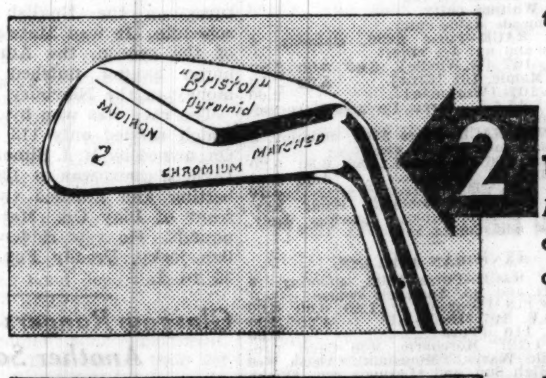
1 The WEIGHTED SOLE

The balance lies at the bottom of the clubhead, providing a far sweeter feel to every shot. Each Bristol PYRAMID Iron has a weighted sole of special design. The lower the balance, the sweeter the feel.



2 The PYRAMID BACK

3 The ADJUSTED WEIGHT

Actually more distance and top spin for long range clubs, and loft and back spin for short range clubs. Note that, as the depth and loft of the blade increases, the Pyramid Weight falls lower.

● On your first round with a set of Bristol Pyramid Irons you can feel and see why, in one season, they have jumped to wide popularity.

The Popular "Whip-It" Shaft

PYRAMID Irons are furnished in the regular Bristol Steel Shaft—also in the new and popular "Whip-It" Steel Shaft for Irons—tapered from top to bottom. It has more whip without sacrificing accuracy.

HAVRE TRACK RECORD EQUALED BY CAVALCADE

Wins First Start as Three Year Old.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 25.—[Special.]—Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade won the Shenandoah purse at the Havre de Grace track from several Kentucky Derby candidates this afternoon. In making his first start as a 3 year-old, Cavalcade, with Mack Garner holding the reins, ran the mile and 70 yards in 1:41 4-5 to equal the track record set by Osculator two years ago.

Agrarian, owned by Frank J. Heller finished second and Jabot, a filly owned by C. V. Whitney, was third.

The other feature on the day's program, the $7,500 added Aberdeen stakes for two-year-olds, was won by Stainforth, property of S. W. Labrot Mrs. Sloane's Psychic Bid was second and Try Sympathy finished third. Stainforth beat Psychic Bid by a nose.

Stainforth, neglected in the betting because of his poor start last time out, paid $145.60 for $2 straight tickets. His owner received a purse of $11,600 for the victory.

Jocky Jimmy Burke rode the winner and covered the four and one-half furlongs in :53 1-5. Stainforth broke into the front and held the lead until the end.

GENTLE KNIGHT WINS

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—Marshall Field's Gentle Knight won at Jamaica today to make it two in a row. Gentle Knight is by Sir Gallahad III.-Nimba and won by three-quarters of a length from Glendye with Hustle two lengths back in third place.

Gentle Knight was heavily played and closed at 8 to 5 after an opening at 5 to 2. He was handled by Tommy Malley who sent him to the front early. The big chestnut gave the impression of effortless speed, but the time for the six furlongs was 1:13 4-5. Several good judges said that Gentle Knight was the finest looking thoroughbred seen so far at the Jamaica meeting.

Toward the end of the race, however, he began to tire and he was being driven hard at the end. Glendye, which had run gamely in second position for most of the way, was slowly wearing down the Field colorbearer.

On the opening day of the meeting Gentle Knight won by a nose from Dusky Princess. He had up 113 pounds on that occasion and carried two more today.

Chicago Nine Enters Big 10 Race at Iowa

Chicago's baseball team will open its Western conference season tomorrow at Iowa City against the Hawkeye club which has won nine games in a row. The Maroon team has a fairly respectable winning streak of its own, having taken its last four games largely because it has given opposing pitchers a terrific pounding.

The leading hitter of the team is Dave Levin, veteran center fielder. Bill Haarlow, sophomore shortstop, who is as much a star on the diamond as he was on the basketball floor, is pressing Levin closely. Both are dependable hitters in the pinches, but Haarlow drives out longer hits.

Wehling Good Leadoff Man.

Bob Langford, a senior, and Ed Novak, a transfer student eligible this season, are the two mainstays of the pitching staf, but Coach Kyle Anderson has two other useful pitchers, Connor Laird and Harry Yedor. Yedor has more stuff than did Roy Henshaw, the lefthander who had a trial with the Cubs. He has an easy motion, a sharp curve, and a fast ball that whistles, but he lacks experience and probably will be useful only for relief.

Offill Steady Catcher.

Capt. Ashley Offill is as good as any catcher in the Big Ten, with a good arm and excellent judgment in handling of the pitchers.

Ed Thompson, a sophomore, has beaten out John Baker for first base, and Richard Cochran, another sophomore, is at second. Bill Comerford, a senior, holds his old position at third base.

Consistency in fielding has not been one of the attributes of the team this season, but there has been considerable improvement as a result of the experience gained in the practice games. If the Maroon players continue to hit as they have in their recent games, however, their wobbly fielding will not be a disadvantage.

MONMOUTH LOSES, 17-9.

Monmouth, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Monmouth used three pitchers today in a vain attempt to halt the slugging of the Illinois college nine. The score was 17 to 9.

Illinois college got nine runs in the first inning off Tinker and six in the third while Herriot was on the mound Joe Meyers, who relieved Herriott, handled the rest of the assignment creditably, although he is a first baseman.

Monmouth got to Bramham for a run in the third, two in the fourth, five in the sixth and one in the ninth.

AURORA BEATS ST. BEDE, 6-2.

Aurora college defeated St. Bede at Aurora yesterday, 6 to 2. Stone, the winning pitcher, allowed only four hits.

Demaree, Ex-Cub, Hits Tenth Coast League Homer

Los Angeles, Cal., April 25.—[Special.] — Frank Demaree, outfielder whom the Chicago Cubs farmed to Los Angeles because he couldn't hit, today drove out his tenth home run of the Coast league season as the 1933 champion Angels defeated Sacramento, 6 to 0. He held the league batting lead with an average of .470, being at bat 83 times and registering 39 hits. He is tied for second place in stolen bases.

longs but he has demonstrated this spring that he can go a route.

Riskulus—One of those winter track bubbles which burst into a million pieces when he ran third in the Texas Derby last Saturday. More money has been wagered on him in the Derby future books than on any other eligible. He is a son of Stimulus-Risky and is a full brother to Risque, which raced to fame in the silks of Mrs. John Hertz. His best race was in the Agua Caliente handicap at a mile and a quarter. He was beaten a nose in the fast time of 2:03 3-5, but carried only a feather on his back. He is owned by Norman W. Church. This stable has furnished the major upsets in American racing for the last four years. That might be something to remember.

Roustabout.—Probably will be a running mate of Jabot in the C. V. Whitney silks. Ran his greatest race last year in the Belmont Futurity, when he was beaten a length and a half for the $90,000 prize. Singing Wood and Sir Thomas were past the winning post ahead of him. He won a stake race in the mud at Saratoga and that was about the extent of his 2 year old achievements. He is a son of Chickle-Traffic, the latter a daughter of Broomstick. These bloodlines are outstanding in most of the famous Whitney horses.

Sergt. Byrne.—This fellow is ready to quit New York and start the long trip to Kentucky for the Derby. We fear this son of Stimulus-Heloise is nothing more than a sprinter. He has never been asked to go over 6 furlongs. He won his only start this year handily, but that was at the sprint route of three-quarters of a mile. Last year he was somewhat of an "iron" 2 year old, starting 18 times and winning six races. He was good in May and was in top condition from then until November.

Spy Hill.—Strictly a Britisher. Will sport the silks of Mrs. Helen Hay Whitney and may do a real job of it. He was bred in England and is a son of Spion Kop-Marvella and is a grandson of the spectacular Gainsborough. Jocky Silvio Coucci had to give him numerous healthy kicks in the ribs to make him win the first race he started in this year at Jamaica. He is a big, long striding fellow and runs fast when the stretch run starts. Bazar, Discovery, Sergt. Byrne, Count Rae, and a lot of other horses finished in front of him during his 2 year old campaign.

Soon Over.—Comes up from the winter tracks. We don't take much stock in winter track 3 year olds when it comes to compete in a Kentucky Derby. He was fourth in the Florida Derby and won in Maryland after returning from the south. The Maryland victory was a fine effort, yet this was a sprint affair. He comes from a distance running English family, the sire being Buchin and the mother Fleeting Dawn, a daughter of Hurry On. He is in grand shape for the Derby.

[Editor's Note—The third article in this series, which will tell about the red hot choices in this year's Derby, will appear tomorrow.]

MATE RUNS 3D IN 2D ENGLISH TURF VENTURE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

EPSOM DOWNS, England, April 25.—A. C. Bostwick's Mate finished third today in the 81st renewal of the City and Suburban stakes, one of the fixtures on the English spring turf schedule. It was Mate's second race of the season, the American owned horse having finished out of the money in the Newbury spring cup.

The race was won by Light Sussex, which carried only 113 pounds. Play On, owned by M. I. Simon, was second. Light Sussex was at 100 to 7 in the betting and finished two lengths in front of Play On. Mate carried 130 pounds. He was ridden by an English jocky, Freddy Fox, and was at 33 to 1.

Sprinters Show Speed in Drill for Inaugural.

Horses that are training for the $1,200 Fox Valley Inaugural handicap at six furlongs which will be the feature race on opening day at the Aurora track Tuesday, have been turning in fast time this week.

The early arrivals among the candidates for the $10,000 added Illinois Derby—which ends the meeting on May 23—likewise are working well, although because they are being trained to go over a mile and a furlong they are not yet being asked for as much speed as the sprinters intended for the Inaugural handicap.

One of those which may start in both races—Joe Cattarinich's Pharatime—demonstrated his fitness yesterday with a half mile in :47 3-5, after he had gone a quarter in :23 2-5. Loggia, another Derby candidate from the Cattarinich barn, breezed an easy five furlongs in the company of Anne L. in 1:04 3-5.

The Track Must Be Fast.

A further indication of the added speed which improvements have built into the racing strip between seasons is found in the excellent time platers have been showing. Light Mint yesterday did three-quarters in 1:14 3-5. Tadcaster, strictly a mudder, breezed five furlongs in 1:03 1-5. Ted Clark has seven furlongs in 1:30 2-5 to his credit. Auto Cautery, long away from the races, went five furlongs in 1:02 yesterday. Penurious stepped five-eighths in 1:02 2-5. Barashkova made a handy half in :48 3-5.

If the Inaugural handicap bill has a fast track, War Saint's record of 1:11 2-5 for the distance at Aurora probably will be bettered.

Nominations for the Inaugural handicap close on Saturday, and Racing Secretary Dick Leigh will assign the weights Monday. There are 22 sprinters ready to race.

Track Is Open to Visitors.

President Robert S. Eddy yesterday issued an invitation to the public to visit the course Sunday afternoon.

Transportation facilities have improved for the 20 day meeting. Besides being accessible from all parts of Chicago and northern Illinois by motor, there will be buses at 12:15 and 12:30 daily from Sunnyside avenue and Sheridan road, and from Madison street and Crawford avenue.

Special Burlington trains will leave the Union depot at 12:40 and 1:00 daily. The early train stops at Western and Cicero avenues. Special trains also will leave the Wells street station of the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin Electric Lines at 11:05, 12:05, 12:50, 1:05, and 2:05, daylight saving time, each racing day.

MATA HARI AND PEACE CHANCE RUN FAST TESTS

Louisville, Ky., April 25.—[Special.]—Mata Hari, owned by Charles T. Fisher and J. E. Widener's Peace Chance turned in the best workouts today as candidates continued preparations for the 60th annual Kentucky Derby which will be run at Churchill Downs May 5. The Downs meeting will open Saturday.

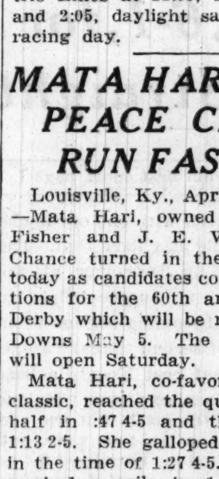
Mata Hari, co-favorite to win the classic, reached the quarter in :23 3-5; half in :47 4-5 and third quarter in 1:13 2-5. She galloped another eighth in the time of 1:27 4-5. Peace Chance worked a mile in 1:39 4-5 and was caught at the quarters in :24 1-5, :47 3-5 and 1:13 1-5.

MARQUETTE TO MEET INDIANA IN TRACK MAY 5

Milwaukee, Wis., April 25.—[Special.]—Marquette university will establish track relations with Indiana university on May 5, when Coach Conrad M. Jennings will take his squad to Bloomington, Ind., for a dual meet.

Although triumphant over Wisconsin, Marquette will face different propositions when they meet such athletes as Ivan Fuqua and Charles Hornbostel, Olympic performers, Steve Divich and Duke Dobbs.

Marquette again will rely upon Capt. Ralph Metcalfe for heavy scoring in the sprints and for scattering points from other athletes.



CHUCK TANIS, professional of the Olympia Fields C. C., says:
"Have you noticed how many of the boys who hit them long and straight play Kroydons? There's a reason."

The new Kroydons are fitted with the Hy-Power Flexographed Shaft, which puts a whip-lash action into your drive. This shaft comes in three degrees of flexibility to suit your swing. If you're a long driver, use the stiff-flex. An average driver, the semi-flex. If you swing easy, and are short, the ful-flex will work marvels for your game.

● If your apartment always seems to have that topsy-turvy, hour-after-breakfast appearance, no matter how hard you try to make it look attractive, why not look for one that lends itself to your ideas of what a well-appointed apartment should be. Read the apartments-to-rent want ads in the Tribune.

● Variety is more than the spice of life to the apartment hunter. It is her salvation! The greater the number and the wider the variety of apartments she can inspect, the more likely she is to find the one apartment that suits her best. That is one of the reasons why most women prefer to look for apartments in the Tribune want ad section.

● Share in this secret, you weary of foot, who have tramped the highways and byways for miles at a time, and climbed mountainous stairs in search of an apartment! SEEDING OF CITY RELIEF GARDENS TO BEGIN TODAY

750 Acres Set Aside for 6,000 Families.

The seeding of prepared garden plots on 750 acres of land adjacent to the city for use by families on relief rolls begins today, it was announced yesterday by Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission.

This land has been divided into plots 50 by 100 feet on which 6,000 families will raise their own vegetables this summer. Workers on the relief rolls hove been in three shifts through 24 hours a day plowing, harrowing and fertilizing the plots.

More than 1,000 applications for gardens have reached city relief offices. The assignment of families is expected to begin next week. Half of each plot will be seeded before the actual gardening is begun and each family will plant the second half. Twenty-one varieties of vegetables will be grown.

The families will be expected to work at least one day a week and will be responsible for care of the gardens during the growing and harvesting season. Car fare to and from the gardens will be provided. Families are to be assigned plots nearest the section in which they live.

Last year's relief garden plots in Cook county covered 400 acres, cost $31,000 and yielded $57,943 worth of vegetables at wholesale prices, according to the relief commissioner's figures.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: A Tough Spot

AUTO IS FORCED OVER CURB; KILLS 10 YEAR OLD BOY

Frank Eodlowski, 10 years old, 3147 Augusta boulevard, was fatally injured last night by an automobile which was driven over the curb in Humboldt park near Augusta boulevard and Kedzie avenue. The boy died in the Lutheran Memorial hospital.

The driver of the car, James L. Vellintine, 46 years old, 127 East Walnut street, Hinsdale, an insurance salesman, was held by the West North avenue police pending an inquest. He said he was forced off the street in avoiding a collision with another automobile.

This death and one other raised the Cook county motor toll for this year to 372. The other victim was:

Charles S. Svarney, 21 years old, 6045 South Kilbourn avenue. Died at the Holy Cross hospital of injures received Tuesday night when he lost control of his motorcycle and was thrown to the pavement at 60th street and Crawford avenue.

Mark Mitchell, 34 years old, of Atlanta, Ga., died in the Victory Memorial hospital in Waukegan yesterday of injuries incurred Tuesday night when his automobile plunged through a fence and down a 20 foot embankment at the end of Western avenue at Greenwood avenue in Waukegan. EDITH M'CORMICK ESTATE FEES OF $70,000 ALLOWED Fees totaling $70,000 for attorneys and the executor of the Edith Rockefeller McCormick estate were allowed in an order signed yesterday by Probate Judge John F. O'Connell.

The Chicago Title and Trust company, as executor, was allowed $30,000; the law firm of Cutting, Moore & Sidley, attorneys for the executor, was allowed $25,000, already having been given $5,000, and Attorney Mathias Concannon was allowed $15,000.

The trust company petition revealed that as a result of the auctions of the McCormick household furnishings in Chicago, New York, and Lake Forest the estate now has $360,000 in cash on hand. There is also personal property valued at $730,000.

Claims now outstanding, according to the executor, include $52,000 in 1931 income tax; $50,000 in 1932 income tax; $9,248 for funeral expenses, and a total of $18,987 in third class claims. A claim has also been filed by Cook county for $26,905 in personal property taxes for 1931.

PROF. PAGE DIES IN POVERTY; ONCE NOBEL CANDIDATE

Prof. Calvin Samuel Page, proponent of a radical theory of physics which once caused him to be nominated as a canditate for the Nobel prize in science, died in poverty early Monday in Oak Forest infirmary, it was learned yesterday. He was 79 years old.

CALVIN S. PAGE.

Prof. Page received his degrees from the University of Illinois, and taught mathematics in several Iowa colleges. He retired 20 years ago to devote his time to work on his new theory. He lived and had a small laboratory and study on the near north side.

His theory of physics, in which he opposed the Einstein theory, was based upon what he called the atom RX, which he termed a universal repellant force. By its actions he arrived at his own explanation of gravity, electricity and light. In 1924 the Swedish Royal Academy of Science suggested his book on the subject be studied by its committee of Nobel prize judges.

Friends are arranging for the burial of Prof. Page. Services will be held in the chapel at 935 Diversey parkway, probably Saturday, and burial will be in Champaign, Ill., his boyhood home.

MRS. A. M. DAY'S ESTATE $154,916, APPRAISAL SHOWS

County Judge Perry L. Persons in the Lake county court at Waukegan yesterday approved a report showing that the estate of Mrs. Fannie Pynchon Day was $154,916 and that state inheritance taxes of $604 are due on it.

Mrs. Day, wife of the late Albert M. Day, former president of the Chicago stock exchange, died in 1926 in Pasadena, Cal. Her husband died on May 12, 1933, in his Lake Forest home.

The trustee of Mrs. Day's estate, the Continental Illinois National bank, submitted a report to the court estimating the estate at $139,916. Assistant Attorney General Charles Noll was dissatisfied with this figure and had the court appoint a neutral appraiser, Robert T. Wright, of Lake Bluff. Mr. Wright's appraisal received the court's approval.

PLEADS GUILTY TO SHIELD BROTHER; BOTH CONVICTED

Joseph Wagner's attempt to shoulder the blame for the robbery of the Ritter, Inc., Furniture store, 1651 West Chicago avenue, and thereby win freedom for his younger brother, failed yesterday in the courtroom of Judge Walter P. Steffen.

Joseph, 38 years old, and David, 33 years old, were charged with stealing $249 and a radio valued at $20. The trial had been under way for only a short time when Joseph suddenly addressed the judge.

"I wish to plead guilty, your honor," he said. "I ask that my brother be allowed to go free. He is innocent."

His plea was accepted, but the trial of David continued, and in a short time a jury found David guilty. Judge Steffen deferred passing sentence until Monday morning.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—The listed bond market showed considerable irregularity today with domestic corporation bonds, except the rails, tending slightly downward and United States government bonds generally lower, off 2/32ds to up 3/32ds point.

Weaknesses in issues of the Japanese group provided a feature of an otherwise dull foreign list. Total transactions on the stock exchange were $15,053,000, compared with $18,055,000 on the previous day.

Japanese Issues Heavy.

The conflict of occidental with Japanese interests regarding the latter's policy toward China depressed Japanese government 6½s and 5½s 2½ and 2 points, respectively. Japanese municipal and corporation bonds closed down fractionally to 2¾ points. Until this week Japanese bonds had been advancing steadily.

In the French group, Nord Railways 6½s, due 1950, jumped more than six points to a new peak for the year at 161½, closing at 161. French government 7½s lost 1½ points, while the 7s gained half a point. German loans were irregular. Argentine government issues showed about the best strength in the South American group.

Many Rails Hit New Highs.

Of the domestic corporation issues a number of rail bonds climbed fractionally to a point or two to new highs for the year. The more actively traded issues, as a rule, showed the smallest net changes in prices. Utilities and industrials averaged slightly lower.

By far the most active issue of the United States treasury list was the new 3¼s, due 1946, callable 1944. A single block of these bonds totaling $1,495,000 appeared on the ticker at a price of 101 30/32ds. The close was 101 31/32ds, up 3/32ds point net. The high since issuance was touched on the previous day, when the market crossed 102.

HOLC BONDS.

Bonds of the Home Owners' Loan corporation were quoted yesterday at 100⅝ bid, 100½ asked.

FARM MORTGAGE BONDS.

Equitable Life Insurance.

Investors' Guide: I am planning to take out retirement annuity with Equitable Life Insurance company of Iowa. Any information will be greatly appreciated.—D. W. E.

Answer: Equitable Life Insurance company of Iowa was formed in 1867. It is a stock company.

Despite a drop of about 5 per cent of insurance in force during 1933, admitted assets reached record levels. They totaled $132,001,000, against $130,000,000 the year before.

Real estate, which comprised 13.3 per cent of invested assets, totaled $15,972,000, about $5,200,000 more than the year before. For the full year, however, this account produced a net return of 4.2 per cent. Mortgage loans were $50,639,000, a decrease of $6,200,000 from Dec. 31, 1932. Bonds [book values] totaled $23,663,000. Some, municipals only, are in default. Net return on the small amount of defaulted bonds was more than 3 per cent and certain refunding propositions now in the process of completion indicate a higher rate of return in the near future. Cash was $2,538,000 and policy loans were $29,788,000.

Insurance in force was $569,465,000, against $609,010,000 the year before and $649,766,000 at the close of 1931.

Ratio of actual to expected mortality in 1933 was 44.4 per cent, against 45 per cent in 1932 and in 1931.

Income was $2,454,000 in excess of disbursements in 1933. In 1932 disbursements exceeded income by $383,000.

McQuay-Norris Manufacturing.

Investors' Guide: I would appreciate any information on McQuay-Norris Manufacturing company.—V. H. W.

Answer: This corporation was originally established in 1910. It manufactures piston rings, pistons, shackle bolts, and similar products, most of which are destined for the automobile trade. About 90 per cent of its business is for replacement purposes. Its main plant is in St. Louis.

Earnings during the last few years have held relatively steady. Net income in 1933 was $377,000, or $3.29 per share, against net of $349,000, or $3.08 per share, for 1932. Net income in 1931 was $473,000, against $470,000 in 1930 and $676,000 in 1929.

Capitalization consists solely of 114,349 shares of no par stock. The stock has paid dividends of 75 cents a quarter since 1931.

American National Bank Building Taking Bids.

BY AL CHASE.

Bids are being taken for installation of an air conditioning plant to supply the first floor of the 40 story American National Bank building, at the southeast corner of La Salle and Washington streets. J. F. Phillips, manager of the structure, announced yesterday Approximately $30,000 will be expended on the modernization.

A lease was signed yesterday for the first shop in the building. J. Don Kearins, florist, with a shop in the Board of Trade building, has leased the space at 27 North La Salle street for an undisclosed term and rental He will remodel extensively and will open a branch florist shop late in May It will have thirty-five feet of frontage on La Salle street. Cremin & O'Connor were brokers in the transaction.

One System Already In.

Another air conditioning system, independent of the one contemplated for the first floor shops, already is operating successfully on the bank floor, occupied by the American National Bank and Trust company, as well as on the entire third, fourth, fifth and sixth floors.

Another La Salle street lease recently closed is in the National Life building, 29 South La Salle street A. G. Spalding & Brothers, sporting goods, have rented space at No. 33 for eight years beginning May 1, and will operate a branch of their State street store.

Lease State Street Space.

The Newart Company, Inc., credit clothiers, have leased the entire third and fourth floors at the southwest corner of State and Quincy streets from the estate of Levy Mayer. The George S. Lurie company, agents for the Mayer estate, negotiated the lease

The twelve apartment building at the southeast corner of Rosemont avenue and Mozart street has been purchased by Anna Krieger from the National Credit association. The Long-Kogen Associates were brokers for the sellers and Angelo De Carlo of John J. Kern & Co., represented the buyer.

PEORIA LIFE CO. MUTUALIZATION BLOCKED AGAIN

Peoria, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Ernest Palmer, state director of insurance, was again successful in blocking an effort to mutualize the Peoria Life Insurance company, now in receivership, when Circuit Judge Henry Ingram granted a supersedeas staying the decree entered recently by Judge John Niehaus for mutualization of the company.

In granting the supersedeas Judge Ingram emphasized the fact that he was dealing solely with the right of appeal and not upon the merit of the decree.

Palmer's petition was presented by Assistant Attorney General David J. Kadyk, who asserted that the decree of Judge Niehaus provided for immediate turning over of the assets of the Peoria Life to the Peoria Mutual.

"It provides for other emergencies which will be put into operation immediately if a supersedeas is not granted," he declared. "Title to the assets will be turned over to a company that is not qualified and never will be qualified to do business."

G. Hall Roosevelt, newly elected president of the Peoria Mutual Life Insurance company, and his associates left the city early yesterday afternoon. It is believed they went to Chicago to confer with those interested with them in providing the $500,000 capital for the new company.

HIGHER PRICES FOR NEWSPRINT ARE PREDICTED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—News print prices will be higher by the beginning of next year and possibly sooner, in the opinion of Archibald R. Graustein, president of International Paper and Power company, who spoke at the annual meeting of stockholders in Boston today.

Mr. Graustein said that costs are rising and that no one can say how high they will go. The resumption of dividends by the company will depend on costs, selling prices and the volume of business, he said, adding that it would not be wise to consider dividends, even if there were sufficient earnings, with a $12,500,000 bank debt.

This represents a reduction in bank debt by $2,000,000 since the end of 1933. The company is now negotiating with three banks holding the debt, which is due Aug. 1, for an extension of the loan to May 1, 1935.

More J. L. Marks Creditors Listed; Means New Hearing

The inclusion of about 1,200 additional "unsecured creditors" in a modified composition, or settlement offer, presented yesterday by J. L. Marks & Co. before Federal Referee Edmund D. Adcock, will necessitate the filing of a petition for a new hearing of the case, the referee ruled. This means that the proceedings will have to be started practically at the beginning, with an opportunity again extended to creditors to examine the alleged bankrupt.

EGGS REACT AFTER SHARP GAIN AND CLOSE STEADY

Butter and egg futures were steady on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, butter being unchanged and eggs unchanged to ⅛ cent higher. October potatoes opened for the year at $1.50, closing at $1.55. May was bid up 5 points.

Eggs opened with a display of strength, moving up to 19 cents on light receipts, but the buying did not hold and selling gained near the close. Butter reports showed the four market surplus cut 189,000 pounds. The Land O' Lakes reported production 10 per cent less than last year.

LIQUIDATION DEPRESSES COTTON OVER $1 A BALE

Liquidation yesterday of a line estimated at 25,000 bales of July cotton in New York, combined with general selling by scattered longs, carried prices off over $1 per bale at the extreme. The May deliveries in New York and New Orleans dipped below the 11 cent level for the first time since Jan. 25.

Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down, as the break at the extreme showed a loss of around $2.50 per bale in two days. A sharp rally followed, but there was a return of pressure again toward the last with the finish at net losses of .14 to .21 cents in Chicago and .19 to .25 cents in other markets, the latter being equal to $1.25 per bale.

MORE SILVER HOLDERS LISTED BY TREASURY

Probe by Senate Is Suggested.

(List of holders on page 31.)

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—The question of a showdown was raised among senators today as a second list of silver holders and speculators was sent to the upper house by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in support of his charges that certain agitators for silver legislation were not without personal and selfish motives. Pro-silver senators declared the secretary had failed to prove his case.

SEN. W. H. KING.

Today's list which finished the alphabetical roster begun yesterday, did, however, contain the name of F. P. Keelon as holder of four long futures contracts, covering 100,000 ounces and of Francis P. Keelon of the same New York address as holder of 31 futures contracts, covering 775,000 ounces, and five short futures covering 125,000 ounces. Frank Keelon was announced last Monday night as one of the sponsors of the dinner given here to stir up enthusiasm for silver monetization.

Urges Investigation.

Agitation was begun for an investigation in accordance with the suggestion transmitted by Secretary Morgenthau who, in letters yesterday and today, reported that in some 100 cases the treasury investigators had found it impossible to obtain the desired information. He suggested that the senate take matters into its own hands and use its powers to bring out the information wanted.

A list of the recalcitrants will be sent to Chairman Fletcher of the senate banking and currency committee, Mr. Morgenthau promised.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] said it was clearly up to the senate to make an inquiry.

"Secretary Morgenthau's letter says in almost so many words that there are matters worth investigating behind the names of brokers and others already made public, and information which only the senate can bring out," he said. "It is our duty to accept the challenge."

Would Have Gold Quiz.

Senator Elmer Thomas [Dem., Okla.], one of the leading silver senators, said he would favor an investigation, but insisted that it include an inquiry into alleged cases of persons who shipped gold abroad in violation of the embargo, then brought it back following dollar devaluation.

Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah], and Alva B. Adams [Dem., Colo.], both silverites, were irate at what they said was Mr. Morgenthau's issue of allegations which he could not prove.

Senator Adams termed the secretary's recent statement an "unfair" attempt to scare the members of the pro-silver group. "The list affords no evidence that any active silver advocates were holders, hoarders, or speculators in silver," he said.

Today's list revealed the National City Bank of New York and its foreign branches as the largest holder of silver, with a total of 9,752,427,462 ounces of "spot" against which was balanced a short net futures interest of 8,600,000 ounces. The United States Smelting and Refining company was revealed as the holder of 5,198,072.04 ounces of "spot" with short futures covering 4,175,000 ounces.

Chicagoans Listed.

Among Chicago holders were listed W. P. Murphy, room 1422, 310 South Michigan, as holder of 99,250 ounces of "spot" silver, and W. P. Murphy, care of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, as holder of 2,107,762 ounces of "spot." The Michigan avenue address is that of the Union Metal Products company of which Murphy is listed as president.

Also among Chicagoans holding "spot" silver were May Wells Noyes, 50,136.96 ounces; Mary Wells, 324,482.54 ounces; Preston A. Wells, 175,168.20 ounces; John E. Wells, 50,174.76, and Thomas E. Wells, 99,319.45 ounces. All had the address of 33 South Clark street, the first three being listed as room 1541 at that address. This is the address of the T. E. Wells Real Estate company.

Silver Dips, but Recovers.

New York, April 25.—(AP)—After a further slump during early trading, silver futures met support and closed ¼ to ½ cent an ounce higher today. Spot metal was off 1¼ cents at 42½ cents an ounce, the lowest level since last December, partly reflecting adjustment to the precipitant break in futures the previous day. Turnover was unusually heavy at 10,325,000 ounces.

Further hints that the government contemplates a more searching inquiry into silver positions were given in letters sent by Ferdinand Pecora, counsel to the senate banking and currency committee, to a number of New York Stock exchange firms. The letters, received today, request information on spot silver positions and future long and short commitments as of Jan. 31. Similar letters had been sent previously to other brokerage firms, especially to those having membership in the commodity exchange.

Most of the large commercial bank holdings, it was explained, represented purchases of spot silver and sale of a future position at the same time, a process which enabled the banks to net about 2⅛ per cent interest on their money, which they regard as a desirable return at a time when the short term money market is surfeited with funds.

Reserve Board Worries Laid to Treasury

BY HOWARD WOOD.

An illustration of the manner in which governments get tangled up when they go in for planned economy is seen in the federal reserve board's demand that congress enact legislation giving the reserve board closer control of the excess reserves of commercial banks.

The reserve board in a statement Tuesday pointed to the tremendous reserves of member banks—now about one billion 500 million dollars in excess of minimum legal requirements.

These excess reserves, the board finds, could form the basis for a 20 billion dollar expansion in credit. Ordinary business, it continues, could not possibly absorb this great volume of additional credit and there is real danger that it might ooze into speculative channels and start a stock market boom.

In order that this may not happen the reserve board asks that congress pass a law providing a sliding scale of requirements for the reserves of member banks. At present any commercial or savings bank belonging to the federal reserve system must keep on deposit with its federal reserve bank an amount equal to 13 per cent of its demand deposits plus three per cent of its time deposits. Any reserves over that legal minimum are labeled "excess reserves." The board asks that a law be passed providing for raising the required minimum as velocity of bank deposits increase.

Analysis of the reserve board's own figures on member bank condition discloses that the administration at Washington is almost solely to blame for the great excess of bank reserves which the board views with so much alarm, and that there would be no need for congress to give the reserve board additional powers over banks if the treasury would stop cramming the banks with idle funds.

On April 18 member banks in the 91 principal cities alone had one billion, 237 million dollars of government deposits. It is safe to assume, therefore, that government deposits in all banks throughout the nation practically equal the one billion, 500 millions of excess reserves. The law makes no provision for banks carrying reserves against government deposits.

That means that the reserve board's boss, the secretary of the treasury, is the fellow who has brought about the flood of excess reserves that so worries the board and it also means that the secretary of the treasury could easily remedy the situation without additional legislation by ceasing to cram the commercial banks with idle treasury funds.

The Millers' National federation presents another instance of the burocratic contradictions of government. In its current bulletin the federation points out that while the department of agriculture and the AAA are urging wheat farmers to plant less wheat because of the shrinking of their markets the bureau of home economics is telling people to include less wheat in their diets.

"Two recent home economics bulletins recently issued stress diets in which the amount of wheat flour recommended is about 132 pounds annually per person," says the millers' bulletin. "One approved diet contains only 82 pounds of wheat flour.

"These figures compare with 170 pounds actually used last year by the average person [it was 216 pounds before the war], so that even if the 132 pound recommendation were followed it would decrease the use of wheat at the rate of about 105 million bushels per year.

"The Millers' National federation and National Food bureau are demanding of Secretary Wallace that these and other like bulletins now in preparation be suppressed, and that the dietary experts stop their propaganda against wheat products. We are likewise suggesting respectfully that the home economics people be informed of the policy of the government concerning wheat and to govern their activities accordingly."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—The dollar rose above par today as the recovery from its weakness of last week became more pronounced. It advanced to 59.11 cents, measured in terms of the French gold franc, as that currency dropped 3¼ points to 6.62¾ cents.

All other exchanges shared the weakness of the franc against the dollar. Sterling was down 1 cent at $5.14. The guilder dropped 29 points to 67.95 cents, the belga 11 points to 23.50 cents, and the Swiss franc 17 points to 32.52 cents.

Canadian dollars were nearly ¼ cent low at $1.00⅛. Marks lost 10 points at 39.40 cents and lire 3½ points at 8.54 cents.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported the receipt of $3,184,000 gold from England. Of this amount $965,000 was consigned to the Guaranty Trust company for account of clients, that institution announced.

Reynolds Metals Declares 25 Per Cent Stock Dividend

Reynolds Metals company has declared a dividend of 25 per cent in stock, payable June 1 to holdings of record May 15.

STEEL ACTIVITY CONTINUES RISE TO 56 PER CENT

Operations Gain 4 Points for Week.

Steelworks operations are decidedly on the upgrade, according to Iron Age. Output increased 4 points last week to 56 per cent of capacity on the basis of the influx of specifications against contracts placed prior to upward price revisions. In another week the rate may surpass that of 59 last July, the highest in 1933.

Local mills expanded their production 5 to 59, those at Pittsburgh 5 to 45. In every other producing center save Detroit, where the rate held steady, improvement was evident.

Some Booked to Capacity.

Some steelmakers are so heavily booked that they doubt whether they can complete deliveries by the end of this quarter, as the code stipulates. In order to minimize the pressure anticipated in June, many consumers are specifying for more steel than they currently need, and several mills are rolling material in advance of receiving actual shipping instructions.

Not only did steel buying receive a fillip from the announcements of price increases recently, but it was also prompted, to some extent, by the apprehension that transportation may be hampered by railroad labor troubles.

"The only developments out of step with the pronounced upward trend of business are a fresh outbreak of labor trouble in the automobile industry and further weakness in scrap prices," comments Iron Age.

Scrap Price Weakening.

Scrap, whose composite is now $12.42 per ton, has been weakening ever since the second week of March, when the composite, at $13, touched the highest point this year.

While the composites for finished steel and pig iron are both higher because of price increases announced early this month, they are still below those for 1929 and 1926, observes the Iron Age. The index for finished steel has risen from 2.028 cents to 2.222 cents a pound, a price which is $1.50 a ton below the average for 1929 and $3.74 a ton below that for 1926. The pig iron composite, which has increased from $16.90 to $17.57 a gross ton, is 86½ cents less than the average for 1929 and $2.85 less than that for 1926.

Structural steel awards last week amounted to 20,500 tons, against 13,650 in the preceding week. New projects, totaling 49,100 tons, were the largest since August. Iron Age predicts that shipments of pig iron in May and June will be the largest in two years.

Earnings Trend Upward.

Although a total loss of $36,033,120 was incurred in 1933, before dividends and bond interest, by 25 steel producers, representing 93 per cent of the steel ingot capacity in the country, the trend, nevertheless, was upward; that is, in all but one case, either losses were reduced or profits increased, reports the magazine, Steel.

In 1932 the comparable loss for the same companies was $116,887,789 and only two producers operated at a profit—the National Steel corporation and the Granite City Steel company. Last year the companies which earned a profit included not only these two, but five others—Inland Steel, Allegheny Steel, Gulf States Steel, Midvale company, and Ludlum Steel company.

Based on the capitalization of the 25 companies, the average loss for 1933 was 0.91 per cent, compared with 2.85 in 1932. Profits of 0.40 per cent were earned in 1931, 4.54 in 1930, and 9.88 in 1929.

STEWART-WARNER PROFIT IS $167,495 IN FIRST QUARTER

Enjoying sales far above those of a year ago, Stewart-Warner corporation and subsidiaries earned in the first quarter of this year a net income of $167,495, equivalent to 13 cents a share on the 1,246,847 shares of common stock outstanding, Joseph E. Otis Jr., president, announced yesterday. In the corresponding quarter of 1933, on the same basis of accounting, the corporation incurred a loss of $775,005.

Mr. Otis declared that the major part of the net income for last quarter was derived from activities in March. Sales for the quarter totaled $4,045,721, in comparison with $1,462,531 in the like period of 1933.

Two changes in the makeup of its executive committee were announced yesterday by the Texas corporation following the election of seven new directors at the annual meeting Tuesday. Warren G. Horton and W. G. Dunnington were appointed to the committee, succeeding T. J. Donoghue and Albert Rockwell, who retired from the board. Horton is a son of one of the founders of the original Texas company.

Railway Wage Fight Seems Nearer Peace

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—Possibility of a settlement of the railway wage controversy through direct negotiations by tomorrow night was indicated this evening when the joint conference of the managers' committee, headed by W. F. Thiehoff, and the Association of Railway Executives, headed by A. F. Whitney, adjourned until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

W. F. THIEHOFF.

After an all day conference the management committee and the chiefs of the twenty-one standard railway unions agreed to extend the "deadline" from midnight tonight until the same hour tomorrow.

Had this action not been taken today it would have meant a break in direct negotiations and the dispute would have passed under the railway labor act automatically. The United States board of mediation would then have used its offices to effect a settlement and the usual procedure of a proposal to arbitrate the dispute would have been followed.

Have Modified Plan.

The union chiefs rejected the compromise offer made to them by the managers last night, but they left the conference room with a modified proposal for consideration. They will give the employers their answer tomorrow.

Latest basis for a possible settlement was stated as follows:

The railways are to deduct 7½ per cent of basic wages instead of 10 per cent, from July 1, when the deduction arrangement expires, to Dec. 31. They are to deduct 5 per cent of basic wages from Jan. 1, 1935, to March 31, 1935. Beginning April 1 the employés are to receive full basic wages as existing prior to Feb. 1, 1932, when the deduction went into effect.

The railways have been seeking to maintain the full 10 per cent deduction from July 1 to the end of the year.

Two Offers Refused.

The unions had expressed a willingness to accept a 5 per cent reduction from July to January with restoration of full pay at the start of the year. This was turned down by the employers. The managers offered to restore 2½ per cent on July 1 and the remainder, or 7½ per cent, on March 1.

If the unions reply in the affirmative to the new proposal tomorrow, as seemed likely tonight, unless unforeseen obstacles intervene in the next sixteen hours, the employés will have won their struggle for restoration of the wage concession they made in February, 1932. That agreement was extended in January, 1933, and again extended in June, 1933.

LABOR BUREAU'S FOOD PRICE INDEX FALLS 0.6% IN TWO WEEKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—Retail food prices declined six-tenths of one per cent during the two week period ended April 10, Commissioner Lubin of the bureau of labor statistics of the labor department announced today. The index receded to 107.4 per cent of the 1913 average, as compared with 108 per cent on March 27 and 108.5 per cent on March 13.

"The decline in the combined index for the 51 cities covered by the bureau," Mr. Lubin stated, "is largely due to a decrease in prices of 13 of the 42 commodities in the retail price index. Fifteen articles in the index showed an increase and 14 registered no change in price.

"As compared with the index of 90.4 for the corresponding week of a year ago, when retail food prices reached the low point for 1933, present prices are up by nearly 19 per cent. They are approximately 3½ per cent above the level of April 15, 1932, when the index number registered 103.7. The current index is now at the level of the high point reached last year [Sept. 26, 1933]."

White Motor Gives Third 10 Pct. Raise to Workers

Cleveland, O., April 25.—(AP)—George W. Smith Jr., vice president of the White Motor company, today announced a voluntary 10 per cent wage increase, effective May 1, for 3,100 employés. This is the third general increase of 10 per cent granted employés of the concern since last Aug. 1. "This voluntary increase is the White Motor company's way of sharing with its employés the improvement in business that has developed this year," a White company official said.

Power Output Reaches Best Level of Year

Last week's gain of 30 million kilowatt hours over the preceding week raised national electric power production to the largest volume this year, exceeding even that for the period ended March 31, which was the greatest since December, 1931. In the Chicago district electric energy output persisted in its seasonal decline.

Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended April 21, according to the Edison Electric institute, amounted to 1,672,765,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,642,187,000 in the preceding week. The margin over the total of 1,431,095,000 kilowatt hours for the corresponding week of 1933 was 16.9 per cent, against 16.5 shown in the preceding week.

For the last six weeks output in the Chicago area has been slipping, though it has maintained a high margin over that in parallel periods last year. For the week ended April 21 output amounted to 95,701,000 kilowatt hours, or 9.9 per cent, in excess of the total of 87,054,000 in the like week of 1933. In the preceding week the margin was 10.4 per cent.

KILOWATT-HOUR OUTPUT.

Week ended.	1934.	1933.	Per cent Inc.
April 21	95,701,000	87,054,000	9.9
April 14	96,801,000	87,084,000	10.4

In the seven territorial divisions the gains over the same week in 1933 were: New England, 15.7 per cent; Pacific coast, 13.3; middle Atlantic states, 13.3; west central states, 11.2; southern states, 16.5; Rocky mountains, 20.4, and central industrial region, 22.4.

New Car, Store Sales, Rise in Chicago Area

High spots in the improved business picture in the Seventh federal district, revealed yesterday by the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago in its monthly report on business conditions, include a gain in retail sales of automobiles and a sharp increase in department store sales. The territory embraced in the bank's report includes large portions of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa.

Sales by department stores in March showed a 31 per cent increase over February—a gain which was greater than in the same month of any of the 10 preceding years and which compared with an expansion of only 18 per cent in the average for these years.

Retail sales of new automobiles in March were 63.6 per cent greater than in February and 50.6 per cent greater than in March, 1933.

Car Production Expands.

At the same time production of automobiles expanded sharply, the March aggregate of automobiles produced representing the heaviest monthly volume since April 1931, according to the bank. This increase resulted in output for the first quarter of the year being greater than any corresponding period since 1930.

Passenger automobiles produced in March totaled 278,135, which was 46 per cent higher than in February and 180 per cent greater than in March, 1933. For the first quarter of 1934 output totaled 584,420 cars compared with 298,886 in the same period of 1933, and 291,116 in 1932; 548,420 in 1931 and 841,514 in 1930.

There were 57,842 trucks produced in March—a gain of 28 per cent over February and of 219 per cent over last March. In the first quarter of 1934 truck output totaled 147,679. Substantial gains were shown over the corresponding periods of 1933, 1932 and 1931 while the decline from 1930 was only 5 per cent.

Chicago Upturn Lags.

Chicago department stores had the smallest sales increase in March over February of any of the large cities included in the report. The increase here was 22 per cent, while Milwaukee had an increase of 24 per cent, Detroit 42 per cent and Indianapolis 49 per cent. The gain for the smaller cities was 38 per cent.

For the first three months of 1934 the Chicago stores had a gain of 23.8 per cent in sales over the like period of 1933. The Detroit gain was 63.9 per cent, Indianapolis, 32.2 per cent; Milwaukee, 30 per cent and other cities, 45.5 per cent.

The retail shoe trade reported that March business was 74 per cent greater than in February against an increase of 43 per cent in the 1926-'33 average for the month. This was the largest gain of any year except March, 1929, when an increase of 102 per cent was shown. Sales for March were 55 per cent greater than in March, 1933, and sales for the first quarter of 1934 were 37 per cent above those in the corresponding 1933 period.

GENL. MOTORS QUARTER NET SOARS TO 63C

Profit Is 500% Over Same 1933 Period.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—Net earnings of the General Motors corporation applicable to the common stock for the quarter ended March 31, 1934, were equivalent to 63 cents a share on the average common shares outstanding during the quarter, according to the report issued today by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president. This compares with 11 cents a share in the first quarter of 1933.

The company did not announce the total amount of the first quarter earnings, but on a basis of the average number of common shares outstanding the approximate amount for the quarter was $27,117,624, after preferred dividends.

Working Capital Gains.

Cash, United States government and other marketable securities as of March 31, 1934, amounted to $153,623,975, compared with $177,303,966 Dec. 31, 1933, and $135,711,686 March 31, 1933. Net working capital amounted to $262,543,875 compared with $243,832,896 Dec. 31, 1933, and $217,468,700 March 31, 1933. The increase in net working capital during the quarter was more than accounted for by the increase in inventories, due to increased production schedules, so that cash and cash items showed a decrease during the period.

Net sales, excluding inter-divisional transactions, for the quarter amounted to $205,124,080, compared with $120,000,163 for the corresponding quarter of last year.

Dealer Deliveries Increase.

Dealers delivered to consumers 180,523 cars and trucks compared with 140,369 in the like period of 1933. Total sales to domestic and Canadian dealers and overseas shipments amounted to 316,604 cars and trucks compared with 199,749 in the corresponding period of 1933—an increase of 58.5 per cent.

"The quarter's operations were distinguished by subnormal shipments during January and February, resulting from delays in getting into quantity production," Mr. Sloan said. "Sales for March showed an important increase, and production was more in line with demand.

STOCK TRADING DWINDLES IN UNEVEN MARKET

Silver and Textile Issues Move Lower.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—There was little inspiration for either bull or bear in the day's market news and dealings on the New York Share exchange represented little more than the activity of professional speculators. The turnover dwindled to around 983,000 shares.

Price movements were mixed with a tendency toward lower levels in the earlier dealings, followed by a mild recovery movement in the late afternoon.

Two share goups were consistently weak—the silver and textile shares. Issues of the first named division were weighed down by further indications that the administration is unalterably opposed to currency inflation via the silver route—or any other route at this time.

Rayon Shares Lower.

The textiles rested their case against a cut in rayon prices. Industrial Rayon dropped about 3 points in the early trading but recovered a part of its loss before the close. In the white metals division U. S. Smelting was again under pressure, easing another 2½ points. American Smelting followed the leader down fractionally.

Oil stocks were rather soft, being influenced by uneasiness said to obtain in company circles over the labor agitation in the ranks of workers.

Dealings in a few inactive stocks again provided some diversion. The favorites of yesterday's demonstration in this quarter, Twin City, Philadel[illegible] Rapid Transit, and Market Street [illegible]e firm to fractionally higher.

[illegible]tilities were in an uncertain mood [illegible] to adverse guesses on the Consolidated Gas dividend due at tomorrow's board meeting.

Rails Issues Are Firm.

The rails held their ground on talk of a probable compromise over the labor dispute in the transportation field. Individual reports forecasting a better car loadings total on the week also bolstered the carriers against such selling as came their way.

Labor troubles in the motor industry neutralized whatever good effect the General Motors earnings report may have had on the motors. General Motors and Chrysler gave up about a point each. Auburn, a weak feature of the last week, on the other hand moved up fractionally.

The late afternoon rally in wheat was a stimulant to farm shares.

Food, chemical and specialty stocks swung with the majority. Mid-week industrial news continued cheerful on the statistical side, but a shade less so under the surface.

MORE TROUBLE LOOMS IN HOUSE FOR STOCK BILL

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—Trouble ahead in the house for the stock market control bill was sighted today, with announcement that a group headed by Representative Merritt [Rep., Conn.], would file a minority report. Word of this came shortly after the commerce committee without a dissenting vote ordered the revised Fletcher-Rayburn measure reported to the house where Chairman Rayburn [Dem., Tex.], hopes to bring it up for consideration Monday under procedure that will permit amendments to be offered from the floor.

Merritt said the basis of the minority report would be that the bill not only regulates stock exchanges but "will permit the federal trade commission to interfere with the business of corporations."

The house measure differs in many respects from the bill ordered reported by the senate banking committee. It would provide for a statutory margin requirement of 45 per cent, whereas the senate measure would leave the fixing of margins to the federal reserve board. The senate measure also would set up a separate commission of five to administer both the stock market regulation bill and the federal securities act of 1933, while the house bill would leave both to the federal trade commission, which would be increased from five to seven members.

ASKS $5,000,000 FOR LOSS OF HIS EXCHANGE SEAT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—A suit asking $5,000,000 damages for his alleged improper expulsion from membership in the New York Stock exchange was filed in the Supreme court today against Richard Whitney, president of the exchange, and the entire exchange membership by Joseph D. Frankel.

The plaintiff was expelled from the exchange on May 24 last after the governing committee had found him guilty of all charges made against him by committees which had investigated his brokerage transactions. Frankel had been a member of the exchange since November, 1916.

In his complaint Frankel charges that his expulsion was in the nature of a sop to a public indignation against stock exchanges aroused by the senate committee investigation. "It was decided that some persons would have to be punished to allay criticism in the public press," the complainant said.

MIDDLE WEST'S REORGANIZATION PLANS PUSHED

All Interests Not Agreed on Success.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Intensive efforts to bring out an early reorganization of the vast Middle West Utilities system are under way. Action on the plan is likely to be hastened by the decision of Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley on the validity of the equity receivership which is expected this week.

Negotiations among the various creditor groups have reached a state where a definite plan for lifting the receivership is about ready to be made public. Not all those close to the picture are agreed that the company can emerge from receivership, but the next few weeks are likely to tell whether a reorganization can be brought about or whether the system will follow the other Insull holding and investment companies into bankruptcy.

Big Banks Are Principals.

The principals discussing the reorganization program are the representative of the big New York and Chicago creditor banks which have a $25,000,000 stake in the parent company and the representatives of the holders of the company's outstanding $40,000,000 of debentures.

The largest bank creditor of Middle West is the Bankers Trust company of New York, which made loans aggregating $10,250,000. Robert N. Golding, counsel for the Dewey committee representing the company's debenture holders, was in New York yesterday conferring with bankers there on the reorganization plans. The note holders' attorney has also held frequent meetings in the last few weeks with officials of the First National and Continental Illinois National bank, the principal bank creditors here.

Stockholders Not Favored.

Terms have not been publicly discussed, but it is reliably reported that the best that the common stockholders can hope for under such a plan is the option to purchase securities in the reorganized enterprise. The position of the preferred stockholders is believed to be almost as unfavorable.

The parent company is now being sustained financially by a management service charge which is paid to it by subsidiaries. This charge amounts to about ¾ of one per cent of the gross of the subsidiaries. It is not believed, however, that the present method can be continued indefinitly. The dividend streams from subsidiaries to the parent company have long since dried up. The subsidiaries are paying the management charge where the public utility commissions have been shown that they were receiving real service or where the parent company was able to effect economies for the subsidiaries, offsetting payments made.

The deadline for the filing of claims against the Middle West Utilities company yesterday was extended to May 31 by Judge Lindley. The time for filing of claims was to have expired April 31, but the extension was granted on the motion of Charles A. McCulloch, receiver.

United Public Plan Approved.

A reorganization plan for the United Public Utilities company, unit of the Middle West Utilities company, which is in separate receivership, has been approved by committees representing the first lien bondholders and junior security holders, Herbert L. Nichols, reorganization manager, announced yesterday. Mr. Nichols, who is a member of the firm of Nichols, Terry & Dickinson, said that Judge Lindley had indicated that he will approve the program.

United Public Utilities is a direct subsidiary of United Public Service company. Under the terms of reorganization first lien bonds of United Public Utilities will be exchanged for 50 per cent in 25 year first lien bonds with the same collateral as security which is behind the present issue, plus 5 shares of cumulative first preferred stock.

Rates Remain at Same Level.

Bonds are 5½ and 6 per cent issues. The interest rate on the new bonds and the dividend rate on the new preferred stock would be the same as the bonds turned in.

In addition the bondholders would receive voting trust certificates representing 40 per cent of the new common stock equity. The stock would carry the entire voting power in the company and the trust would expire in five years. The remaining 60 per cent common stock would be distributed to the junior security holders and would get voting power when 50 per cent of the bonds had been retired.

SENATE APPROVES PLAN FOR RFC INDUSTRIAL LOANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—Authority for Reconstruction Finance corporation loans to industry and commerce to supply working capital, reduce and refinance existing indebtedness and make plant improvements and replacements was carried in a bill passed by the senate today just after Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader, announced that this measure would be added to the legislative program for this session.

This authorization was merely one portion of the bill which contained various amendments to the present law asked for by Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, and which also raised from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 the fund to be used for refinancing drainage, irrigation and levee districts.

A companion bill amending the RFC act, and designed to facilitate exchange of commodities between this country and other nations through establishment of United States government trading and banking corporations, was held up when it came up on the calendar. This bill will be pushed, however, Senator Robinson stated.

TRADE SLUMP OF SLIGHT EFFECT IN ARGENTINA

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

BUENOS AIRES, April 25.—[Special.]—The Argentine Republic has come out of its last "reluctant revolution," or election, which meant merely turning out of office an army of parasitic government employés and an old man who had not opened his mail in years, and has assumed a strong position in a world that is troubled with depression glooms, war alarms and trade wars. With a great wealth of alluvial soil, one of the greatest tillable areas in the world, stretching fanwise for hundreds of miles from Buenos Aires, capable of supporting a hundred million, producing the primary products of the temperate zone, they cannot fall far even in the catastrophe of world markets.

Economic depression has touched them but lightly. In this sixth city of the world, with 2,800,000 inhabitants, there are only a few thousand who are unemployed and in need of help. They have maintained their credit abroad and at home, have met the service on their public public debt as a nation, have reduced public expenditures and increased the public income.

Still Close to Earth.

Material prosperity rests on a broader base and has reached a higher level than in most European and North American cities. The explanation is that they do not have a great industrial population to support amid discordant conditions. They are still close to the earth and its products, their commerce and politics revolves around it, and their thought is oriented in soil and sun and rain. These are a fortunate people today.

They have built here a capital city which rivals Paris, Washington, and Chicago in many of its features.

There are streets like Washington, a banking center as solid at La Salle street, but not so high, and a dream of Paris in the languid air. There is a ruthless cutting through of a new subway, the third, under foot and a medley of chaotic bus, street car and jitney traffic.

Population Shifting.

There is a significant change in the proportions of those employed in agriculture and industry. During the last year the industrial percentage has gained, while the number of those engaged in agriculture has fallen. As in the United States there is a surplus of crops, and with export markets restricted here energy and capital has gone into manufacturing.

Behind high tariff and exchange walls, sugar refining, leather tanning, shoe making and paper making have already expanded, while progress has been made in the preparation of drugs, food canning, ice cream, cold drinks, clothing, matches, paint mixing, auto parts, textiles, bakelite and radio parts. The assembly of radio sets has become a thriving business, because every Argentine wants one in his home. Trade restrictions result in branch plants, assembly plants and imitation manufacture of every sort.

U. S. Investment Heavy.

United States investors have a stake of $850,000,000 in this country, invested in the stock and control of refrigerator plants, public utilities, subway and other industries. Chicago packers control the big meat processing plants and finance to some extent the cattle industry. Chilled beef, Argentine's greatest industry, is prepared for British ships, with cattle shipped in over British roads by American firms, who also control large retail outlets in London. The plants are capable of disposing of 25,000 oxen or 60,000 sheep a day.

No matter what happens the world will always need wheat, corn and meat. There is not much to worry about in the future of such a country.

WESTINGHOUSE ORDERS TOTAL 57% ABOVE 1933

New York, April 25.—(AP)—Orders received by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company during the first quarter totaled $20,237,588, an increase of 57 per cent over the $12,847,801 booked in the similar period last year. It was announced today. Orders received in March were the largest of any single month since September, 1931.

Sales billed for the quarter totaled $17,994,045 compared with $13,161,721 in the same quarter in 1933, and net loss from operations amounted to $1,776,152 constrasted with loss of $3,491,572 in the corresponding period a year ago.

A statement by the company said the recent upswing in business was encouraging, but that the future would be viewed more optimistically if the present restrictions on long time credit were removed.

LOREE'S SHARES IN K. C. SOUTHERN ENFRANCHISED

Kansas City, Mo., April 25.—(AP)—The New York brokerage firm of Paine, Webber & Co. today succeeded in enfranchising about one-fifth of the voting stock of the Kansas City Southern railway, the A. L. F. Loree interest.

Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis dismissed an appeal of the Kansas City Southern, which in effect gave the New York firm voting rights to 104,500 shares.

What effect the decision will have in relation to Loree remains to be seen at the meeting May 8 at which Kansas City Southern directors will be elected. Loree does not own a fifth of the stock, but has had sufficient aid from other stockholders in the past to hold control.

Mussolini Orders 3 Big Finance Units Liquidated

ROME, April 25.—(AP)—In furtherance of his plans to concentrate all industrial financing in the Government Institute for Reconstruction, Premier Mussolini tonight decreed the liquidation of three large industrial finance corporations. The Official Gazette stated the liquidations were ordered for "reasons of public interest." Total capitalization of the three is 770 million lire.

Dials Called Cause of Idleness.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Seizure by the government of all telephone companies and their inclusion in a "federal communications system" was openly advocated today by members of the NRA consumers' advisory board.

Regarded by many observers as a dangerous threat to freedom of speech, federal ownership or control of all communications was suggested at hearings on an NRA code for the telephone companies by Mercer G. Johnston, member of the consumers' advisory board. Mr. Johnston also decried high salaries paid to executives of existing telephone companies.

Asked to Halt Dials.

While the consumers' advisory board was demanding federal seizure of the phone systems, the NRA labor advisory board through Miss Julia O'Connor was calling for an immediate halt in the spread of dial phones. Miss O'Connor protested that the new dial systems are throwing thousands of employés out of work.

In the city of Boston alone, Miss O'Connor testified, the number of operators employed had been cut from 1,700 to 250 since the installation of dial phones. She said that the time had come when the problem of mechanizing the telephone industry must be considered from the workers' point of view.

Miss O'Connor proposed a study by the NRA of the effects produced on employment by the dial systems. Pending completion of this study, she said, telephone companies should be forced by the NRA code to stop further installation of dial mechanisms.

Deny Labor Suffers.

The telephone companies have continually denied that the dial systems have cut employment. Admitting that operators have been laid off, the companies have maintained that they are largely reabsorbed in other lines.

Beside the clash over dial systems, the last hearing on the telephone code was enlivened by new charges that the large telephone companies are forcing their employés into company unions.

Joseph Lynes of Chicago, an employé of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, appeared as a witness to deny these charges.

LOAN BILL FAILS TO CARRY CLAUSE BARRING POLITICS

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—Congress sent the bill guaranteeing home loan bonds to the White House today without the amendment which President Roosevelt had endorsed to outlaw politics in selecting Home Owners' Loan corporation employés.

An effort by Senator Norris [Rep., Neb.] to save the amendment lost by a vote of 40 to 30. All Republicans voted with him, but the Democrats with five exceptions solidly opposed him despite his warning that their action "comes mighty near condemning Roosevelt."

The veteran Nebraska senator stood in the center of the senate chamber and called the Democrats "job hunters" instead of "statesmen" and predicted that their decision might result in the defeat of the President for reëlection.

Bulkley [Dem., O.], in calling up the conference report, said the senators had yielded to the house on the Norris amendment, because the vote in the senate was close, while the ballot in the house against it had been at the ratio of two to one.

Telephone Business Shows Improvement in February

The telephone business showed an improvement in February, according to the interstate commerce commission which yesterday reported that 102 large telephone companies had gross revenues of $78,532,868 compared with $76,062,417 in the like month of 1933. Net operating income for the month was $15,799,402 compared with $13,100,350 last year. Gross for the first two months of 1934 totaled $160,096,209 compared with $155,791,372 in the like period of 1933. Net operating income was $32,514,815 compared with $27,124,170.

GRAINS ERASE EARLY LOSSES; CLOSE IS HIGHER

Rally Follows Reports of Widespread Drouth.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Heavy liquidation of grain futures early yesterday, which carried wheat nearly 2 cents lower and corn more than a cent under the previous close, was routed later by general commission house buying. Prices rallied sharply, completely erasing initial losses and ending the session with small net gains in the majority.

Drouth talk from the northwest of a most sensational character swelled to a veritable flood of bad reports before the close and started a buying movement which carried May wheat from a low of 73⅝ cents to 76 cents, where it closed. Net gains of ⅜ to ½ cent were recorded for the day.

Other grains followed wheat, corn closing unchanged to ¼ cent higher oats ⅛ cent higher to ⅛ cent lower, rye ⅛ to ⅜ cent higher, and barley ⅛ cent higher to ⅛ cent lower.

Drouth Covers Wide Area.

Drouth damage talk received considerable impetus from the government weekly summary, which said conditions in the western half of Kansas had become critical in some sections on account of the long continued shortage of soil moisture, although the eastern half of the state was still in good shape.

Reports to the Cargill Commission company of Minneapolis, one of the most conservative houses in the northwest, indicated one of the poorest moisture conditions in many years. Subsoil moisture was said to be below normal in practically all states and in many sections is absolutely exhausted.

Heavy buying of wheat futures at Minneapolis recently is attracting considerable attention. The Northwestern Miller's report said the break in prices last week brought the heaviest flour business in several months, which explained why mills bought futures on a large scale. A southwestern baker was said to have taken 50,000 barrels.

Corn Loans Retard Movement.

So far this month it is estimated the government has made loans on around 65,000,000 bushels of cash corn to Illinois farmers. It is estimated that before the end of the month the total may reach 70,000,000 bushels or more than 50 per cent of the April 1 farm reserves in the state. As a large part of the corn and oats belt is in the drouth area weather conditions also are becoming a factor in coarse grains.

Cash houses were heavy buyers of May corn and oats and sellers of July and September futures, narrowing the spread slightly between the May and the September in both grains. A cargo of 250,000 bushels of rye was bought at Duluth to come to Chicago for delivery on May contracts.

ALLEGED COFFEE CODE VIOLATION REPORTED TO NRA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—The compliance board of the NRA was reported today to be considering action against Standard Brands, Inc., because of alleged violations of the coffee code by Chase & Sanborn, a subsidiary of the corporation.

Officials of the recovery administration declined either to affirm or deny the report that the nationally known coffee company had been cited for penal action by the compliance board. A member of the coffee industry, however, admitted that the code authority for the industry had appealed to NRA headquarters here for action against Chase & Sanborn.

According to the reports, the complaint against the company charges that in reducing the price of its coffee 2 cents a pound Chase & Sanborn violated the so-called destructive price provisions of the coffee code. Destructive price cutting is not defined in the code.

CATTLE AND LAMB PRICES ADVANCE TO FRESH PEAKS

Cattle and lambs soared to new high levels yesterday, while hogs reacted to close slightly higher after a 5 to 10 cent rise at the opening. Beef steers are bringing the highest April prices in three years, and lambs are at the highest levels for this season in four years.

Top 1,268 pound beefs to the Hygrade Food Products corporation set up a new high of $8.55 yesterday. Swift paid $8.50 for cattle to be served at the opening of the World's Fair. At the high in April, 1933, top steers halted at $7.10, while two years ago the April top was $8.40. In view of the phenomenal price gains scored the last few weeks, and the fact that cattle are making more money for the farmer than they have for several seasons, there is unusual interest manifested in the meeting of representatives of the beef industry and the AAA scheduled for today at the Sherman hotel.

Feeding Profits Large.

Many cattle on the market yesterday selling at $6.50 to $8.25 cost as feeders from $3.50 to $4.00. A year ago beef steers averaging $4.95 in April were from feeding stock put in at costs of $4.60 to $5.05 the preceding fall.

Yesterday's rise was limited to the weighty steers. These gained mostly 15 to 25 cents, while light steers and yearlings were inclined to drag and some at the close indicated a lower tendency. Numerous loads of 1,262 to 1,515 pound steers sold at $8.25 to $8.50, while bulk of the steers sold at $5.35 to $8.00. Only occasional sales of yearlings were listed above $7.50, while practically nothing weighing under 1,000 pounds got above $7.00. Butcher stock ruled steady to weak except in heavy hefers, which held firm.

Lamb Top Reaches $10.20.

Advances of 10 to 20 cents carried wooled lambs to a top of $10.20, which was 5 cents above the previous high mark of the year and highest for April since 1930. At the high point of the April market last year top wooled lambs brought $6.15, while two years ago the high point of the month was $7.75. No springers were offered yesterday, but the trade is carrying a nominal quotation of $11.25 for selected natives. Wooled ewes cashed at $5.25, and shorn stock at $4.00.

Hogs started out 5 to 10 cents higher, influenced by the sharply higher cattle and lamb prices, but trading in swine turned sluggish toward the finish and early gains were mostly lost. Buyers balked at paying above $4 when top grades advanced 10 cents to $4.10 at the opening, and there was less eagerness for volume. The general average for the day at $3.90 showed a 5 cent gain. Both the top and average hog prices were equal to the highest point since April 13.

LARD EASY; WAREHOUSE INTERESTS PURCHASE MAY

Weakness in grain and cotton early had a depressing effect on lard futures yesterday and more than offset the effect of an advance in the price of hogs.

There was further spreading between the May and the distant futures, with warehouse interests taking the May, and selling September. A small rally from the inside figures came toward the last, with the close at net losses of 2½ to 10 cents.

Cash lard, regular, dropped 10 cents to $4.72½, while loose was 15 cents lower at $5.60 and leaf off 25 cents at $4.50. Bellies were slow and closed unchanged. Cash lots were 12½ cents lower at $7.75. Prices:

PACKERS FORM GROUP TO DEFEND SYSTEM OF DIRECT PURCHASES

Formation of an organization which will defend the system of direct local buying of live stock was announced yesterday by Oscar G. Mayer, Chicago and Madison, Wis., packer. The organization, known as the Association to Maintain Freedom in Live Stock Marketing, has offices in Des Moines, Ia., and here. Its manager is Knute Espe.

"For several years meat packers have keenly felt the need of an organization to be used in familiarizing the public with the true economics involved in the marketing phase of the live stock industry," Mr. Mayer said in explaining the purposes of the organization. "Through our association our member packing companies will coöperate in disseminating unbiased information concerning the marketing of meat producing animals. We shall defend direct marketing of live stock from unjust criticism and attack, but it is not the purpose of our organization to promote or favor any type of marketing at the expense of any other type."

CATTLEMEN MEET HERE TODAY ON OUTPUT CONTROL

Chester C. Davis, administrator of the agricultural adjustment act, and a staf of AAA authorities on the live stock industry are scheduled to confer today with four hundred representatives of national and local cattlemen's associations to determine a plan of action in the AAA's attempt to curtail production of beef. The meeting is to be held this morning at the Hotel Sherman.

Davis and two other AAA officials are to address the cattlemen in the forenoon. Later the meeting is to be an open discussion by the cattlemen in which the issues that have caused hundreds of meetings among stockmen in the past two weeks will be aired. The local meetings in the middle west have largely been expressions of protest against the imposing of a processing tax on beef, while those in the far west are favoring such a tax as a means of reimbursing the cattlemen for reducing their 1934-'35 production of beef.

HIDE FUTURES.

Hide futures declined 5 to 15 points in New York yesterday with sales of 400,000 pounds. Closing bids: Old contracts—June, 11c; September, 11.60c; December, 12c; March, 12.45c. Standard—September, 11.65c; December, 12.05c; March, 12.60c.

WOOL MARKETS

BOSTON, Mass., April 25.—Wool continued quiet today, with sluggish demand. Prices were irregular. Some sellers offered wool of the new clip for future shipment at prices a bit beneath the Boston market, the wool to be shipped direct to mills from concentration points in the west. But even this business lacked volume.

BEFORE BORROWING Get the Facts About HOUSEHOLD'S REDUCED RATE ON $300 LOANS
LOANS OF $30 TO $300 MADE.
We believe we do the largest business in the Chicago area because:
1. We offer good service at reasonable cost.
2. We only make loans that are helpful to the customer.
3. We give free, authentic information on managing one's incomes.
4. If desired we give free authentic information on buying economically.
HOW LOANS ARE MADE.
Household makes loans of $30 to $300 only to families, that is to husband and wife on their signatures. They can be repaid in monthly installments over 20 months or sooner. Loans are made on the basis of the information furnished by husband and wife. We do not question your employer, your neighbors, your relatives, or the people with whom you do business. All of our offices are equipped so that your business can be handled in a private room.
